ROOSEVELT'S TIME ALL FOR POLITICS; QUITS AS EDITOR

Resigns from The Outlook Staff to Labor for Progressive Platform of 1912.

IS OUT FOR STATE FUSION

Tells Dr. Abbott It Is His Duty to Fight Men Like Penrose, Barnes, and Murphy.

TO OPPOSE ADMINISTRATION

Conference with Mitchel Followed Luncheon at Which Mayor Got Democratic Views on Fusion.

Col. Roosevelt has resigned his place as contributing editor of The Outlook in order to devote all his time to politics. This announcement will be made in The Outlook's next issue together with the correspondence between Col. Roosevelt and Dr. Lyman Abbott.

Simultaneously with this news, comes the report from Oyster Bay that the Colonel is and has been actively engaged in laying plans for a fusion ticket in the State this Fall with an independent Democrat for Governor and representatives from the anti-Barnes Republicans and the Progressives.

Col. Roosevelt will now become a special contributor to The Outlook, which will announce on July 11 the publication of the first of a series of special articles from his pen, the first of which is entitled "The People and Judge-Made Laws."

Here are the letters of the Clonel and Dr. Abbott:

Has to Do Political Work.

Sagamore Hill, Oyster Bay,
June 29, 1914.

My dear Dr. Abbott:

I hope I need not tell you how very deeply I have appreciated my connection with The Outlook during the last five years. You may perhaps recall what I wrote at the outset of this connection in giving my opinion of The Outlook and the reasons why I was glad to be connected with it. My experience during these five years has justified every word I then wrote. It has been a help—indeed, I may say that it has been an inspiration—to be associated with you and my other colleagues in the work of The Outlook. If I had been able to be, as I expected to be, a man entirely removed from all participation in active politics, nothing would give me keener pleasure than to keep on in the future exactly as in the past.

But the developments of the last three or four years have rendered it imperative that I should take a more or less active part in trying to secure in the nation and in the several States the triumph of those principles embodied in the Progressive platform of 1912. Whatever I can do, for instance, to aid in the elimination of men like Mr. Penrose, Mr. Murphy, and Mr. Barnes from control of our political life, I must do. In addition, I now feel that I am in honor bound to stand in strong opposition to the Administration. I feel that as regards our international relations the policy of the present Administration has meant the abandonment of the interest and honor of America. Furthermore, I feel that within our own boundaries the course pursued by the Administration has meant the abandonment of every sane effort to secure the abatement of social and industrial evils. Its legislative and executive programme has brought about grave industrial depression and suffering to business man, farmer, and wage-worker alike, although perhaps most of all to the wage-worker.

Having to do this political work, it has become impossible for me to give the time necessary to carry out my duties as a member of the editorial staff of The Outlook. Accordingly, with the deepest regret I hereby resign from that position. I am most sincerely sorry to sunder my editorial connection with The Outlook. My personal connection with you and your colleagues will always remain one of close and intimate friendship. If you care to have me do so, I shall be glad to continue as a special contributor to The Outlook, giving you during the coming year a series of articles on social and industrial subjects of current interest. Faithfully yours,

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Dr. Lyman Abbott, Editor The Outlook, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

Dr. Abbott's Regrets.

287 Fourth Avenue, New York.
June 30, 1914.

My Dear Mr. Roosevelt: With undiminished affection for you, with undiminished loyalty to the principles for which you stand, I recognize with you the necessity for your action.

The Progressive Party is the organic representative in America of a great human movement. Throughout the world the people are demanding a more direct and controlling share in government and a better measure of social justice. With that demand The Outlook was in sympathy long before the Progressive Party was organized, and because of our sympathy you accepted our invitation when you retired from the Presidency. Your endeavor to bring the Republican Party into line with this movement succeeded despite the apparently successful opposition of those who control its political machinery. The election of 1912 proved that the rank and file of that party understood and believed in you. Of the Progressive Party into which they fol-

FIVE DIE IN SHAFT.

Crushed by Falling Rock in Trunk Sewer Excavation in Bayonne.

Thirteen men were working 242 feet under ground last night at the bottom of a seventeen-foot shaft sunk just outside the Jersey City line, 50 feet west of the Hudson County Boulevard and near the shore of Newark Bay. The shaft leads into the tunnel which the New York and New Jersey Construction Company is building in connection with the Passaic Valley Trunk Sewer. With the exception of about fifteen feet the shaft is through solid rock. It is shored up at the bottom to a height of a little less than thirty feet.

Without warning a section of rock about forty feet above the bottom suddenly split from the side of the wall. As it began to fall it broke into several pieces and the whole mass, weighing perhaps, about ten tons, fell among the laborers at the bottom of the shaft.

Five of them escaped injury, but eight others were buried amid the mass of broken stones. A call was quickly sent to the ground level, and Supt. Walter Steenberg and Night Supt. John D. Mundy came down in the bucket. They got men from other sections of the work and, assisted by the five who had escaped, started the rescue work.

Drs. Freundt and Cassidy, the company doctors, and Drs. Young and Guernsey of the Jersey City Hospital went down the shaft to treat the injured men. When the rescuers had removed the rock it was found that five men had been crushed to death instantly and three were seriously injured.

The latter were removed to the City Hospital. The five men who had escaped were prostrated after they had assisted in removing the second body from the débris, and had to be taken up in the bucket and revived.

Among the dead was Walter Greeves, the foreman of the gang. He lived at 219 Linden Avenue, Jersey City. Up to midnight the identity of the other four dead had not been straightened out. They were all thought to be Hungarians. The bodies were removed to the Bayonne Morgue.

Those who escaped gave their names as Philip McKeon, Michael Brown, Fred Becker, A. Sadler, and I. Mittelsach.

It was said that workmen were engaged in extending the shoring further up the sides of the shaft, though not at the time the accident occurred. This shaft is within the boundaries of Bayonne and not far from the banks of the Morris Canal.

The Passaic trunk sewer, when completed, will run between New York Bay and Newark Bay, and will drain a large area through the Passaic Valley. It is one of the most important pieces of construction work now going on in the State.

$100,000,000 KANSAS CROP.

Farmers There Will Realize This from Wheat, Says Darius Miller.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 3.—Kansas farmers will receive more than $100,000,000 for their wheat crop this season, insuring prosperity both for the residents and railroads of the State, according to Darius Miller, President of the Burlington Railway, after a two weeks' visit in the Southwest.

Mr. Miller admitted laughingly that the prospects in the Southwest were such as to jeopardize any prospects the Western railroads might have of obtaining a 10 per cent. increase in freight rates.

"I hope the revenue increases to such an extent that we won't even ask for it," he said. "I found the crops in Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas the best in the history of the country. There is no question but that the section will be extremely prosperous with the inflow of money which should start within the near future. And, remember, wheat is not the only crop in that section. Corn looks good all over the district. Taking it all in all, I am safe in asserting that the Western section of this country never had in prospect greater things. Farmers in Kansas are getting 70 cents for their wheat at country elevators, and the same is true of other States in that section."

Mr Miller did not find things quite so rosy in Colorado, where the strike of coal miners has caused severe depression.

TRY 6 TIMES TO DITCH FLIER

New Haven Officials Mystified by Persistent Effort to Wreck Train.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 3.—As a result of an attempt this morning to wreck the Federal Flier on the New Haven Railroad, the third attempt on that train within a month and the sixth attempt at a New Haven main line express in five weeks, State detectives and railroad policemen are patrolling the yards and the tracks day and night. The railroad officials are mystified by the series of occurrences, and are determined to put a stop to them. The work of the plotters is almost the same in all instances, ties being cut wedge-shaped and jammed into the frogs of the switches.

The attempted wreck in the Danbury yards this morning occurred a few minutes before the Federal Express, eastbound from Washington to Boston, passed that place. That the wreckers were acquainted with the movements of the railroad detectives was apparent, for they took the opportunity this morning to place a tie on the tracks at the Maple Avenue crossing after the detectives had left the city.

The locomotive of an extra freight train that preceded the express struck the obstruction a few hundred feet west of the station. The engine had dropped its train outside the city and was proceeding into the yard to take on water and receive orders when it struck the tie. Although it was moving slowly, the pilot was twisted and broken and ties were splintered for a distance of several hundred feet.

FIND THREE DEAD IN SWAMP.

Man Slays His Wife and Her Mother and Then Himself.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 3.—The bodies of L. F. Bennett, his seventeen-year-old wife, Flossie Bennett, and her mother, Mrs. Mattie Tolbert, were found in a swamp at East Point, a suburb of Atlanta, early today. The bodies of the women were covered with brush, while that of Bennett lay in the open a few yards away.

The police believe that Bennett killed his wife by strangling her two days ago, and that he lured her mother to the scene and shot her yesterday, afterward firing a charge of shot into the body of Mrs. Bennett. Then after covering their bodies with brush he fastened the gun to a stump, stood before it, and discharged it with a twig. The charge made a great wound in his chest.

FRENCH TAX HITS RICH AMERICANS

Vanderbilt, Stillman, Corey, and Others Must Pay 5 Per Cent. on 'All Foreign Investments.'

GREAT FLOOD OF PROTESTS

Unless the Law Is Amended It May Drive Many Americans Home.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 3.—The week ending tomorrow is likely never to be forgotten by Americans or other foreigners resident in France, for it marks the beginning of the operation of the law taxing foreign investments.

Probably for the first time in the history of the nation a law has become effective that invites all foreign residents save business concerns seriously to consider the idea of going home.

Americans are the hardest hit, inasmuch as more wealth is represented by them than by any two other countries. The consequence is that almost frantic appeals are being made to the Chamber of Commerce, the Consulate, and the embassy that something be done quickly to persuade the French Government to amend the act.

For, strange as it may seem, the law was never intended to strike anybody but the French, who have been investing abroad and not paying an income tax on the same investments at home. But the provision is sweeping. It requires that 5 per cent. be paid on all foreign investments by "all persons domiciled in France." From men like James Stillman, James Hazen Hyde, Alfred S. Heidelbach, Herman Harjes, and all who are construed to be domiciled here, also W. K. Vanderbilt, Frank Gould, Clarence Mackay, William E. Corey, and many other millionaires with huge racing stables or châteaux, if their property here be also construed to constitute a domicile, the law will demand a twentieth part of their annual American income from all investments.

The word "domicile" is the debatable point on which the Legal Committee of the Chamber of Commerce is cudgeling its brains day and night, aided by every American lawyer in Paris.

Already American banks here receiving investment coupons from America for their local customers have deducted 5 per cent. and handed it over to the French Treasury Department.

As a member of Morgan, Harjes & Co. expressed it:

"We have no option in the matter, as we are liable to a heavy fine if we do not obey the law."

If the banks collect 100,000 francs ($20,000) or over they are entitled to 1 per cent., but even this bonus does not repay the American banks for what they lose on their own property invested in the United States.

The first result since Wednesday, the date the law became operative, has been that hundreds of cablegrams have been sent to America ordering that payments be withheld or diverted to London. Most of the coupons already presented to American banks here have been refused and either indorsed back to an American bank or ordered sent to London, while before they were always cashed here and the money was allowed to circulate in France.

Even travelers come under the law if they have any money sent here through the banks. Five per cent. is deducted unless they have a certificate from their Consul that they are not domiciled in France.

Of course the American Consulate has no proper blank for the emergency. That Frenchmen are worried is already indicated by the talk of an amendment, but the only amendment thus far proposed strikes the Americans as absurd. It is that if an American is already paying a tax on property in America he can deduct it from the amount demanded here, and then pay the balance of the 5 per cent. to France.

THE TIMES correspondent's talks with American bankers and merchants here have all elicited the view that unless a change be effected shortly millions of dollars will be directed to other countries, the unanimous opinion being that the law will simply kill the goose laying the golden eggs.

Foreigners cannot escape payment on account of the penalties imposed on the banks. Also, if they fail to make a proper accounting of their total foreign investments heavy fines are imposed, with a year's imprisonment.

There is a general demand that a protest be made by the State Department. The feeling in high quarters is that Secretary Bryan is likely to pay no attention, inasmuch as he would prefer to have as many expatriates as possible come back home in order to expedite the work of the home tax collectors.

In addition, a new super-tax of 2 per cent. on all incomes, foreign and domestic, is likely to fall on everybody residing in France in the next few months. In the case of Americans, where it is considered impossible to get the exact amount of the home salaries and other incomes, the tax is to be levied on an amount seven times the residence rent paid here.

It has been asked by the American Chamber of Commerce: "What if the American's salary is not seven times his rent?" To which the French reply, with a shrug of the shoulders and a candid expression of unbelief, that every living American has much more annually than a paltry seven times his rent. But, not wishing to be inquisitorial to the strangers within their gates, they are perfectly willing not to press matters beyond that point.

INCOME FIGURES OF WHOLE COUNTRY

Second New York District, as Times Foretold, Pays Nearly One-fifth of Total.

BOSTON GIVES $3,500,000

Heavy Returns from Philadelphia Pittsburgh, and Chicago Shown in Treasury's Detailed Report.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The returns of collections of corporation and individual income taxes for the ten months of the fiscal year ended June 30 have been in part compiled. Secretary McAdoo today made public a statement of receipts from these sources. Of the total collections of corporation and individual income taxes in the United States, the Second Internal Revenue District of New York City, which includes the Wall Street or financial district, paid $13,839,098.43, or 19.1 per cent. of the entire amount paid by the whole country. The corporation income tax for the Second District was $5,889,028.41. The individual income tax amounted to $7,950,070.02.

Of the receipts from individual income taxes New York State paid $12,523,247, nearly half of the total $28,306,336 collected in the country at large. The State corporations paid about $10,000,000 of the total throughout the country of $43,079,819.44. In all New York State contributed about $23,000,000 of the total receipts from the country.

The First Illinois District, which embraces Chicago, received from corporation taxes $3,835,403 and in individual taxes, $1,915,149. The Third Massachusetts District, which embraces Boston, paid in corporation income taxes $1,933,559, and in individual income taxes $1,570,506. In the First District of Pennsylvania, which is Philadelphia, the receipts from corporations were $2,852,229 and $2,012,513 in individual income taxes. In the Twenty-third or Pittsburgh District the sum of $2,791,967 was received from corporations and $901,757 in individual income taxes.

*South Carolina District re-established Sept. 1, 1913, previously having been a part of the Fourth North Carolina District.

The official figures of receipts under the income tax law to and including June 30 show that THE NEW YORK TIMES estimate of the amount paid in the Second New York District, with the amount to be paid within the ten days of grace and after adjustment of disputed bills, would be about $15,000,000, was almost exactly correct.

The figures given by Secretary McAdoo give a total for the income tax, individual and corporation, as $13,839,098.43 for the Second District, or about one-fifth of the entire United States. The amount still to come in after June 30 during the ten days of grace allowed by the Treasury Department this year, was estimated by Mr. McAdoo at $3,500,000, of which one-fifth would be $700,000. Adding this to the sum received up to and including June 30 would make the total $14,539,098.43.

The figures given out in Washington are only for the month of June, in which the tax was payable, but some payments were made prior to June 1, as the bills were sent out in the latter part of May and some taxpayers remitted immediately. With these payments added, there is no question that the final clean-up will reach $15,000,000 and may slightly exceed it.

BRYAN REPUDIATES WILLIAMS'S TIRADE

Says Minister's Criticism of Powers in Albania Was Made on Own Responsibility.

PRINCESS QUITS DURAZZO

Departure with Her Children for Rumania Believed to Foreshadow Wied's Abdication.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Responsibility for Minister George Fred Williams's criticisms of the great powers for conditions in Albania was disclaimed by Secretary Bryan tonight in a formal statement issued at the State Department.

While Mr. Bryan says that Mr. Williams's report on his trip into the Balkans has not been received, his repudiation of its reported tenor makes it practically certain that as soon as the official copy of Mr. Williams's remarks is received his resignation as Minister to Greece and Montenegro will be accepted.

Mr. Williams's remarks, which were cabled in full to THE NEW YORK TIMES, and which he has since supplemented by further public utterances in the Athenian press, probably constituted the most extraordinary comment on friendly powers ever expressed by a man in diplomatic office. His denunciation seems to have occasioned more amusement than resentment, but his remarks were of a sort that could not be left unnoticed, and questions would certainly have come from Austria or Italy, if, indeed, such questions are not those referred to in Mr. Bryan's statement. This statement follows:

In reply to inquiries addressed to the Department of State as to what authority the American Minister at Athens had to make the remarks attributed to him in reference to conditions in Albania, the Secretary of State replied that Mr. Williams was only authorized by the department to visit Epirus and to report the result of his observations to the department.

The remarks which he is alleged to have made were given solely on his own responsibility and without any authority from the department. Mr. Williams's report on his visit has not been received.

Mr. Bryan last Sunday received from Mr. Williams a dispatch in reference to his visit to the Balkans, so it is assumed that the Secretary's statement that Mr. Williams's report has not come means the extended comment of Mr. Williams that was printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES. This afternoon Mr. Bryan said that he had nothing new about the incident, and he indicated that he had not heard of Mr. Williams's latest outbreak.

VIENNA, July 3.—Princess William of Wied, wife of the new ruler of Albania, left Durazzo, the capital of that country, with her children today in consequence of the critical situation there. She has gone to Bucharest, Rumania.

It is generally believed here that the departure of the Princess from Albania foreshadows the abdication of Prince William.

WOMAN STRANGLES BURGLAR

Chokes Him to Death After Aged Husband Knocks Him Down.

Special to The New York Times.

YORKVILLE, Ill., July 3.—Mrs. Joseph Grinwood, 55 years old, wife of a wealthy retired farmer, unarmed and clad only in her night clothes, choked a burglar to death in her home on a farm near here early this morning, after her husband, Joseph Grinwood, had fought a hard battle with the intruder. The burglar was armed with a heavy ice pick, and Grinwood, who is 60 years old, fought him with bare fists.

After a long battle Mr. Grinwood got the burglar down on the floor and choked him into submission. Then he called to his wife to come and hold the robber while he went for a rope to tie him. Mrs. Grinwood caught the man's throat in a vice-like grasp and held on. When Mr. Grinwood returned with the rope the burglar was lifeless. Mrs. Grinwood had strangled him to death.

The burglar apparently was about 35 years old, and had the receipt of a Chicago department store in the pocket of a new suit of clothes he was wearing. The receipt was made out to William Davis. Slips showing apparent profit of between $5,000 and $6,000 on the Board of Trade were also found in the man's pockets.

The theory of the police is that the clothing was stolen and that papers in the robber's clothing belonged to another man.

$10 LOAN YIELDS $30,000.

Widow Gets Small Fortune from Man She Aided 40 Years Ago.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., July 3.—Mrs. Mary E. Kampe, a widow living at 158 Johnston Street, today received from William J. Wygant, a lawyer, a check for $30,000, drawn to her order by John Patton. Mrs. Kampe said that forty years ago Patton had a quarrel with his father, who was a hotel keeper in Greenwich Street, New York, and the boy wanted to go West to grow up with the country. He borrowed $10 from Mrs. Kampe and told her he would pay $1,000 for every dollar of it if luck favored him.

A month ago Mrs. Kampe received her first letter from Patton asking the name of her attorney. He recalled the loan and his promise, and said he had prospered and was desirous of helping his friend in her old age.

Neither Mrs. Kampe nor Mr. Wygant would divulge Patton's place of residence.

BARONET DROWNED IN NIGHT FROLIC

Sir Denys Anson Dived Into the Thames, "Dared" by His Women Guests.

PREMIER'S SON IN PARTY

Attempted Secrecy Led to Sensational Stories Involving Persons Socially Prominent.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 3.—A sensation has been created in London society by the tragic outcome of a midnight river party arranged by Sir Denys Anson, the young baronet who a month ago succeeded to the title on the death of his uncle, Sir William Anson, a leading constitutional lawyer and Member of Parliament for Oxford.

Young Anson yesterday engaged a river steamboat to take himself and a party of friends up the river from Westminster, which they left at midnight. On the return journey from Kew, about 3 o'clock this morning, the host jumped or fell overboard and was drowned. A man named Mitchell, a member of the orchestra which was playing aboard the boat, jumped after Anson, and was also drowned.

Count Benckendorff, son of the Russian Ambassador to London, went overboard in a vain search for the two men. Every effort was made by the members of the party to keep the details secret, with the result that extraordinary stories were current, some of them intimating that the expedition was in the nature of a debauch.

The facts, according to the best evidence thus far obtainable, appear to be that Sir Denys, a high-spirited youth, full of pranks, wanted to dive into the river from the deck of the boat, and was prevented by the Captain. Chaffed by some of the women of the party, Anson went to another part of the boat, and before the engineer, who noticed his action, could prevent him dived into the water. He swam a few strokes, and suddenly seemed in difficulties. The bandsman, Mitchell, who was a good swimmer, went to the rescue, but apparently the current was running too strong for him.

One of the members of the party, the Hon. Jasper Ridley, brother of Viscount Ridley, is the brother-in-law of Count Benckendorff, who gallantly went into the water after the two men and swam about for some time without finding either. Other members of the party were Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Asquith, the son and daughter-in-law of the Premier; Edward Horner, Claude Russell, Mrs. Jasper Ridley, and A. D. Cooper, the son of Lady Agnes Cooper.

The Captain of the boat said that some of the women members of the party in the course of the trip walked around the "coverboard," a ledge less than a foot wide surrounding the vessel, which is big enough to carry nearly 300 persons.

The boat was chartered for the party by a well-known firm, which provided supper and supplied a band of six musicians.

Raymond Asquith, when asked how the tragedy happened, said:

"Really, I don't know. Anson was the sort of chap who did such things. I've known him to do all sorts of eccentric things."

"Was there any chaff going on to make him do it?"

"Oh, no; nothing of that sort at all. He was a chap who did such things—that's all—and I hope there will be no publicity given to any other rumors, which would give great pain and would not be true."

The Captain, on the other hand, says he heard some women daring Anson to swim ashore. A member of the crew also said that he noticed Anson being "chipped" by the women of the party. Anson, according to his account, swam about seventy-five yards toward shore, and then suddenly went under.

FORD PLANT ON FULL TIME.

13,000 Men Employed—Recent Laying Off Confined to Incapables.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, July 3.—The Ford Motor Company, which recently created a stir by laying off several thousand men, is now running full time, with 13,000 men employed, according to a statement made today by Supt. John R. Lee. By full time is meant a full day force, night shifts being regarded as overtime.

Mr. Lee also gave a new explanation of the laying off thirty days ago. He said it was simply a weeding out of the inefficient and indolent. Thousands of the men Mr. Ford hired last Winter, he added, proved to be incapable or too lazy, but received every opportunity to make good, being kept on the payrolls for months.

Mr. Lee also said that Mr. Ford has taken on thousands of men in an effort to provide work for the unemployed as part of his plan to aid workers.

"The majority we found had no value in our plant, and had no value to other employers," Mr. Lee said.

There is no direct connection between the resumption of full time and the invitation of President Wilson to Mr. Ford for a conference. But it is not doubted that Mr. Ford will be able to give the President much information concerning actual conditions of the labor market, especially the employment of foreign labor, as well as the business situation.

SEEKS KING GEORGE ARMED.

Woman Who Calls at Buckingham Palace Is Arrested.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 3.—A well-dressed woman called at one of the entrances of Buckingham Palace early this evening and insisted on seeing King George. Her manner was peculiar and her general behavior such that she was taken into custody and searched.

In her pockets were found two loaded revolvers. She was detained, pending inquiries.

The Queen was in the residence at the time, but the King had not returned from Shrewsbury.

IDEAL WEATHER TODAY.

Bright Sunshine and Warmer for Holiday, Forecaster Promises.

Forecaster Scarr, at the United States Weather Bureau, said yesterday that despite the cloudy sky overhead and the chilly atmosphere today would be an ideal Fourth of July with bright sunshine and warmer weather.

"The weather map," said the cheerful weather prophet, "indicates a clear sky with sunshine in the entire East and South, from the Mississippi River to the Atlantic coast."

MILITANTS BURN MANSION.

Many Art Treasures Destroyed on Late Lord Mayor of Belfast's Estate

BELFAST, Ireland, July 3.—An "arson squad" of militant suffragettes today set fire to and burned to the ground Ballymenoch, near Holywood, a great residential mansion containing many priceless art treasures, all of which were destroyed.

When the fire was discovered it was too late to save the mansion, which was the residence of the late Sir Daniel Dixon, who was Mayor and Lord Mayor of Belfast for many years, and who sat in Parliament for a short time as member for the City of Belfast.

The suffragettes left strewn about in the vicinity the customary evidences of their presence, but they themselves escaped.

MINER STABS BUTTE MAYOR.

Executive Shoots Him While on His Back—Neither Fatally Hurt.

BUTTE, July 3.—Eric Lantela, a Finnish miner, attacked Mayor Louis P. Duncan in his office late today, stabbing him three times. The Mayor defended himself while on his back, drawing his revolver and shooting Lantela through the abdomen. Both are expected to recover.

The Mayor had just told Lantela that he had no power to deport Frank Altonen of Neuguanee, Mich., correspondent of a Finnish newspaper at Hancock. Radicals among the Finnish miners who seceded with others from Miners' Union No. 1, on June 13, after failing to persuade Altomen that he ought to leave Butte, had appealed to the Mayor to deport him.

The paper, represented by Altonen, has championed the cause of the American Federation of Labor, the Western Federation of Miners and their affiliated bodies, which the Finnish miners have renounced.

AGED TENOR A BEGGAR.

Barberis, 89, Arrested, Says He Sang with Mme. Nordica.

A white-haired man was brought before Magistrate Ten Eyck in the Night Court last night, charged with begging in front of the Metropolitan Opera House by Detective Flood of the Central Office. When questioned by the Magistrate the man said he was Joan Barberis, 89 years old, of 510 East 150th Street. He told the court he had once been a well-known tenor, and had sung at the Metropolitan Opera House thirty-one years ago, fifteen years later having appeared with Mme. Nordica. He said he did not see why it was any harm for him to beg after his voice gave out and he could sing no more from his old patrons, whom he had often entertained. He was discharged.

Thirty-one years ago was the first season of the Metropolitan Opera House. The records do not show any singer of the name of Barberis to have been in the casts of this season.

FINED FOR FLAGLER CRASH.

Counsel for Injured Objected to Light Penalty Imposed on Chauffeur

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., July 3.—Frederick Zipf, the chauffeur of Port Chester, N. Y., who, three weeks ago ran his auto into the motor containing Mrs. J. H. Flagler, the Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, of New York, and Mr. Grant's sister, Mrs. Stone, was arraigned in the police court in Harrison, near here, tonight. Mrs. Flagler, Mr. Grant, and Mrs. Stone were not in court, as it was said they had not recovered from the injuries they suffered in the accident.

At the hearing two attorneys employed by Mrs. Flagler, Judge James R. Mead of Greenwich and Frederick W. Sherman of Rye, appeared to help the State in the prosecution. They were annoyed to find that Zipf was charged only with driving without a license and that he had been fined only $10. Their efforts to prove by Policeman McMahon that Zipf drove recklessly were unavailing, as the policeman said he didn't remember what had occurred.

SUES MRS. CRAIG BIDDLE.

Eccentric Philadelphia Lawyer Won't Disclose Cause of Action.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., July 3.—D. M. Stewart, a lawyer, of this city, has instituted a civil suit for damages against Mrs. Craig Biddle, also of this city and Newport. The cause for action is not disclosed, and Stewart refuses to furnish any information concerning the case.

Stewart is said to be very eccentric, and lives alone in a large house which he owns. Six months ago he was released from Kirkbride's Insane Asylum, it is said, and has incurred the ire of neighbors on frequent occasions since by his peculiar actions and by making bewailing sounds and other disturbances at night.

Mrs. Edward Rawlings, a sister of Stewart, thinks the suit a part of her brother's eccentricity.

"So far as I know he has no cause for any legal action against Mrs. Biddle," she says.

CONTRADICTIONS IN STORIES

Dr. Carman and His Sister-in-Law Describe the Crime—Adjournment to Monday.

Special to The New York Times.

FREEPORT, L. I., July 3.—The centre of every gaze in a crowd that packed the court room of Coroner Corodon Norton, who today held a four-hour inquest into the mysterious murder of Mrs. William D. Bailey in the office of Dr. Edwin Carman on Tuesday night, Mrs. Carman, the jealous wife of the physician, furnished a tense hour of rapid developments and startling contradictions.

Under searching examination she told minute details of incidents before and after the shooting and bared the secrets of her domestic life. Mrs. Carman at all times was dignified and self-controlled, and her soft voice and refined manner won deep sympathy of most of the strangers in the dingy room. Not once in the long cross-examination to which she was subjected, did the pitch or tone of her voice change. And as one dramatic contradiction of the story of other witnesses followed another, her quiet gray eyes looked straight and level into the eyes of District Attorney Lewis J. Smith, meeting his gaze with a steadiness that showed he had met his match, if not his superior.

The witness illustrated with vigorous gestures how she had rapped on the window—the same widow through which the murder shot was fired, she said—when one night she saw her husband kissing a woman who acted as nurse for him in his private office. A sharp and even more vigorous gesture showed how, immediately thereafter, she had hurried into the office and slapped the woman's face. She described in great detail, also, her negotiations for the dictograph, its installation, and her secret removal of it after the murder. All that had to do with her jealousy burst forth from her with almost eagerness, and the utterance seemed in each case to comfort her. Once the District Attorney asked her just how long ago she had ceased to suspect her husband.

"I never said that I lost my suspicion. I merely said that I heard reassuring words over the dictograph," she replied quickly, pressing her lips tightly together.

Mrs. Carman Hard Hit.

Only once in the long ordeal did she appear to weaken. The District Attorney asked:

"Did you never hear anything over the dictograph that disturbed the peace of your mind?"

Mrs. Carman hesitated a moment, then answered slowly:

"No, sir."

Her voice quivered and she seemed on the point of tears. Her gaze sank, and her fingers played nervously on the table in front of her. "I was always reassured by what I heard," she added.

The testimony of the husband and wife agreed in every detail regarding the jealous outbreak about the nurse, and in many other particulars. On other points, however, the testimony abounded in surprises and contradictions.

One of the most dramatic of these was furnished when, just before Mrs. Carman took the stand, she was pointed out as the "woman in white" by George Golder, a farmer of Baldwin, who had been waiting as a patient outside the private office when Mrs. Bailey had been killed. The "woman in white" he had seen swishing past the portieres of the waiting room and walking to and fro in the hall in the body of the house just before the shooting, and he had seen her again in the office immediately after the shot, when Mrs. Bailey lay dead on the floor.

According to the authorities who alone had had communion with her, Mrs. Carman had insisted that she never had seen Mrs. Bailey, "dead or alive." She and members of her family were quoted as positively denying that she went downstairs, either just before or after the shooting. It was said that she went upstairs immediately after dinner, undressed, and lay upon her bed; and that even after hearing the noise downstairs she merely started to go down, and then became excited and returned upstairs.

After Golder had met the implication of the family that he must have mistaken Mrs. Carman for her sister, by picking her out and pointing to her in full court where she stood beside her sister, Mrs. Carman herself admitted that she had gone down from her room once, immediately after the shooting, and that she had stood in the little waiting room just outside the office. Although the door to the office just in front of her was open, and she could hear Dr.

Carman and the others who ran in there after Mrs. Bailey was shot, she insisted that she had not tried to enter.

Overcame Her Curiosity.

When pressed for a reason why she had not yielded to natural curiosity to enter, she replied:

"I did not go in because he told me not to at the time we had that little fuss over the nurse."

"But that was when you had a fuss over a live woman, wasn't it?" asked District Attorney Smith. "He never told you not to look in when there was a dead person within, did he?"

Mrs. Carman admitted that she knew her husband's inhibition had been meant to apply against her making a scene, as in the earlier case, but she insisted that despite her curiosity she had obeyed his mandate literally and kept outside the door. She added that she did so because she knew her husband was safe—she could hear him moving about within.

Mrs. Carman's sister, Mrs. Ida Powell, testified that after running downstairs, she [Mrs. Powell] had rushed up to Mrs. Carman's room and found the doctor's wife seated on her bed, wearing outer garments—a skirt and shoes. Mrs. Carman testified that she had put on slippers and a kimono in addition to the nightdress she wore when the shooting occurred. Mrs. Powell could not recall having seen Mrs. Carman at any time that night in the hall. She said that unlike herself Mrs. Carman had not broken down or wept.

Mrs. Carman said that immediately after she returned upstairs she called in her little daughter and talked to her, and merely told the sister, in reply to the latter's suggestion, that perhaps it would be good to call their father, Platt Conklin, from the Freeport Club.

The inquest was adjourned by Coroner Norton at 6 o'clock until Monday morning. Meantime, it was said, no arrest was looked for, unless unexpected evidence was discovered in the interim.

When the inquest was called to order at 2 o'clock Coroner Norton was seated with a stenographer and Chief of Police Roland B. Lamb at the bar in the little courtroom, which was crowded with scores of newspaper reporters, photographers and witnesses. At the counsel table sat District Attorney Smith, Assistant District Attorney Charles R. Weeks, Sheriff Stephen P. Pettit, and George M. Levy, the friend and attorney of the Carman family. At the door, to make sure that not more than one reporter from each paper should enter, stood Policeman Dunbar, who barred interviews with the members of the Carman house earlier in the week. On the desk beside the Coroner lay the black handbag which Mrs. Bailey had carried. It was stained with blood. The atmosphere of the little dingy courtroom was close almost at the outset, as the only window was kept closed.

Dr. Carman was the first witness. He testified that he was 46 years old and had lived and practiced as a physician for twenty-five years in Freeport. He looked worn, and there were deep wrinkles below his othertime merry and mischievous gray eyes. He spoke with an accent that seemed Southern.

Mrs. Bailey's Visit.

Dr. Carman testified that Mrs. Bailey arrived at his office at about 7:45 o'clock on Tuesday night, when he was at dinner. He said he went into the office with her, consulted with her there, and gave her, as he recalled, two kinds of medicine, one kind being pink quinine of two grains. He identified an envelope containing them. She paid him, and wanted to know what time it was, so that she could get the trolley to Hempstead. After getting the medicine, he said, she arose, and he looked at his watch and told her she could catch the car if she walked fast. He was not sure if it was the 8 or 8:30 car he mentioned. He was walking beside her, he said, watch in hand, at her right side, and had his hand on the door knob when the window pane was shattered.

"I saw the glass and curtain shade moving," he testified, "and as I kept looking at it, inside the curtain I saw a pistol coming in. I think it was a nickel pistol. I saw only the back of two fingers clasping it. I could not see the knuckles nor whether there was a coat or dress sleeve. I think it was a white hand, and I think it was a left hand, because now that I look over it it seems that way. The hand and revolver were moving up and down trying to get in. It was against the shade, which was moved out. I saw no face or part of a person. I ducked behind the operating chair just as the shot rang out. As I turned to see how the patient was getting along I heard her cry: 'I'm shot!'

"'Pshaw! You're not shot!' I said. She did not reply. Blood came from her mouth, and I saw her tottering toward me. I caught her around the waist as she fell, and laid her gently on the floor at the south side of the room. I commenced to loosen her clothing to examine her heart. No, I did not look through the window, except at it, and I saw only the black surface."

Dr. Carman said the shot was either at 7:45 or 8:15 o'clock. He thought it must have been 8:15, because it was dark. He told of running into the waiting room just as two of the patients there, George Golder and Archie Post, with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Powell, ran into the office.

"Then I ran and called Dr. Runcie," Dr. Carman continued. "He came at once and said she was dead. I told him I knew it. We started to get the Coroner. I 'phoned to his house; they told me to call him at the Town Hall. I did and got him to come right down. Then I 'phoned for the police. Next I sent Post for Theodore Bedell, because Mrs. Bailey had told me that she first saw me at the Kimballs, and I recalled that Bedell took me to the Kimballs. Bedell wasn't at home when Post rode there on his wheel. So I went out and got him myself. He identified Mrs. Bailey. Then the Judge (Norton) 'phoned to the Kimballs and told them what had happened."

"Did anybody come into the office while the body was on the floor?"

"I think Mrs. Conklin came in and got fussed up and ran out."

"Did you see Mrs. Carman?"

"She wasn't in the office."

"Did you see her while the body was on the floor?" persisted Mr. Smith.

"I am not positive whether I saw her in the waiting room when I first ran out," replied the physician. "I'm positive she wasn't in my office. The first time I saw Mrs. Carman, if it was not in the doorway or in the waiting room, was when I went upstairs with Dr. Runcie and found her in her bedroom just across from Mrs. Powell's."

Dr. Carman said that at dinner some one—he couldn't recall who—got up and went to the door to let patients in. He, Mrs. Carman, Mr. and Mrs. Conklin, Mrs. Powell, and the child Elizabeth, were at the table. He did not know where Mrs. Carman was at the time Mrs. Bailey and he first entered the office, or who had admitted Mrs. Bailey. He knew Mrs. Carman was at the supper table when he first entered the office.

"Did you have any trouble recently with Mrs. Carman?"

"No, Sir. I didn't know the dictograph had been put into my office until Wednesday about 5 o'clock in the evening, when my wife told me she had had it installed."

"What did she say?"

Coroner Bars Questions.

"I don't remember exactly. Either then or the next day she told me she had taken it out and put it in the garret. She didn't say why. I didn't ask her."

"Didn't you make any comment about the dictograph whatever?"

"I don't remember anything I said about it."

Dr. Carman said he had never treated Mrs. Bailey before, as far as he knew, nor had he ever met her except—though he did not recall even that—at her cousin Kimball's. She might have called at the office on the night before, but he wasn't sure. If she had, he had told her to return the next night instead, as he was busy. Altogether, he said, Mrs. Bailey was in his office between eight and fifteen minutes on the night of the murder.

Mr. Levy wanted to ask Dr. Carman a question, but the District Attorney objected, and the Coroner sustained the objection, ruling that he would allow no one but the District Attorney to question the witnesses. Mr. Levy took exception to the ruling, after Norton had refused also to let him submit a question through the Coroner in writing.

"Such questions might confuse witnesses," said the Coroner.

Dr. Carman said he first learned of the dictograph from Mrs. Carman in her sister's room on Wednesday afternoon, when Mrs. Powell and Dr. Runcie were present. He did not know who first suggested to Mrs. Carman to tell him. Nor could he recall just what Mrs. Carman said or what comment if any he made thereupon; nor whether she told him when and why she had installed the dictograph.

"I knew why," he said. "She wanted to hear what was going on. She wanted to hear all there was."

"Had she ever shown any curiosity about what you said to your patients in a professional way?"

The first dramatic disclosure of the day followed.

"You want me to tell you just what happened?" asked the Doctor. "Some six or seven weeks ago she came to my window—the same window as the shooting occurred at—and rapped on it after dark. A patient was in the office with me at the time. Who? A nurse. No, she does not live in Freeport. She lived in Seaford, a Mrs. Variance."

"Were you attending her professionally?"

"No, Sir. Well, my wife next rapped on the office door. 'Doctor, let me in,' she said. I let her in. She came in very dignified. She said: 'A nice piece of business for a married man and a married woman to be taking money!'"

"Had you or the nurse been taking money?"

"Yes. This evening Mrs. Variance came to my office and wanted to pay me $25. I told her she only owed me $15, that she had paid me $10. She said 'I want to make a strange request of you. I'm going to pay you back $25 and I want you to lend me $50.' I replied that that was a queer arithmetic, her returning $25 and borrowing $50 for it. I made the usual excuses about being short myself. But she told me her boys were out of work and she needed the money. So I gave her three $5 bills.

"It was then that my wife rapped on the window," added Dr. Carman, rapping out three loud knocks. "The next I knew she came in and said what I have told you. My wife said Mrs. Variance kissed me on the forehead or cheek, but I don't remember anything about that. My wife demanded the money. Mrs. Variance asked me if she must give it up. I said: 'If she wants it, give it to her.' She did."

"Were any blows struck?" asked Mr. Smith.

"When she first came in and said it was a 'pretty piece of business' I think she slapped Mrs. Variance with the back ends of her fingers, like this," said Dr. Carman, illustrating a sharp snapping slap.

The witness said all this occurred around 8:30 o'clock. The peep window on that night, he said, was not curtained.

"No Quarrel Between Us."

"Was there any other time when Mrs. Carman interfered with your patients?"

"There was not. I told her if she ever came in there again it was all up between her and I. That's about all I told her. From that time till the shooting there has been no quarrel between us. We've been the best of friends. She was out almost every night with me, and there was no cross word said by either of us. I can't recall any unpleasant instance since the rapping at the window."

Dr. Carman in reply to a question said he had owned many firearms at one time, after his marriage, but several years ago had got rid of all except the small automatic pistol he gave the Coroner on the night after the shooting. He said as far as he could recall he never had a .38 calibre revolver—the murder bullet was of that calibre—but some years ago had a big bulldog revolver.

"On the night of the shooting, are you positive you saw Mrs. Carman immediately afterward?"

"Not positive," replied Dr. Carman. "But I was under the impression that as I went by the operating chair she was standing near the table and in front of the looking glass."

The physician denied that he had telephoned to any one at midnight on the night of the shooting. On the next day, he said, at the suggestion of a brother of Mrs. Kimball, who said he was a teacher, a professor, he went to Hempstead and the Kimballs' house to answer questions the family of the murdered woman wanted to put to him. It was "just a social call." He told Mrs. Kimball about the shooting, and she expressed regret that people had made intimations accusing him, and apologized because folks spoke hastily. He said he went also to the Bailey home, and told the family there that Coroner Norton had told him not to talk to outsiders about this, but that he would talk frankly with them as soon as this blew over. After the shooting, he said, he went upstairs with Dr. Runcie to calm the family. All were in the hall, and Mrs. Carman wore a kimono or wrap.

"Did you have any talk with Mrs. Carman at that time?"

"Nothing, only in a general way."

"Did you ask her anything about the shot."

"No. It was so loud any one could hear it."

Dr. Carman then was excused. He had been on the stand an hour.

Archie Post, a grocer's young clerk, who answered a few seconds after each question asked of him, was the next witness. He said he reached the doctor's office at 7:55 o'clock and was admitted by the doctor's little daughter into the waiting room. He knew Mrs. Carman and Mrs. Powell, having seen them repeatedly. He was the first patient in the waiting room, and saw in the next twenty minutes Golder and two young women come in, one by one, and without any one opening the door for them. He said he had seen Mrs. Powell on the front veranda and said good evening. He could not say how she was dressed, but she wore light clothing and eyeglasses. He couldn't be sure there was no one else on the verandah.

"Did you see any one pass through the hall while you were in the waiting room?"

"I heard the little girl run around inside the house and play on the piano. Then I heard a woman say, 'Don't practice now.' I do not know who said it. The voice seemed to come from the front porch. About eight or ten minutes later the shot was fired."

Post told of running out to the west yard just after the shot, and looking all around from the office door, but seeing no one. Then he returned to the waiting room, and saw the doctor and Golder in the office. The two women patients in the waiting room had disappeared. He said he heard no one going upstairs or downstairs, or to the kitchen before the shot.

Heard Footsteps in Hall.

"After the shot I saw a lady—I think it was Mrs. Powell—go into the doctor's office. I left just after to get Mr. Bedell. I did see Mrs. Conklin come into the waiting room, and walk through the office while I was there."

"Did you at any time see Mrs. Carman?"

"No."

Post said he would not be able to recognize Mrs. Carman's voice if he heard it, and that he did not know whose voice he heard from the front porch. He did not look through the portieres of the waiting room into the hall to see if any one passed there. The waiting room was dark.

"I did hear one person pass through the hall before the shot. There were footsteps on the other side of the portiere, going toward the kitchen. They were fast steps, but not a run. This was right after the woman had told the little girl to stop playing on the piano, and about five or ten minutes before the shooting. After the person reached the kitchen I heard her no more."

Post said that in the twenty-five minutes he was in the waiting room the door of the private office where Mrs. Bailey and the doctor were did not open or close once.

Golder, a red-haired farmer of diminutive stature and quick blue eyes, next took the stand. He was dusty of the soil and looked very grave. He said he reached the doctor's office at 7 o'clock, and that he looked at his watch to make sure. He saw two women on the veranda, he said, who were the wife and mother-in-law of Dr. Carman. He said he had met Mrs. Carman before—many times—but never had been introduced to her. He saw her often with the doctor, he said. One of the women spoke to him at 7 o'clock in the waiting room after she let him in. He thought it was Mrs. Carman. The room was too full, so he went outside and into a store of the village, returning, as his watch showed him, at 7:30 o'clock. He was sure he recognized the same two women on the front veranda.

"How was Mrs. Carman dressed?"

"In white clothes. I walked into the waiting room alone this time. Post and one young lady were there. Another lady came later. I was in the room about twenty minutes."

"Did you hear any one walking in the hall, outside the portiers of the waiting room?"

"I heard one person walk through the hall from the dining room to the kitchen—slow walk. The portieres were half way open and I could see, as I supposed, Mrs. Carman passing through to the kitchen about five minutes after I entered, and about five minutes before the shot she returned to the front of the house. I am sure it was the same lady I had seen before. I heard the noise of running water in the kitchen sink, and then she returned. That was the same woman I saw later in the doctor's office."

Golder said the voice that called to the girl to stop playing seemed to come from inside the house. He could not say whether from upstairs or down. About five minutes later the shot was fired.

"I run out into the side yard and looked all around, but could find no one. The doctor, when I ran back into the office, was calling 'Help!' and told me to go get Bedell. I first helped him straighten out on the floor the woman who had been shot. Then Post came in, and a little later a lady whom I took to be Mrs. Carman. There also came in an oldish lady and a negro woman, who stayed about a minute.

"Afterward I went out into the yard and looked at the window where the shot had been fired. The outer screen was propped away from the frame by a new shingle end about four inches long. I could put my head under it, it was held out so far. The shingle fell out when I touched the screen."

"Call Mrs. Powell and Mrs. Carman!" ordered Coroner Norton.

There was a tense silence throughout the stuffy courtroom.

"Woman in White" Identified.

Through the dense crowd of standees at the far end of the courtroom there entered two women. Both wore glasses, and both were very pale, and their lips were compressed. The first wore a white shirtwaist and dark skirt, and light hat. The second was dressed in a dark blue tailor-made suit, with a black hat and only a relieving touch of white at the collar where her shirtwaist showed. Both walked slowly in front of the audience and took their places before the bar, looking nervously to each side.

"Mr. Golder," said Coroner Norton in a loud clear voice, "which one of these two women was it you saw?"

There was a breathless silence, as the crowd leaned forward to catch the words that should identify the mysterious "woman in white." The woman in the white shirtwaist looked ashen pale.

Golder looked at the two a moment then pointed his finger firmly at the dark-clad woman with the black hat. She was Mrs. Carman. She met the pointed finger without flinching in her gaze. The other woman, Mrs. Powell, trembled.

'Which was the woman you saw in the doctor's office?" continued the Coroner.

"That's the one," replied Golder, again pointing his finger at Mrs. Carman.

"That's all," said the Coroner.

Mrs. Carman walked out as she had entered, without a word. Faltering and more slowly, her sister started to follow her. Golder was then excused.

"Mrs. Powell!" called the Coroner.

Mrs. Powell stopped and returned to the bar. When she took the witness stand her face was waxen. She spoke in a voice so low she hardly could be heard. Asked to tell of her movements on the night of the shooting, after supper, she said:

"We had supper at 7 o'clock. I went upstairs immediately afterward, and stayed upstairs all evening. At no time did I come down before the shooting."

Mrs. Powell denied that she had opened the door for any one or ushered any one into the waitinf room. She said she had heard no shot fired. She was in her room on the east side of the second floor at the time, and she had not come down, gone to the kitchen, or turned on the water at any time.

"I heard the breaking of the glass in the office, but no shot," she said. "I rushed into the hall and asked what was the matter. I don't know of whom I asked it—no one in particular. Mother, who was in the room with me at the time, ran down with me. I saw people coming in the front hall—some women—I don't know how many; more than one, but I can't say if there were more than two. They were going toward the front door. As I couldn't get past them to the office. I went out the front door and walked around the west side of the house to the door leading into the waiting room, and then entered the office. Two men were coming out of it. I recognized Mr. Golder in the door, and asked what was the matter. The doctor said some one had been shot."

"Just what were his words?," asked Mr. Smith.

"I don't recall. I saw a woman lying on the floor, and I turned around and went right upstairs and got a handkerchief and came back."

"Where was Mrs. Carman then?"

"In her room."

"How do you know?"

"I heard her walking around," replied Mrs. Powell in a very low voice.

"Where was she before the shot?"

"In her room."

"How do you know?"

Saw Mrs. Carman Upstairs.

"I saw her come out of her door and open it as we first started downstairs," replied Mrs. Powell, still talking very softly and with difficulty.

"Do you know if she followed you downstairs?"

"I don't know. Mother did."

"Did you hear Mrs. Carman say anything?"

"I don't know."

"As a matter of fact," said Mr. Smith, "you didn't stop to see whether any one was upstairs when you first came down, did you?"

Mrs. Powell admitted that she did not.

"I heard some one take hold of the doorknob of Mrs. Carman's room," she said.

"And that was really all you heard?"

"Yes."

You didn't see any one come out?"

"No."

"When you returned upstairs, did you talk to anybody?"

"I got a handkerchief and ran right down."

"Was there any light on the stairs?"

"I don't know. There was none downstairs in the hall."

"Any light in Mrs. Carman's room?"

"I don't know."

"What did you think had happened?"

"Mr. Golder said a woman had been shot."

"Now, as a matter of fact, you heard that shot?"

"No sir. My hearing is not good."

"Yet you heard the glass crash?"

"Yes, sir."

"And still you heard no shot?"

"No."

Mrs. Powell said she did not see Mrs. Carman on the way upstairs after Dr. Carman told her of the shot. It had been said that Mrs. Carman met her relatives on the stairway and ran back into her room.

"I went right into Mrs. Carman's room," said the sister. "She was sitting on her couch, getting her dress on—I don't remember what she was putting on. She was partly dressed. I went straight to the 'phone and called my father from the club."

"Just what did your sister, Mrs. Carman, have on?" insisted the District Attorney.

"She had on some skirts and some outer garments," answered the witness very slowly, and almost inaudibly. "I don't know whether she was fastening her underwear or not."

"Anything else?"

"She had on her shoes," said the witness, in evident distress. "I don't know if they were high or low shoes."

"What did she say to you?"

"She asked, 'What's the matter?' I told her somebody had been shot in the office. She wanted to know who it was, and I said I didn't know."

"Was she excited at the time?"

"Weeping?"

"No."

"What made you believe she was excited?"

"Her asking me what was the matter."

Sisters' Meeting After Murder.

Mrs. Powell said Mrs. Carman at that time had on a kimono and her hair was down. She didn't recall if Mrs. Carman wore glasses or not.

"What else did she say?"

"I don't know. I went out."

Pressed for further details, the witness said the bed was open and the counterpane thrown across the foot and the bedclothes were turned down. It appeared to have been occupied, and was ruffled.

"How do you know Mrs. Carman had lain down in the bed?" asked Mr. Smith.

"Because she said she was going upstairs after dinner and that she had a sick headache."

Mrs. Powell said Mrs. Carman wore a blue skirt and white shirtwaist that night when she came from the city and that she herself wore white. Describing the scene when she went upstairs the second time after the shooting, Mrs. Powell said:

"I sat beside Mrs. Carman on the couch. No, I did not talk to her. I put my face down and wept. I said I would 'phone to father. Mrs. Carman said yes, I better had."

"Did she weep?"

"No."

"Where was her little girl at that time?"

"Downstairs in the front hall."

"Was it you that told the little girl to stop playing the piano?"

"No, Sir."

Mrs. Powell was questioned about the dictograph in the doctor's office. She said she had known nothing about it till Mrs. Carman told her.

"When was that?"

"The morning after the shooting. We were dressing before breakfast. I saw her pulling something out in the hall—wires. Mrs. Carman was still in her nightdress then."

"What did she say about it then?"

"I don't think she said anything. She told me it was a dictograph."

"Didn't that excite your curiosity?"

"No, it did not."

"Didn't you think there was something unusual about having a dictograph in the office?"

"No, Sir. I didn't know what it was intended for."

"And so you had no curiosity to find out what the dictograph was in the house for?"

"No. I was eager to get to work."

"When you came home from work that night, did you have any talk with your sister?"

"I don't know."

"With any one?"

"I don't know."

"Didn't you talk to me?" persisted Mr. Smith. Mrs. Powell said perhaps she had.

"Didn't you talk to anybody in the family at all about the dictograph?" cried Mr. Smith.

"No. I was away most of the day, and when Dr. Carman and his wife are at home I'm often away, or vice versa," said Mrs. Powell, volunteering her explanation and talking very fast.

"Now," said the District Attorney, "think hard: Are you sure you were not on the veranda at any time on the night of the shooting?"

"I am pretty sure," she replied. "If I was it was only for a few moments."

"Are you positive you did not on that night pass through the hall from the front of the house to the kitchen or back and turn on water in the kitchen? And that if any one did that it was not you?"

"Yes, Sir," replied Mrs. Powell. She was then excused.

There was an eager craning of necks as the Coroner called the next witness.

"Mrs. Carman!"

Mrs. Carman Takes the Stand.

The physician's wife walked in very slowly and stately, from the crowded rear entrance. She was tall and well built, fair haired, with just a tinge of gray. She wore glasses, through which looked soft gray eyes. Her lips were finely molded and tightly compressed. She was very pale. She toyed with her white gloves nervously as she stopped in front of the bar, and later, when she took the witness chair. Though she spoke in a low tone, it was evident she tried to make her enunciation very distinct.

Mrs. Carman looked around at the crowd with frightened eyes. She told of her visit to the city with her mother, tracing their shopping journey through Brooklyn and Manhattan department stores and their return by the 7 or 7:15 o'clock train to Freeport. She said she wore the same suit as that she wore at the inquest. She said she first saw Dr. Carman at the dinner table. At the meal she got up to admit patients at the door of the office—at least, she recalled admitting one man. After dinner she said she went straight upstairs to her room and never went down till after the shooting.

"Were you never on the veranda or stoop?"

"No, Sir."

"I went upstairs, disrobed, and lay upon my bed until—the confusion."

There was much pity for the distressed witness as she leaned forward, hesitating to refer to the shooting. She said she heard no shot—

"Only a sound and confusion. I am not positive if it was a shot or glass."

Mrs. Carman said in reply to a question that her hearing was fairly good, but she had trouble in one ear. Her room was on the west side of the house, as the office was. Asked to describe more definitely the "confusion," she said slowly:

"My sister and mother rushed downstairs and there were people moving below. No, I did not hear them say anything to me or any one."

"What was the noise like?" persisted Mr. Smith.

"I don't know. I didn't stop to analyze it."

"But you must have had some notion of the sound?"

"It just sounded like some unusual noise. I jumped up and listened in bed. I got out as soon as I could and went into the hall."

At this tense moment of expectant silence in the court room, Coroner Norton shouted:

"The Health Officer says we must clear this room of one-fourth the people here to get clear air. So some will have to get out or I'll have to get them out."

The announcement and consequent shifting of the audience relieved Mrs. Carman's strained situation. When it had passed, she continued her account of what she had done in the hall.

"I looked over the banister."

"Did you go downstairs?"

"No. I saw women going out of the door. Then I got my gown and slipped it on."

Admits Entering Waiting Room.

"Where to did you go?"

"Into the waiting room," said Mrs. Carman, faintly.

"Did you see any one there?"

"I don't know."

"Was the office door open?"

"Partly."

"Did you go in?"

"No, sir."

"Look in?"

"No, sir."

"Why didn't you look in?"

"Because he told me not to." She looked anxiously at Dr. Carman as he sat leaning forward at the counsel table beside Mr. Levy.

"Told you not to?"

"Yes. Once we had a little fuss, and he told me never to go in again."

"But that was when there was a little fuss about a live person," insisted Mr. Smith. "He never told you not to look in when there was a dead person."

"I didn't know it was a dead person."

"You knew there was something serious?"

"Yes."

"Had you no curiosity?"

"I wouldn't have gone downstairs if I had had no curiosity," parried Mrs. Carman, sharply.

"There was light in the office, and you were just in front of the open office door. Why didn't you look in the office?"

"Because the doctor had forbidden me to come into the office when he had a patient and make a scene."

"But you weren't going to make a scene this time were you? Weren't his instructions against only that? Not to interfere with his patients?"

"Yes," admitted Mrs. Carman, "but I didn't want to go in against his orders."

Mr. Smith recalled the "scene" of the face-slapping of the nurse, mentioned by Dr. Carman.

"Yes, but I knocked at the window first—the same window"—hastily interrupted Mrs. Carman, "and then I knocked at the door."

The witness was looking squarely at her husband, where, reddening, he sat at the counsel table.

"Well, you didn't intend to make any scene on Tuesday night, and you had no fear of such reproach then, if you had asked the doctor in a quiet way what had happened?" insisted the District Attorney.

"I thought best to wait and take his word for what had happened afterward, knowing that he was safe."

"What do you mean, that he was safe? Had you any reason to suspect that some ill would befall him? Why do you say you knew he was safe?"

"I heard the sounds that were unusual, and I knew something had happened."

Mrs. Carman said she stayed only a few minutes in the waiting room and didn't know if she saw her mother, sister, or Golder there. Then she went straight upstairs, she said.

"What did you do there?"

"I talked to my little girl. I took her into my room."

"Where was she when you heard that 'sound'?"

"I don't know."

Mrs. Carman denied that she was at any time on the front veranda. She said it was she who called to the child to stop playing the piano, but that she called from her room upstairs. She was sure of that.

How She Bought Dictograph.

The witness denied positively also that after dinner she had walked through the hall from the front of the house to the kitchen or back, or that she had turned the water on in the kitchen. She insisted that she never came downstairs till after the shooting. She described with almost avid eagerness in great detail how she had bought the dictograph.

"I went to the company first to inquire what it was. I had no idea that it was what it was," she explained. "I thought it was something like a graphophone, that would write down a record of what was spoken, not something you had to listen to. I wanted to keep a record. I told them that. I told the man I was a dressmaker."

Mrs. Carman recited in a louder and injured voice that all might hear and resent treatment of her:

"They told me it was strictly confidential, all I might tell them; that no one would ever learn a word of it. The man that said that was Gaston Boissonault. I saw him only once thereafter. Yes, I did write to him once. When they assured me all would be confidential, I told them I was a doctor's wife and wanted to hear what was going on in the doctor's office between the doctor and his patients."

"Did you tell that you suspected him of improper relations?"

"Only told him about the affair with the nurse."

Mrs. Carman described that affair with the nurse in detail.

"I got to the window that time by going around from the kitchen door. The curtain was up. I stood there a few minutes. They were talking personal matters. A few minutes later I saw him give her $15—I saw it very distinctly, three five-dollar bills. They talked a few minutes, sitting down. Then she up and kissed him on the cheek. When I saw that I knocked on the window like this—"

Mrs. Carman rapped out three very loud knocks.

"Then I went in and told them, 'This is a pretty business for people of your age,' and I slapped her cheek, like this"—

Mrs. Carman gave the air a sharp back-hand slap. She corroborated the account given by the doctor for the rest of the incident.

"The doctor explained long before that he had loaned the woman money a year and a half ago," she said, "and that as she was a poor woman he had no security but her word. But he said she always paid him back."

"Did that disturb your mind about the doctor and the nurse?" asked Mr. Smith.

"No, that didn't," replied Mrs. Carman. "Only, he often laughed about her and other girls and talked about how they acted. I told him if he had so much time to spend with them he ought to spend some of it at home with his family instead of nurses."

Her voice was vigorous and live with interest now. She said she had heard many conversations over the dictograph, but had made no records or notes. She recalled no dictograph conversation between the doctor and the nurse.

"Did you hear other women?"

"Oh, yes; I could hear all right, except when there were more than two persons in the room, when there were too many vibrations."

"You never heard anything that disturbed your peace of mind?" asked Mr. Smith.

There was a faltering in Mrs. Carman's voice, and mist for the first time gathered in her eyes, as she replied, very low:

"No, Sir." Her eyes were downcast, and her fingers played nervously on the table. "I was always reassured by what I heard."

Mrs. Carman admitted that she had been suspicious for a year.

"How long ago was it that you lost your suspicion?"

Her Suspicion Not Allayed.

"I never said I lost my suspicion," she replied quickly. "I merely said I had heard reassuring words. I was not more suspicious than before I bought the dictograph."

"Is it not a fact that two weeks ago you asked the dictograph people to return the letter you had sent them?" asked the District Attorney suddenly.

"I don't recall whether I asked for it," she replied, but she admitted that she had got it back.

"What did you do with the letter?"

"Destroyed it."

The dictograph people told her, the witness said, that she would not be able to hear so well in the Summer, but if she kept the dictograph until Winter the cold weather would help her hear better again. So she intended to keep it right on until Winter, she said. She told no one but her mother that she had installed the machine, and her mother told her it was a "foolish girl's trick" to attempt, and tried to dissuade her. She disconnected it early Wednesday morning, the day after the shooting.

"Why?"

"I thought it was pretty bad after what had occurred to have people think I suspected my husband. I thought probably he had enough on his hands."

"Did you think the shots were intended for him?"

"I don't know."

"Didn't you have any idea that you might be suspected? What led you to tell about the dictograph, since your husband hadn't discovered it in all the time since May?"

"Well, nothing like this had ever happened."

"Weren't you afraid the officers might discover it?"

"I told the Doctor about it before the officers found out about it," replied Mrs. Carman, adding: "The doors were closed while they were searching inside, and I couldn't tell what they had found. I told the Doctor about it Wednesday morning. I took it away and hid it in the garret."

"Did you often go to the garret?" asked the District Attorney suddenly. Mrs. Carman said she did.

"Are there any firearms there?"

"No."

"Did you ever have a revolver in your hand?"

"Only the little one of the doctor's which I gave you."

She said she had never seen the weapon loaded.

"I don't know one weapon from another," she added.

"But you could pull a trigger if you wanted to?"

"I suppose I could pull a trigger if I wanted to."

Mr. Smith wanted to know why Mrs. Carman had gone to Hempstead yesterday to look at the body of Mrs. Bailey. She said she did so at the suggestion of Mr. Levy, the lawyer friend of the family.

"He said how would I know that I had never seen her unless I looked at her face to find out," she explained. "So I went over and looked at it."

"Did not Mr. Levy question your colored servant girl whether on the night of the murder she saw any one in the back door of the kitchen?" asked Mr. Smith.

"I don't know," answered Mrs. Carman. "He asked so many questions. At all events, it wasn't at my request if he did so."

Mrs. Carman said she never went into the doctor's office after the affair with the nurse. She denied that she had listened at the dictograph on the night of the murder. She was then excused and took her place quietly beside her husband.

Dr. Roy Grimmer, Dr. Howard Phips, and Dr. William H. Runcie, who performed the autopsy on Mrs. Bailey, testified to the course of the bullet that had killed her, and about the condition of the organs. There was nothing divulged as to the rumors which had arisen in this connection.

The inquest was then adjourned till Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

SORROW IN CARMAN HOME.

"Please Be Easy on Us," Aged Mr. Conklin Pleads.

Special to The New York Times.

FREEPORT, L. I., July 3.—Heartbroken evidence of the bitter effect of the Bailey murder in the Carman home life was given this morning by Platt Conklin, Mrs. Carman's aged father, who had been ill for months. He said that on Wednesday morning, the day after the murder, Mrs. Carman met him in the bathroom and said:

"Father, did you ever see a dictograph?"

When he said he had not, she showed him a bundle and said:

"Here's one."

"Where in the world did you get that thing?" the father asked; and when she told him she had installed it in the doctor's office, he exclaimed: "Why in the world did you do such a thing without telling me?"

"I didn't want to bother you in your sick condition," he said Mrs. Carman replied.

Mr. Conklin said he suspected that a dictograph might figure in the case on Tuesday night when, after the shooting, he heard the word used in the conference held by the Coroner, the Sheriff, and the Chief of Police behind closed doors in the office. But he thought they were going to install one.

"Please be as easy as you can on us," the aged man pleaded to the reporters, as he turned away with tears in his eyes. "God knows we need all the sympathy you can give us."

Mr. Conklin said his daughter was 45 years old, and Dr. Carman 46. The doctor looked much younger than his wife, and his boyish looks had been against him when he started his practice in the village. Mr. Conklin insisted that his daughter knew nothing of firearms, and couldn't aim well enough "to hit a tree."

The movements of Mrs. Bailey, before she reached the home of Dr. Carman, were described today by Mrs. John C. Grabau, whom she had been visiting at Rockville Centre just before. Mrs. Grabau said she had met the Baileys about nine years ago, through her husband, and that ever since Mrs. Bailey and she had been close friends. Mrs. Grabau, who was ill, liked to have Mrs. Bailey, a cheerful, talkative woman, come and cheer her up. Usually she came with her husband and children.

Mrs. Grabau said on Tuesday they had discussed her own illness much of the time, and she therefore could not understand how, if Mrs. Bailey were ill, she had failed to mention it then. No mention was made of Dr. Carman, said Mrs. Grabau. She thought Mrs. Bailey looked well. At 6 o'clock Mrs. Bailey left, saying she wanted to get home early and help prepare dinner. She hoped to get the 6:15 train. In order to do so, she had to run to the trolley. Later, Mrs. Grabau, after the shooting, thought Mrs. Bailey's lips had looked white, and she wondered whether, in running for the train she had strained herself. In that case a visit to Dr. Carman on the way home would have been explained. At 10:30 o'clock some one called the Grabau home on the telephone and told Mr. Grabau of the shooting of Mrs. Bailey. Who it was Mrs. Grabau did not know.

A report spread through the village tonight that Mrs. Carman after the inquest was kept under strict police surveillance, and that a detective was stationed in her home. This was denied by Chief of Police Lamb, who said that Mrs. Carman was free to come and go as she liked, and was not under detention.

It was admitted by Sheriff Pettit that private detectives have been called in to aid in the investigation of the murder. They came from New York. The Sheriff would not say who furnished them.

Mrs. Variance, whose name was mentioned by Dr. Carman and his wife as the nurse at the inquest, could not be found here tonight. A family at Lena Avenue and Long Beach Avenue admitted that a Mrs. Variance was employed as a babies' nurse there, but said she was not expected in from Seaford till 11 o'clock. She did not come in on that train.

GIFFORD JURY OUT ALL NIGHT

Little Hope of a Verdict—Asks Instructions on Second Degree.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, July 3.—After the jury which heard the evidence given in the trial of Malcolm Gifford, Jr., the Hudson student, charged with the murder of Frank J. Clute, a chauffeur, on April 1, 1913, had been deliberating for six hours it was believed at midnight that the trial would result in a disagreement.

The jury filed into the court room at 9:30 o'clock tonight, and the foreman asked Judge Addington if they could find the prisoner guilty of murder in the second degree. He read the law to the jury, specifically explaining murder in the second degree. William Travers Jerome, counsel for Gifford, then asked that the court instruct the jurors more fully regarding conviction for manslaughter in the first and second degrees. Judge Addington elaborated the instructions and the jurors returned to their room. When no verdict had been reached at midnight they were locked up for the night.

The Gifford trial occupied only nine days. When District Attorney Harold Alexander had concluded his summing up today, Judge George Addington's charge to the jury was short, and the jury retired at exactly 6 o'clock. As the jurymen filed out of the courtroom the young prisoner got up and greeted friends smilingly. Then with his father, mother, brother, and sister he went to a private room to await the verdict.

Mr. Jerome said in summing up for the defense that the Clute murder was an unsolved mystery. He maintained that robbery was not the motive for the crime, and that the "man or men who went out with Clute that night went to get him and got him." He argued that the bullet holes in Clute's head indicated that more than one person attacked him. Mr. Jerome was bitter in his arraignment of the private detectives who brought Gifford here from Chatham without a warrant. He admitted that Gifford might have been seen on the piazza of the Boardman house in Troy on the day following the murder, but excused it as boyish inquisitiveness. The bill book in his hand might have been Gifford's, he said. He said if that bill book had been under the roof flashing for a year that it would show some marks of the weather. "Why is it not storm-beaten?" asked Mr. Jerome. Then he added: "Because it was never there."

District Attorney Alexander directed most of his attention to the four witnesses who had sworn that they saw the passenger in Clute's car on the night of the murder. He said their statements were pure fabrications. The statements of Mildred Thorn, who he said could not tell the truth, and Samuel D. Gibson were unmitigated lies, he said.

"The only way these people can be answered is by branding them as liars, as I do," he shouted.

He asked how any one could put all the circumstances together and say that they did not spell guilt for Malcolm Gifford, Jr. He told the jury not to be swayed by sympathy. "I have sympathy the same as any one else," he said. "Don't think that I enjoy this duty. It is the most disagreeable duty I have ever had to perform, and I hope that I shall never have to perform another such a duty."

KILLS EIGHT FOR REVENGE.

Negro Under Arrest for Many Murders Escapes from Custody.

BRANCHVILE, Texas, July 3.—Sholl Mannings, a negro, killed eight other negroes here today with an axe because he thought they had accused him of horse theft. Twice this week, after he had been arrested at towns near here on the charge of stealing horses, Mannings broke jail. He reached here today before daylight and started out at once to take vengeance.

After he had killed the eight negroes Mannings was arrested, but he escaped while he was being taken to jail on a railroad train. A posse is searching for him.

TWO KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

Fifteen Also Hurt in Wrecked Building—Sought Shelter from Storm.

SALLISAW, Okla., July 3.—Two persons were killed and fifteen seriously injured at picnic grounds near Sallisaw late today when a building, in which many persons had taken refuge from a storm, was struck by lightning and wrecked. Several thousand persons were on the grounds attending a Fourth of July celebration and political rally.

United States Senator T. P. Gore, who had just finished speaking when the crowd was driven to shelter, was not injured.

The dead are Hooper McKeel, a youth, of Sallisaw, and John Stewart, a farmer, of Atkins, Okla. Of the injured, George Martin, Superintendent of the Sallisaw Light and Power Company; James Redding, a lineman; Albert Peters, and Mrs. Martha Foster of Sallisaw are not expected to recover. A score or more persons were also knocked down and bruised.

FINES ROAD FOR CRUELTY.

Central Must Pay $100 for Neglecting Cattle in Transit.

Judge Hand, in the Federal District Court, ordered the New York Central and Hudson River Railway yesterday to pay $100 of the $500 which District Attorney Marshall had asked as the penalty for a violation of the law to prevent cruelty to animals while they are being transported by rail. It was charged that cattle, loaded on a car at Montrose, Canada, on Feb. 7, were not unloaded for 28 hours, and did not receive proper rest, water and food.

The company admitted the violation but asserted that the train was delayed between Albany and New York, where there are no facilities for caring for the cattle.

MRS. ANGLE IN JAIL BY CORONER'S ORDER

Stamford Widow Locked Up When Lawyer Refuses to Allow Her to Testify at Inquest.

SHE TALKS TO BALLOU'S SON

Begs Him to Believe Her Innocent, but He Turns Away from Her in Silence.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., July 3.—Coroner John J. Phelan today ordered that Mrs. Helen M. Angle be held without bail pending the result of his inquest in the case of Waldo R. Ballou, who was found dying on the night of June 23 in front of the Rippowam Building, in which Mrs. Angle had apartments. As soon as the Coroner had instructed him to do so Chief of Police Brennan took Mrs. Angle to the police dormitory and locked her up under the care of Mrs. S. Klahre, the police matron.

The Coroner issued the order after Mrs. Angle had declined for the second time to tell her story of how Mr. Ballou met his death and after Dr. Bruce S. Weaver, the bacteriologist in the case, had testified that he found blood stains in the Rippowam apartments. At a final session of the inquest, to be held some time next week, Dr. Bruce will report on the nature of other stains on the floor of Mrs. Angle's rooms the analysis of which he has not yet completed. The police are of the opinion that these are blood stains.

Mrs. Angle was shocked when Chief Brennan told her it was necessary to lock her up. She was released on $5,000 bail after the second hearing by the Coroner on June 25, and since then had lived at the home of her closest friend here, Mrs. George Eagle. While she is not yet accused of guilt in connection with the death of Mr. Ballou, Mrs. Angle showed that she realized the seriousness of the Coroner's act in canceling her bail bond.

Skirt in Evidence.

Chief Brennan, the first witness called at the hearing this afternoon, said he wished to add to his testimony given at the hearing last week, and he told of the finding of Mrs. Angle's bloodstained skirt a few hours after Mr. Ballou's death. The Chief's testimony on this point, the first part of which he had given previously, was:

"Mrs. Angle was in her bedroom with the matron, dressing to accompany me to the police station, and I was in her sitting room when the lights in the bedroom were switched out. I ran into the bedroom, and as soon as I had turned on the lights I saw Mrs. Angle with a skirt in her hands. She had taken it from the bureau drawer in the darkness. I took the garment from her and said, 'What does this mean?' She seemed almost in a panic with fear, and begged me not to take the garment."

The Chief added that Mrs. Klahre, the matron, had said she had not turned out the lights in Mrs. Angle's room.

Chief Brennan then produced the stained spectacles said to have been those worn by Mr. Ballou. They were found by a New York newspaperman under rubbish in a box outside Mrs. Angle's bathroom window. The spectacles were not broken, and were regarded by the police as indicating that Mr. Ballou could not have killed himself by falling downstairs, as Mrs. Angle maintained.

Dr. Weaver, the next witness, said that he had examined specimens of red stains taken from the stairs and halls of the Rippowam building and from Mrs. Angle's apartment, and had found them to be blood. The important part of his testimony was his report of finding blood stains above the second floor landing of the Rippowam building, for it was on this landing that Ballou was said to have fallen. Dr. Weaver found a circular blood stain on the inside of the top of the cedar chest in which Mr. Ballou's dented straw hat was discovered. This, according to the police, indicated that when the hat was first put into the chest it was covered with blood, the stain being identical in size with the circumference of the crown of the hat. When the police found the hat it was wet, as though it had been washed. Dr. Weaver also testified that the red smears on the spectacles were blood.

Because a chemist employed by Leonard Blondel, Mrs. Angle's father, had said that the stains in Mrs. Angle's rooms were not blood, Coroner Phelan questioned Dr. Weaver as to the process he had followed in his analyses. The bacteriologist said he had used the Hemin or Tichman crystal test. Dr. Weaver could not say when he would complete his analysis of the larger stains on the rug and floor.

Coroner Phelan had asked N. C. Downs, Mrs. Angle's counsel, to produce her for the hearing, and, after Dr. Weaver's testimony, he was notified that Mrs. Angle had reached the Town Hall, in which the hearing was held. The Coroner went to the City Court room, where he expected to find Mrs. Angle, but she and her father were in the Police Chief's office.

She Meets Ballou's Son.

Here Harrison H. Ballou, the dead man's son, was waiting to learn the result of the hearing. As soon as Mrs. Angle saw him she cried out impulsively:

"Harry, come here. I want to talk to you."

Mr. Ballou took a step toward her and she seized his hand. "Harry," she said, "look at me. I don't look like a cruel or vicious woman, do I? I wouldn't say a word or do anything that would hurt your father or his memory."

Mr. Ballou looked down at the floor while she talked. As soon as she released his hand he walked out of the room without speaking.

The Coroner, having consented to hear Mrs. Angle's testimony privately, went into the Chief's office with Mr. Downs, Chief Brennan, Leonard Blondel, and Town Prosecutor Albert Phillips. Coroner Phelan at once asked Mrs. Angle to tell him all she knew of Mr. Ballou's death. She replied:

"I want to tell you, I really want to, but Mr. Downs has told me not to talk and I have promised papa I wouldn't." Then she turned to her lawyer and he shook his head in a negative. She turned in appeal to her father.

"Daddy, can't I tell?" she asked.

"What's the use in having a doctor if you don't take his medicine?" said Mr. Blondel, and Mrs. Angle gave up in her efforts to obtain permission to talk. Mr. Downs told Coroner Phelan that Mrs. Angle and Mr. Blondel would give all possible aid to the State in the identification of articles found in the Rippowam Building, but that his client would not be allowed to talk on account of her physical condition. Realizing that he could get nothing from Mrs. Angle, the Coroner returned to the courtroom. He said:

"In view of the evidence of Dr. Weaver as to the finding of blood on the floor of the hallway on the first flight of steps, on the second landing, on the walls above the landing, on the floor of Mrs. Angle's front room, on the hat, inside the cover of the box in which the hat was found, and on the floor of Mrs. Angle's bedroom near the ironing board and near Mrs. Angle's bed; in view of the finding of blood upon the spectacles, and in view of the further fact that Mrs. Angle, although desirous of telling her whole story, but, under instructions of her counsel, has refrained from telling any of her story, I think I must, under the circumstances, recall Mrs. Angle's bond and ask Chief Brennan to take her into custody."

Mrs. Angle in Tears.

Mrs. Angle remained with her father in the Chief's office while the Coroner was delivering his opinion. As Chief Brennan went into the office to notify her, he heard her ask her father when she could return to Mrs. Eagle's home.

"I'm afraid you can't go back to Mrs. Eagle's," the chief said, and then he announced the result of the hearing. Mrs. Angle grasped her father's arm and began to cry a little, but she did not break down. In a short time she was taken to a room in the police dormitory.

Speaking of the defense he would advance in Mrs. Angle's behalf, Mr. Downs said his client would stick to the story that Mr. Ballou was killed by falling downstairs.

"The analysis which we have had made shows that our theory that Mr. Ballou was not injured in Mrs. Angle's apartment is correct," said he. "As to the key found in Mrs. Angle's apartment and which has been said to have belonged to an officer of the Odd Fellows Lodge I know nothing. I do know, however, that Mrs. Angle had an extra key to her apartment which has not been produced by the police, and I am inclined to think that the key is hers."

Mr. Downs said that he would allow his client to be imprisoned for a reasonable length of time awaiting the conclusion of the inquest, but that if time began to drag and no formal charge was made against Mrs. Angle, he would seek a writ of habeas corpus.

ARREST RICH PHYSICIAN.

Dr. Schireson Charged with Practicing Without a License.

Dr. H. Junius Schireson, 32 years old, who said that his address was at 98 Newark Avenue, Jersey City, and that he also maintained a residence on Pelham Parkway, was arrested last night on a warrant signed by Magistrate Campbell in the Yorkville Court, charging him with practicing medicine without a license. The warrant was obtained by Julia Stiener, a detective of the New York County Medical Society, who alleges that she obtained evidence against Dr. Schireson on June 9. Dr. Schireson had offices with another doctor at 315 Madison Avenue. He told the police he was a physician with a license to practice in New Jersey and denounced his arrest as spite work.

Dr. Schireson was well dressed when he was arrested by Warrant Officer McIntosh at 55 West Forty-second Street, and he wore much jewelry of value. The police say his offices on Madison Avenue brought him in an income of $8,000 monthly.

Following his arrest he was taken to the East Fifty-first Station, but soon afterward he was released on a $500 bond furnished by A. Rosenthal of 237 West 118th Street, who said he was the doctor's attorney.

ARREST FEDERAL INSPECTOR

Internal Revenue Agent Accused of Taking Bribe from Club Manager.

James Smith, an Internal Revenue Inspector, who lives at 241 Bowery, was arrested last night by Detectives Hyman and Foley of the St. Nicholas Avenue Station on the charge that he had accepted a bribe from Louis Schoerner, general manager of the Dyckman Yacht Club. Schoerner had reported some time ago that Smith visited the yacht club on June 13 and told him the liquor law was being violated on some of the boats of the club and that he was guilty of selling liquor without a license. According to Schoerner, Smith told him it could all be fixed up if he paid him $200.

Schoerner says he gave him $40 in cash and a check for $160. After that he consulted the detectives and they told him to stop payment on the check. When Smith came up to find out what was the matter, Schoerner, according to instructions, proposed that he pay him $200 in four instalments of $50. The first of these was to be paid last night, and when Smith arrived at 11 o'clock the detectives arrested him after he had accepted marked bills. At the police station it was said Smith had admitted he had attempted extortion. Papers he carried showed he had been appointed on April 1.

RESCUE 3 OFF CONEY ISLAND

Canoe Party Upset Nearly a Mile Off Shore by Steamer.

Persons lingering around the Parkway Baths at Coney Island a little after midnight this morning were startled by cries for help from across the water. Patrolman Edward Cody put out in a rowboat, carrying a lantern, to search for the persons in distress, at the same time that another boat going to Sheepshead Bay headed out to sea.

Three-quarters of a mile out the patrolman came upon an overturned canoe, and clinging to it was Rudolf Ohl, 20 years, of 929 New York Avenue, Brooklyn, whom he hauled into the rowboat. Close by Cody found Capt. Durant Tibbets, of the United States Volunteer Life Saving Corps, winner of a half dozen hero medals, who was supporting Martin Hayden, 18 years, of Rockaway Point, who was unconscious. Tibbets and the youth were dragged into the rowboat, the canoe was righted and bailed out, and Patrolman Cody rowed back to the Hotel Shelbourne, where Hayden was resuscitated after considerable effort.

He learned that the party had started from Rockaway Point at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, bound for Seagate, and had tried to put into Coney Island, when their canoe was upset by the swell of a passing steamer.

CHANCE FOR HUERTA TO QUIT GRACEFULLY

Sunday's Election Offers It, Though Rebels Won't Recognize Successor.

PRESSURE ON CARRANZA

Washington Advisers Urge Him to Hasten Answer to Mediators—Won't See Villa.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—With the mediation conferences indefinitely adjourned, interest in the Mexican situation is turned altogether toward Mexico. There, two events of unusual importance may occur within the next few days. Next Sunday a Presidential election will be held in the Federal States of Mexico that may give Gen. Huerta his cue for an exit from the Provisional Presidency. At the same time a conference is going on near Torreon that may result either in a definite settlement of the difficulties between the First Chief and Gen. Villa, or in a definite break that will split the Constitutionalist Party in twain.

Aside from the dramatic interest in anything tending toward Gen. Huerta's elimination after his dogged campaign to maintain himself in power, the balance of interest sags heavily toward Torreon. An adjustment of differences might pave the way for the sending of Constitutionalist representatives to confer with Gen. Huerta's representatives who have just left Niagara Falls, while a definite breach would make such representatives, even if sent, mere puppets, representing no recognized authority.

But neither of these eventualities is expected to deter the Constitutionalists from prosecuting the war in the direction of Mexico City. A definite split after the bitter passages of words that have already taken place could now mean nothing less than a civil war within a civil war. But on its outer edge there would still be civil war against Gen. Huerta. And a patching up of differences is only asked by Gen. Villa on the basis of his unrestricted march upon Mexico City. Gen. Carranza also believes in a rough policy toward the Cientificos, and to that extent agrees with his turbulent military commander.

In either case such negotiations as might be entered into with Gen. Huerta's agents would be nothing less than negotiations for his surrender. Prospects for the success of these negotiations would rise and fall as the Constitutionalist armies by further victories or unexpected reverses made the situation of the Huertistas more desperate or gave them hopes of further staving off ultimate complete surrender.

But while reports of disagreement between Gen. Carranza and Gen. Villa seemed for a while to give Gen. Huerta's men renewed hopes, the fall of Zacatecas and the evacuation of Aguascalientes have neutralized them. In addition, the recess of the mediators without bringing the Huertistas and Carranzistas face to face across a council table seems to have given the Huertistas the impression that they have been left to their fate at the hands of the Constitutionalists.

Little Hope from the Election.

It is hardly expected that any conceivable result of next Sunday's election can modify that fate. The Mexican Constitution provides that a Presidential election, to be determinative, must be held in at least a majority of the country's polling places. It will, of course, be impossible for Gen. Huerta, in ordering the election, to establish that condition. He might, however, if he wished to do so, make the man who received the largest vote his Secretary of State and then resign, so as to give him the succession to the Presidency.

Gen. Carranza was today urged by his representatives in Washington to hasten his decision relative to sending representatives to confer with the Huerta delegates about the internal affairs of Mexico and the pacification of that republic. Rafael Zubaran, his special envoy in Washington, sent a long telegraphic report on the situation to Gen. Carranza at Saltillo. This message told of the return of the American delegates from Niagara and the plans of the mediators for taking a recess while waiting for the answer of the Constitutionalists.

In diplomatic, but nevertheless firm, language it was pointed out to Gen. Carranza that it was two weeks ago tonight that Dr. Naon, the Argentine Minister, was in Washington in conference with President Wilson, Secretary Bryan, and Luis Cabrera, and that tomorrow would mark the passing of two weeks since Gen. Carranza was invited by the mediators to send representatives to confer with the Huerta delegates. It was likewise pointed out to Gen. Carranza in this message that a full week had elapsed since his first reply to that invitation had been received. This was the reply of last Saturday, in which Gen. Carranza asked for a few days more time in which to canvass the sentiment of his Generals, signatories to the plan of Guadalupe.

The purpose of these diplomatic suggestions is to hasten the answer of Gen. Carranza, which was expected several days ago, but has not yet arrived, and no word has been received from Gen. Carranza as to when this answer will be received. Constitutionalists here feel certain that Gen. Carranza's message will indicate a willingness to have his representatives confer with the Huerta delegates, but the lapse of time since the invitation was sent is beginning to inspire doubt and unrest over the attitude of the Constitutionalists. So far as the Constitutionalists here profess to know, several more days may elapse before Gen. Carranza's answer comes.

For the first time since the Niagara Falls peace conference was begun, Secretary Bryan admitted today that the fulfillment of the agreements reached there between the American and Mexican delegates was conditional on the establishment of a provisional Government in Mexico City. Heretofore Mr. Bryan has declared in every reference to the Niagara Falls negotiations that satisfactory progress was being made.

His statement today is of no particular importance, as it was merely a repetition of what has been known, but it confirms the understanding that the Wilson Administration has no intention of declaring that it has obtained reparation for the Tampico indignity and that it will withdraw the American armed forces from Vera Cruz before the internal troubles of Mexico have been adjusted.

Justice Joseph R. Lamar of the United States Supreme Court and Frederick W. Lehmann, who were the American delegates to the mediation conference, reached Washington from Niagara Falls today. They called at the White House just before the beginning of the regular Cabinet meeting and were greeted cordially by President Wilson.

"I'm proud of the way you represented the United States," the President told them. No conferences between the American delegates and President Wilson and Secretary Bryan were held. Mr. Bryan said that the Government had been kept acquainted with the progress of the negotiations and that a conference at this time was not necessary.

Departure of Huerta's Nephews.

There have been indications lately that a crisis was expected at Mexico City. Threats from the bandit chief, Zapata, that he would cut off the city's electric and water supplies made the crisis seem imminent. And in spite of Gen. Huerta's denial that he was sending his family out of the country, one of his brothers is already in California, while his nephews, Gen. Joaquin Maass, Gen. Mario Maass, and Major Daniel Maass, have left the capital en route for Europe.

But as things stand now the only reason for Gen. Huerta to resign his post in favor of one of his supporters would be that he was weary of his heavy labors and realized that the end was near. It is known that no one who would take up the reins of power let fall by Gen. Huerta would be recognized by the Constitutionalists. And, needless to say, that expresses also the attitude of the United States.

Once Gen. Huerta had a plan of resigning in favor of Gen. Fernando Gonzales, who would issue an appeal to all good Mexicans to rally to resist the American invasion. But the signing of the protocols has destroyed that fear as a political asset.

What Washington most wants to see happen in Mexico is the further defeat of the Federals and the continued advance of the Constitutionalist armies upon Mexico City. Such a development, it is thought, would more quickly bring about a termination of hostilities than anything that might be accomplished at Torreon in the conferences of the friends of the two estranged rebel chieftains.

Perhaps if the Constitutionalists advance a little nearer the Capital, or if danger of its capture by Zapata becomes too great, the Huertistas may be driven to the desired surrender, simply on conditions guaranteeing their lives and their personal and real property.

Constitutionalists have already indicated plainly that they would agree to no conditions guaranteeing the payment of Gen. Heurta's debts or the carrying out of his concessions.

HUERTA'S NEPHEWS DEPART.

Three Maass Brothers Going to Europe on a Military Mission.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, July 3.—Gen. Joaquin Maass, until recently commander of the San Luis Potosi division; his brother, Mario, Sub-Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Industry, and a third brother, Major Daniel Maass, left the capital tonight for Puerto Mexico, en route to Europe. It is said that the brothers, who are nephews of President Huerta, are charged with a military commission to the Governments of Europe.

The party will board l'Espagne of the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, sailing for France.

THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent had an opportunity today of hearing from Senora Huerta, the President's wife, the denial of the report that she was planning to leave the country for Europe.

"I authorize you," she said, "to deny that report categorically. It is totally false that I have had any thought of leaving Mexico, as there is no reason, nor do I think there will be any reason for my taking such a step."

Querido Moheno, Minister of Commerce and Industry, presented his resignation today, which was accepted.

Moheno's resignation marks the departure from the Cabinet of another of the so-called "Big Four' who in Congress largely contributed to excite and prejudice public opinion against Madero. The other three were José Maria Lozano, who some time ago resigned the Portfolio of Communications and Public Works; Nemesio Garcia Naranjo, the present Minister of Public Instruction, and Francisco Olaguibel, who for a time was Huerta's Sub-Secretary and Acting Secretary of Foreign Relations.

These men, with Jesus Rabago, editor of Manana, were the most formidable militant elements of the anti-Maderista movement, and paved the way for Madero's downfall.

Señor Moheno, when interviewed, said that his chief reason for resigning was ill-health. He recently said that he was only awaiting the solution of the conflict with the United States to carry out his wish of retiring to private life.

There is a general disposition to view things hopefully, now that the dispute with the United States has been adjusted on terms regarded as, on the whole, favorable to Mexico. It is considered of the highest importance that internal questions be settled without delay, and for this purpose it is recognized as necessary that a Provisional Government be set up with which the rebels will treat. It is rumored that action to this end is likely to follow close upon the ratification of the protocol by the Mexican Senate, and Chief Justice Francisco S. Carbajal is mentioned as a likely nominee to the Foreign Relations portfolio, acceptance of which would place him in line for the Provisional Presidency if Gen. Huerta, satisfied with having concluded an honorable peace with the United States and opening a way for the settlement of the internal conflict, should decide to retire.

It is reported that next Sunday's elections may solve the problem of a rapprochement with the rebels through the putting up of candidates with whom they will be willing to negotiate a settlement. Among the possible tickets along these lines, that of Pedro Lascurain and Gen. José Refugio Velasco, as President and Vice President, respectively, is talked of.

Contrary to expectations, the Niagara Falls protocol was not discussed in the Senate today.

It is reported that a telegram was received by the War Department today stating that Gen. Carranza, while considering himself entitled to the Presidency, in accordance with the plan of Guadalupe, has renounced his claims, in view of the country's difficult situation.

Gen. Blanquet was asked tonight about the engagement last night with the Zapatistas between the stations of Tres Marias and El Parque, on the Cuernavaca Railway. The Minister said the rebels were routed and that their losses were heavy.

Many army officers and others congratulated Gen. Huerta today on the second anniversary of the battle of Bachimba, won by him for Madero in 1912 over Orozco.

By The Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, July 3.—President Huerta tonight accepted the resignation of Querido Moheno, Minister of Commerce and Industry. Senor Moheno in announcing this afternoon that he had tendered his resignation, categorically denied that it had been demanded by the President because he awarded oil concessions to persons connected with a big American oil company. He said he was retiring because of his health.

MEDIATORS LEAVE BUFFALO.

Dr. Naon Starts for Washington—Senor Suarez Coming Here.

BUFFALO, July 3.—Two more members of the mediation conference which met at Niagara Falls to compose the Mexican situation departed for the East this evening. Dr. Romulo S. Naon, Minister from Argentina, started for Washington at 7:45 P. M., and Minister Suarez of Chile went to New York.

The Huerta delegates to the conference paid a flying visit to Buffalo today and met Dr. Naon at his hotel. It was said to have been only a casual meeting, and no significance was attached to it. They returned to Niagara Falls this evening. Emilio Rabasa will leave there for New York tomorrow, and Luis Elguero will go to Montreal.

REBELS IMPRISON BRITISH VICE CONSUL

Douglas Accused of Aiding the Federals in Siege of Zacatecas.

NEW BENTON CASE FEARED

U. S. Consul Hamm Sent to See That Court Martial Is Conducted Fairly.

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, Texas, July 3.—Albert St. Clair Douglas, British Vice Consul at Zacatecas, has been arrested by the Constitutionalists, held for court martial and may be shot. This information, which was telegraphed to Washington, on its receipt, was received here today by Vice Consul H. C. Myles from James Coldwell, British Vice Consular Agent at Zacatecas.

The telegram from Coldwell said that Douglas had been arrested and imprisoned on the charge that he assisted the Federals prior to and during the siege of Zacatecas. Douglas denied that he had acted in any other than his official capacity and insisted that his actions were absolutely neutral throughout the Zacatecas campaign. The rebels, however, refused to release him and are now preparing a summary court martial.

Myles, immediately on receiving the telegram, after notifying the British Embassy, got into communication with prominent rebel officials here. Just what demands he made upon them is not known, but a promise was exacted that the trial of the British Consul would not be started until the American Consul, Theodore Hamm arrived at Zacatecas from Durango to see that the proceedings were according to law.

No word was given out regarding the character of the communication sent to the British Embassy in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The Department of State and the British Embassy are seriously worried over what threatens to be a repetition of the Benton case in the arrest by Constitutionalists of Albert St. Clair Douglas, British Vice Consul at Zacatecas. Mr. Douglas is threatened with court-martial on a charge of aiding the Federals, and the prospect of quick execution has been held out. Mr. Douglas appealed to the British Embassy two days ago, and the Embassy, after directing the British Consular agent at Torreon to take the matter up directly with Gen. Villa, solicited the good offices of the State Department.

The specific charge against Mr. Douglas is that he instructed the Federal troops in military tactics prior to the capture of Zacatecas by the rebels. But, according to information received here, though Mr. Douglas was pointedly requested by the Federals to instruct them, he consistently refused to aid them in any way. This information has been laid before the State Department and Gen. Villa.

The State Department promptly undertook to use its good offices in behalf of the Englishman, but so far has received no answer to such representations, as it was made through Consular Agent Carothers to Gen. Villa or Gen. Carranza. But the embassy has heard from the British Consular Agent at Torreon that Gen. Villa seemed inclined to take a reasonable view of the case and had promptly telegraphed the General in command at Zacatecas to give Mr. Douglas a fair trial and to take no hasty steps. As far as this information goes it is assuring to interested officials here, but Mr. Douglas's official position makes any measures against his person extremely serious.

Benton, who was murdered in Gen. Villa's office at Juarez, if not by Gen. Villa's own hand, was a private citizen, but Sir Edward Grey in the House of Commons said flatly that if the faction to which Benton's murderers belonged ever got to a position of responsibility full reparation would be demanded.

Even in that case Sir Edward evidently had in mind the possibility of sending a punitive expedition into Mexico for he said the cost would be prohibitive. But that was before the rebels captured Tampico. Now punitive measures could be undertaken at little cost and with little danger, as Tampico could be destroyed by British ships without the landing of a single man. The Constitutionalist lack of a port at the time of the murder of Benton was mentioned by Sir Edward as one reason for not undertaking sharp reprisals.

It is hoped, however, that Douglas will be released after full explanation has been made. Benton was apparently murdered in hot blood after harsh words had passed between him and Villa. In this instance, Gen. Villa has no personal interest or personal anger, and it is hoped that his interposition will prevent serious developments.

CARRANZA WON'T SEE VILLA.

Discussion of Their Differences Must Be Through Agents Alone.

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, Texas, July 3.—That Carranza is adopting a cold and unbending attitude as regards mediation between himself and Villa over their many differences is indicated by the fact that Gen. Pablo Gonzales, commander of the Eastern Division and a strong Carranzista, has been to date, and will continue to be, Gen. Carranza's representative at any conference that may be held.

Carranza, it became known today, has flatly refused to confer personally with Villa or to transact any business with him except through agents. For this reason Gen. Filipe Angeles, the ex-Federal artillery expert who was recently prominently mentioned as provisional President, is working for the complete elimination of Carranza. Reports of the attitude taken by Angeles were brought to the border today by Americans arriving from the south. They say that Angeles has for some time strongly advised Villa to assert himself and drop the sham of taking any orders from the First Chief. It is his opinion that, should an open break come, Carranza's Generals would come over to Villa, just as Gen. Chao, who was removed from the Governorship of Chihuahua by Villa and was always considered a strong Carranzista, did. Angeles is also said to be keeping an eye on Washington, fearing that the dictatorial attitude of Carranza may be causing lack of confidence there in the rebel cause, which may result in the strict embargo on arms and ammunition being maintained indefinitely.

The Gutierrez and Orozco bands are again active in Western Chihuahua and are committing many depredations. A force of rebels sent against them from Pearson was ambushed and twenty-eight of the rebels were killed. A repair gang on the Northwestern Railroad, together with a rebel guard, was routed this morning at a point fifty miles south of the border.

Huge shipments of supplies, including 20,000 pairs of shoes, have gone south in the last few days. This is taken as indicating that Villa, irrespective of any mediation programme, plans to continue the southward campaign on his own responsibility.

TORREON, July 3.—The delegation of the Division of the Northeast arrived here this afternoon to participate in conferences tomorrow for the purpose of adjusting differences between Gen. Carranza and Gen. Villa.

"The conferences will take place tomorrow, after which I may have a statement to make," said Gen. Villa today. "At present it would be useless to say anything. I still hope that matters can be adjusted satisfactorily. That some of my enemies have talked is no good reason why I should offend good taste."

Gen. Villa with his staff and representatives in the conference met the delegates representing the Eastern Division of Gen. Gonzales at the railroad station here.

FIGHT VILLA IN COURT.

Carranzistas Try to Keep 30,000,000 Paper Pesos Out of His Hands.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Information that the breach between Gen. Carranza and Gen. Villa was still far from healed came to light here today in an amusing but significant way, when prominent members of the Constitutionalist junta filed in the local Federal court a petition for a restraining order to prevent certain express companies from delivering to an agent of Gen. Villa 30,000,000 pesos in paper money engraved in Washington for the First Chief. The express companies will be heard tomorrow morning.

Before the friction between the two Constitutionalist leaders reached an acute stage, orders were issued to the Norris Peters Company of Washington by Felix Villareal to print large quantities of Constitutionalist paper money. Delivery was made in installments, and payments for it were made through the Riggs National Bank. To insure a high standard of engraving Mr. Villareal had Santiago Winfield, a Constitutionalist with Villa sympathies, installed in the engraving rooms as inspector for the Constitutionalists.

That arrangement worked well enough as long as Gen. Carranza and Gen. Villa were on good terms. But the recent break between them seems to have raised the question of ownership of the paper money. Three days ago, after 30,000,000 pesos of the currency, worth about 15 cents a peso, was shipped to Mr. Winfield's address in El Paso, Mr. Winfield left Washington. The suit in court today was begun to prevent the money being turned over to Mr. Winfield, who it is feared might feel that his duty would compel him to pay it to Gen. Villa instead of to the First Chief.

In spite of the currency's depreciation a shipment of 30,000,000 pesos might have an important bearing on the negotiations now in progress near Torreon between the friends of the estranged leaders. Gen. Villa is known to be short of ammunition and coal, and the receipt of what would be considered as about $4,000,000 gold would greatly strengthen his hands.

VEXATIOUS REBEL OIL TAX.

It May Drive Foreign Operators Out of the Tampico District.

Special to The New York Times.

ARANSAS PASS, Texas, July 3.—Passengers on E. L. Doheny's yacht Wakiva, which arrived here today, report that conditions in the Tampico oil region are badly unsettled. The rebels are endeavoring to put an export tax on oil that would more than double the cost of fuel for steamships, and the managers of the various oil companies refuse to comply with the exorbitant demand. As a result the oil men are holding themselves in readiness to get out whenever the situation become serious.

Mr. Doheny has large oil interests near Tampico.

DOUBTS WILSON'S SINCERITY.

Argentine Public Opinion Affected by Herald's Mexican Charges.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUENOS AIRES, July 3.—The New York Herald's charges of duplicity in Mexican negotiations on Secretary Bryan's part have been republished here, producing a very bad effect. The public now doubts the sincerity of President Wilson's Mexican policy, and thinks that favors to corporations may offset the good effect of the mediation.

The visiting American professors were guests of the President at the Colon Theatre last night.

PEACE FORUM'S OFFER.

President Tupper at Saltillo to Help Constitutionalists.

SALTILLO, July 3.—Gen. Venustiano Carranzo conferred today over a direct wire with Constitutionalist representatives in Washington, but made no statement as to what was discussed.

It is expected the Constitutionalists' reply to the meadiators, who have offered to use their good offices in arranging a conference between representatives of the Constitutionalist and Huerta delegates, will be forwarded within a few days. It was stated today that replies had not been received from Generals in the field to whom the proposal was submitted by Gen. Carranza.

Henry Allen Tupper, President of the International Peace Forum, has arrived here to offer his services in advancing the Constitutionalist cause in the United States. He conferred with Isidro Fabela, Acting Secretary of Foreign Relations, and probably will have a conference with Gen. Carranza later. Mr. Tupper previously had wired asking if he would be received and was assured that he would be welcome.

EVEN GRAPE JUICE BANNED.

Ginger Ale Also Denied Congressional Visitors to Battleship Michigan.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., July 3.—More than a score of Congressmen, with Gov. Goldsborough of Maryland, a number of Lieutenant Governors of various States and other officials, were the first persons, outside those on the official roster of the navy, to feel the effects of Secretary Daniels's "dry" order, which went into effect upon all United States naval vessels and in the navy yards and stations at midnight June 30.

It was when the party, who are here for the Independence Day celebration, were taken to League Island to inspect the battleship Michigan, which recently returned from Vera Cruz, that the force of the Secretary's order were felt after a long and dusty automobile trip to and from Valley Forge. Capt. Albert P. Niblack of the Michigan was showing the visitors over his ship and they duly came to his quarters.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I would like to offer you some refreshments, but you came too late."

Members of the party at once looked at their watches and learned that it was only a little after 6 o'clock.

"I don't mean too late today," explained the Captain, "but too late in the year. You should have been here before June 30. You know, of course, of the Secretary's order."

"But how about some ginger ale?" queried a thirsty lawmaker.

"Ginger ale has 6 per cent. of alcohol in its composition," said the now smiling Captain, "and, therefore, we do not allow it to come aboard."

"How about some grape juice?" asked another Congressman.

"Grape juice," said the imperturbable Captain, "contains 2 per cent. of alcohol, and no alcohol for drinking purposes is permitted aboard the ship."

There was water—but water was not what the majority wanted just then. Two or three fingers of liquor in seltzer was the real need. The young naval officers who heard the dialogue smiled happily as the dusty statesmen went over the side to inspect the site for the proposed 1,700-foot dry dock.

MITCHEL GOT VIEWS FOR COLONEL'S EARS

Malone at Luncheon Said Some Democrats Favored Him for Governor.

ONE GUEST FOR WHITMAN

Polk, Schneider, Cowan at Mayor's Conference a Few Hours Before Roosevelt's Pittsburgh Attack.

When Mayor Mitchel went to Oyster Bay on Thursday to visit Col. Roosevelt he was armed with a lot of political information and impressions gathered at a luncheon in the Downtown Association on Tuesday. The luncheon was arranged by Corporation Counsel Polk, and the guests, besides Mr. Mitchel—if he wasn't the real host—were County Clerk Schneider, Dudley Field Malone, John F. Cowan, and ex-Alderman John T. McCall. No secret was made of the fact that the purpose of the gathering was to discuss the political situation from the viewpoint of the unadulterated independent. None of those present was supposed to hesitate in expressing his real opinion. The result was a perfectly frank expression from all of them.

At the very outset it was argued that it would be easy to get the disgruntled Democrats in the State behind the Colonel and that he would threaten such inroads in the Republican ranks as to scare Chairman Barnes from doing anything else except indorse him.

"Barnes would have to swallow him," it was said.

One of the guests was very much opposed to this plan. He said that if he had to swallow any candidate who was not a straightout Democrat it would be a straightout Republican.

"I'm for District Attorney Whitman," he said.

This declaration provoked some protest but the Whitman advocate silenced it by a statement that if Mr. Roosevelt was nominated he would surely lose. He insisted that the Colonel could not win.

"Once Col Roosevelt squeezed into the Governorship," said the Whitman man, "but every other time he ran for office he ran behind his ticket. I believe he is the weakest man that could be named for Governor. Let me tell you that if Mr. Roosevelt is nominated Gov. Glynn will be the Tammany candidate, and Glynn will win. He could beat the Colonel easily. But if Mr. Whitman is nominated with the independent indorsement, Gov. Glynn would find that his business interests would not permit him to make the race. Col. Roosevelt says Mr. Whitman can be controlled by Barnes. Well, I happen to know that no man can control Mr. Whitman. He is too courageous to bend the knee to any man in the world."

Mr. Schneider said he was inclined to indorse this statement of the situation. He was also fairly certain that to nominate the Colonel would be to invite defeat and insure the election of the Tammany candidate.

Mr. Malone said there was a prevalent idea that the Colonel was stronger than any other man. Mr. Malone was told to study the figures of the elections in this State in which the Colonel asked for the support of his fellow citizens. Mayor Mitchel had remained silent up to this point.

He broke in to suggest that a big, strong Democrat be chosen, one that would be able to win the confidence of the voters of the State and who would also be acceptable to the Administration. A little later Mr. Mitchel said that perhaps such a man as Mr. Polk might fill the bill. A brief silence followed this suggestion.

Then the Whitman advocate bowed politely to Mr. Polk and said he hoped to be excused, but, without intending any offense, he thought Mr. Polk's nomination would not serve at all.

There followed a general discussion in which it was said an understanding had been arrived at by William R. Hearst and Gov. Glynn during their recent trip to Chicago to the effect that the Governor was to receive the support of Mr. Hearst for Governor and Mr. Glynn was to throw the weight of his influence to Mr. Hearst for United States Senator. One of the guests said he understood that Tammany Leader Murphy and Mr. Polk were on good terms. This was admitted to be the fact and it was intimated that perhaps Tammany might support Mr. Polk.

"Yes," said one of the company, "Tammany would support Polk like it supported Hearst. Its support was all right up to the time the votes were cast. It cost Hearst $490,000 to make that race and he was beaten. Has Mr. Polk got twice that amount of money to spend on the chance of reaching the Governor's chair? It would take that much and then he wouldn't win. I don't want any Tammany indorsement for any candidate I vote for."

One of the men said it was very difficult to build up any kind of a political organization without patronage. Then he turned to the Mayor and asked:

"Have you got any patronage left?"

"I think I have a few inspectorships," replied Mr. Mitchel.

"Oh, they are no good," was the reply. "You have distributed all the places you had among men who are absolutely of no use in an emergency like this. Rightly used, the patronage you had might have solved the difficulty for us and made the path clear. But not now. It's too late."

The Whitman man said he could not understand why some followers of the Wilson Administration wanted to have Mr. Roosevelt nominated.

"Why do they want to draft him?" was asked of Mr. Malone.

"Because they think he would have the best chance of winning," was the reply.

Another one of the guests said that he thought Mr. Whitman was getting a raw deal. He called attention to the fact that when Mr. Roosevelt said Mr. Whitman was controlled by Barnes the statement was sent to all the newspapers in the State, but when Mr. Whitman denied that there was any truth in the statement the news was confined to the newspapers in this city. Then he said:

"If you want to make sure of winning this State in the Fall and have a Governor that will not play politics with Tammany or with anybody else, but who will give us a fine administration, let us all get behind Mr. Whitman and put him in the field. Then we'll be doing something. Don't you really think so?"

There was a murmur of assent. One of the men asked what ex-Gov. Sulzer was going to do and how many votes he would get if he ran for office. The Whitman man replied in this way:

"Sulzer could poll from 75,000 to 100,000 votes as an independent candidate, and nearly all of them would be Democratic votes. He would roll up a large block of the votes along the east side of this borough, where he is very strong, and other big blocks of them would come from anti-Tammany sections up the State. He couldn't hurt Mr. Whitman, because the latter is a straight goods Republican, but he would kill off any candidate that had the Tammany indorsement, or any candidate that was hoping to win by a fusion of all the political elements. That's where Sulzer fits in."

One of the party said that upon reflection he thought Mr. Whitman would make the strongest candidate because Tammany could not attack him viciously. He added:

"Tammany's indorsement of Whitman for District Attorney put the stamp of righteousness upon him so far as Tammany was concerned. Tammany couldn't send its spellbinders out to say the man it supported for an important office a short time ago was unfit for a still higher office. The nomination of Mr. Whitman would put Tammany in a hole."

This statement provoked laughter. It was agreed that this point was well taken. One of the men present said yesterday to the reporter of THE TIMES that the discussion must have clearly shown Mayor Mitchel that neither Col. Roosevelt nor any member of the present city administration would make a strong enough candidate to beat Gov. Glynn.

POLITICS TABOO, MAYOR SAYS.

Colonel Gave Him a Rifle Sight for Tiger Hunting, Though.

According to Mayor Mitchel politics was tabooed as a topic of discussion at his visit with Col. Roosevelt at Sagamore Hill on Thursday evening. The Mayor and Mrs. Mitchel were the guests of the Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt at dinner. There were other dinner guests, among them Judge William L. Ransom, who is one of the directing forces in the Bull Moose organization in this State.

The Colonel, according to Mayor Mitchel, presented him with an extraordinarily fine rifle sight that the Mayor actually coveted and offered to lend him a rifle which he had used to bring down big game for the purpose of having it copied.

"Was it the idea that you were to bring down the Tammany Tiger with it?" the Mayor was asked.

"Well, the Colonel has shot jaguars with it," the Mayor replied with a laugh.

Mayor Mitchel was very anxious to have it emphatically said that he was not a candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination this year, and that if he was designated for any nomination in the primaries against his will, he would feel bound to decline it.

"I owe it to the fusion forces, to whom I owe my nomination for Mayor and to whom I made certain very definite and specific pledges, to stay right where I am," said the Mayor. "There is plenty of work for me to do right here, and I am going to do it."

On the other hand, it is understood that the Mayor will feel free to act as he sees fit, or as the people want him to, in 1916, when there will be another Gubernatorial election in this State.

"There was absolutely no suggestion that I run for any office," said Mayor Mitchel in discussing his meeting with Col. Roosevelt. "The Colonel, I think, appreciated my position."

"Would you give your support to any candidate that had the indorsement of the Progressives and the independent Democrats?" the Mayor was asked.

"That is a bridge I will not cross until I get to it," said Mayor Mitchel. "I know of any number of men who would make good candidates for Governor."

There have been rumors that a coalition between the anti-Tammany Democrats and the Progressives in the campaign this Fall was not entirely out of the question. All these rumors, however, made the rounds prior to the Colonel's Pittsburgh speech, in which he made such a ferocious attack on the Wilson Administration. The independent anti-Tammany Democrats are all Wilson Democrats.

CUSTOMS MEN DIDN'T GET THIS FINE FOOD

Incoming Stewards, Ignorant of McAdoo's Order, Had Prepared Holiday Repasts.

BUT NONE CAME TO PARTAKE

A Wonderful British Breakfast for 300 Men Wasted on the Mauretania.

The order prohibiting customs officials from eating on board Atlantic liners, which went into effect on Thursday, created great surprise yesterday to the chief stewards of the Mauretania, Carpathia, and Adriatic, who were all prepared to feed from 100 to 300 customs men at breakfast, luncheon or dinner according to the hour of arrival.

Chief Steward Jones of the Mauretania said he could not understand it. He had grilled soles, York ham and eggs, Cambridge sausages stuffed with tomatoes, grilled chicken, various kinds of cereals and fruits and rice cakes, all ready for breakfast, and no one came to eat.

R. M. Cooke, chief steward of the Carpathia, which arrived from Naples in time for luncheon, had pillau fowl, macaroni au gratin, bouillibaisse à la Marseillaise, thon à la Biskrah, and other delicacies prepared, but the official guests came not.

One solitary Acting Deputy Collector, who came up from Quarantine on the Adriatic, sat in the dining saloon and enjoyed the meal from the grapefruit cocktail to the coffee. He told the steward that he would like to take a menu to the pier to show the Acting Deputy Surveyors and Inspectors who were examining the baggage, and the Appraisers what had been provided for them, but he had not got the heart, he said.

This is what J. F. Stanyer, chief steward of the White Star liner Adriatic, had ready last night for the customs men to eat on the eve of their national celebration:

Grape Fruit en Cocktail.
Hors d'Oeuvre Varies.
Consomme Froid. Potage Stamboul.
Brill, Ravigote.
Lobster Newburg.
Chicken Croquettes, Perigord.
Southdown Mutton, Guava Jelly.
Duckling, Nivernaise.
Ribs and Sirloin of Beef, Raifort.
French Beans. Spring Carrots Vichy.
Potatoes—Boiled New and Browned.
Savoury Rice.
Salad Romaine.
Imperatrice Pudding.
Compote of Peaches. Patisserie Neapolitan.
French Ice Cream, Wafers.
Dessert. Coffee.

The customs officials who board the ships at Quarantine, generally two to six in number, are not included in the order forbidding feeding on liners issued by the Collector of the Port, it was said yesterday, nor are the two officers stationed at each pier while a ship is alongside.

DROP DYNAMITE CASES.

Tveitmoe, McCain, Davis and Others Go Free.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 3.—Judge A. B. Anderson of the United States Court, who sentenced the dynamiters, today disposed of the remaining cases. On motion of Frank O. Dailey, United States District Attorney, the cases against Olaf A. Tveitmoe, William J. McCain, James E. Ray, Richard H. Houlihan, Fred Shireman, and Harry S. Jones were nolle prossed.

George E. Davis, who has been held since last October, when he was arrested in New York after a confession, was taken before Judge Anderson, and sentence was suspended on his plea of guilty. He was released immediately. Tveitmoe, McCain, Ray, Houlihan, and Shireman were freed on the ground of insufficient evidence. The minor connection of Jones, if any, with the conspiracy did not warrant a long and expensive trial, Attorney Dailey said.

THREATENED TO KILL WOODS

Russian Inventor Who Sought Money Sent to Bellevue.

A man who said he was Carl Dornfeld, a Russian, of 4,439 Third Avenue, was sent to Bellevue Hospital last night by Magistrate Ten Eyck in the Men's Night Court, after Detective Charles O. Nelson of the Tremont Avenue Police Station had testified that the defendant had written a twenty-page letter to Police Commissioner Woods threatening to kill him unless the Commissioner sent him money to float an invention which he had perfected.

The police say Dornfeld wrote similar letters to J. P. Morgan and other rich men.

lowed you are, whether you will or not, the inevitable leader.

But history has abundantly demonstrated the truth that no man can be both the leader of a great political party and an editor of an independent journal. The demands of the political campaign and of the editorial office are inconsistent. Our intimate fellowship has increased the affection and esteem of all your associates for you; the events of the past five years have increased our faith in the righteousness and ultimate success of the principles of which you are America's greatest interpreter. I am especially glad, as are all my associates, to be assured by you that you will continue as special contributor to use the columns of the Outlook as your chief means of interpreting these principles through the printed page. Sincerely yours,
LYMAN ABBOTT.

Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, Sagamore Hill, Oyster Bay, N. Y.

Special Contributor Now.

As indicated in the foregoing letters, Mr. Roosevelt will contribute to The Outlook during the coming year a series of exclusive special articles, the first of which is entitled "The People and Judge-Made Laws." This will be followed from time to time by other articles from his pen on important questions of domestic and international interest.

When Col. Roosevelt became associated with The Outlook beginning May 5, 1909, it was announced by that publication that he would be something more than a contributor; in fact, his place was regarded as analogous to that of a "consulting engineer" who would be called into conference with the staff, the same as was done on "any big undertaking like the Panama Canal."

It was pointed out in the announcement of the Outlook at that time that, as the beginning of the nineteenth century had been marked by a movement toward political democracy, so had the beginning of the twentieth century been characterized by a movement toward industrial democracy, and that in the latter movement Theodore Roosevelt had been recognized as a world leader. Thereupon the Outlook congratulated itself on the fact that his leadership, expressed for seven years in his Presidential messages, was thenceforth to be expressed through its columns.

When Col. Roosevelt, shortly thereafter started on his African hunt, he wrote articles for The Outlook from time to time on passing incidents and questions, though the narrative of his hunting trip was chronicled exclusively in Scribner's Magazine.

It was rumored in May a year ago that the Colonel was about to sever his connection with The Outlook, because he demanded more pay, and this was not granted to him. At the time, Lawrence Abbott denied the report, and explained that the Colonel had a contract with the publication which had no time limit to it. It was generally understood that Col. Roosevelt drew $30,000 a year from The Outlook.

Again there were reports of a disagreement when W. B. Howland, Vice President and publisher of The Outlook, with which he had been connected for twenty-three years, resigned, while retaining his share in the ownership of the publication, and bought a large share in the Independent.

Mr. Howland, a Progressive, had taken a prominent part in the Colonel's campaign, and it was said that he and the Colonel did not agree with the Abbotts on certain Progressive policies. Nothing came of this reported break, and again on July 25 of the same year, when it was whispered that the Colonel was about to leave The Outlook, Lawrence Abbott emphatically denied that their "intimate relations" had undergone any change.

PLANS FUSION IN THE STATE.

Colonel Seeks an Independent Democrat to Head Ticket.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 3.—There was a persistent report here today, following the visit of Mayor Mitchel last night, that Col. Roosevelt, defeated in his hope of arranging some sort of a working agreement with the anti-Barnes Republicans, was seeking escape from the nomination of a straight Progressive ticket in this State next Fall by laying plans for a Fusion or anti-boss campaign.

Strength was added to this report by the fact that it was understood, upon excellent authority, that other independent Democrats of prominence would soon put in an appearance at Sagamore Hill. The Colonel refused to affirm or deny the report or to enter into any discussion of New York State politics tonight.

The impression here was that Col. Roosevelt and Mayor Mitchel had a very intimate talk about the situation. It is believed that the name of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt, a cousin of Col. Roosevelt's, was mentioned as a possible candidate in the event that a fusion movement could be arranged. Franklin D. Roosevelt is an independent Democrat and a great favorite of President Wilson.

In view of Col. Roosevelt's attack upon the Wilson Administration at Pittsburgh there was some feeling that a Fusion movement headed by Franklin D. Roosevelt would be difficult to arrange. Others felt, however, that in a fight against machine politics in the State it would be possible to put aside National politics in arranging a fusion ticket, just as the fusion ticket was made up in the Mayoralty campaign when Mayor Mitchel was indorsed by the Progressives in the battle to down Tammany Hall. It was pointed out that Col. Roosevelt and his Progressives were just as strongly opposed to the policies of the National Democratic Administration then as they are now, and that the Democrats had no kindly feeling for the Progressive Party doctrines.

The opinion was also expressed that a fusion ticket indorsed by Col. Roosevelt and on which there was some representation given to the anti-Barnes Republicans would draw a heavy independent Republican vote in the State despite the fact that an independent Democrat was the nominee for Governor. If such a ticket could be arranged it is believed that the Progressives would demand the right to name the candidate for United States Senator.

Mayor Mitchel's visit to Col. Roosevelt has been taken as an indication that President Wilson would feel kindly toward a fusion movement against the continuation of Charles Murphy and Tammany Hall in power in New York State politics the minute he was convinced that the regular Democratic ticket in the State would be dominated by Murphy.

Would Stop Attacks on Wilson.

It is believed that Col. Roosevelt's bitter attacks upon the national policies would be put aside in the interest of good government in the State. Mr. Wilson showed his interest in and sympathy for the Fusion ticket in Manhattan in 1912 by sending Dudley Field Malone, then an Assistant Secretary of State and now Collector of the Port, to New York to deliver an address. Another point brought out was the fact that the Progressives were responsible for Mr. Mitchel's nomination as Mayor.

A Fusion Government would be welcomed by Col. Roosevelt, it is said, because it would provide the best means for the Progressive Party to make a favorable showing in the State and obviate all danger of Col. Roosevelt being drafted as a nominee of his party. A Fusion ticket backed by the approval of the Colonel and President Wilson, it is felt, would be sure to get a heavy vote and stand an excellent chance of success. Its election would give the Progressives a much firmer grip than they have now in New York State, and its defeat, if it made a good showing, would not severely damage the party and would give the leaders the opportunity to keep up the slogan that they were fighting for good government and principles.

Whatever may be the result of the agitation for a Fusion movement, there is no doubt felt here that the Colonel is anxiously hoping that it can be arranged, and is giving it his support and much of his time. Franklin D. Roosevelt is by no means the only available man who has been discussed for the nomination as Governor, it is said, and if it should develop that there were too many obstacles in the way of the reported plan to name him, it is believed that other names will soon be heard.

That the national Administration would like to see Franklin D. Roosevelt the nominee for Governor on the regular Democratic ticket is generally admitted. But it is understood that the national leaders feel that Mr. Murphy, with a tight grip on the situation despite his defeat in the Mayoralty election, will not consent to any such proposition.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, it is said, has had thoughts of a nomination as Governor. According to State Senator Thomas O'Keefe of this town, a strong anti-Murphy Democrat, Mr. Roosevelt once said to him at Washington that he would like a nomination on the Democratic ticket with the Progressive indorsement, but that he believed there was no chance of such an outcome.

When Col. Roosevelt sailed for Spain he issued a statement in which he practically sounded a call for a fusion movement against the bosses. He said the time had come for all good citizens to forget their party affiliations and fight for good government. In view of the present agitation this statement has been recalled as significant.

Challenge to Penrose.

Col. Roosevelt tonight replied to Senator Boies Penrose, who said yesterday in Pittsburgh that he was tired of being assailed by the Colonel and would make public some unwritten history if the Colonel did not let up. Apparently Col. Roosevelt had regained all of his old-time vigor when he read it. He dictated this challenge to Penrose:

"I shall be delighted to have Mr. Penrose publish any letters of mine and I shall publish some of them myself in case he does not publish those I think it best to have published."

The Colonel spent a quiet day. One man, owner of a cure for malaria, called to see him and offered a cure composed principally of saltpetre, he said. When he was unable to see the Colonel he mailed the medicine.

DAILY TRANSATLANTIC CABLE DISPATCHES TO THE TIMES

NICKALLS TIPS COLLEGIANS

Diamond Sculls Also Seems Sure to Leave England in Possession of Italian Sculler.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 3.—American oarsmen covered themselves with glory today at Henley in two magnificent rowing races for the Grand Challenge Cup, which resulted in the final heat for the big event being left for two American crews to fight it out on Independence Day.

The Universities of Yale, Cornell, and Pennsylvania and the Vesper Boat Club of Philadelphia all made unsuccessful attempts to capture the trophy in past years, and tomorrow will mark America's first victory.

A bad break in the weather, with much rain, affected today's attendance, but Americans now in England will flock to Henley tomorrow to witness what promises to be a tremendous struggle between Harvard and Boston oarsmen.

Both American crews today rowed in grand form. Winnipeg led Harvard at the start, but the Americans rowed with splendid uniformity and dash throughout the trying race, stalling off the repeated spurts by the Canadians, and won by three-quarters of a length.

The Boston Boat Club had an even harder race against the Mayence crew of Germany, with the result in doubt right up to the finish, for the Germans put in some wonderful spurting and nearly got up, Boston winning by its forward canvas. The Boston crew is composed entirely of old Harvard men, so that it will be a big day for that university.

It is a notable coincidence that in both races the time for the half distance and the finish was precisely the same, namely, 3:24 to Fawley and 7:00 for the full distance.

The American contingent present was naturally elated, and showed the greatest enthusiasm for the Harvard crew, being heard all over the course.

HARVARD MEN IN SHELLS.

Victories a Big Triumph for Grads' and Undergraduates.

By The Associated Press.

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England, July 3.—The Grand Challenge Cup, the trophy emblematic of supremacy in eight-oared rowing and in rowing generally, will go to the United States this year, either in the possession of the Harvard University second eight-oared crew or the crew of the Union Boat Club of Boston, which is comprised of men who also learned their rowing at Harvard.

This fact was made certain today in the contests of the Henley regatta, when Harvard defeated the Winnipeg eight in the semi-finals and the Boston oarsmen took the measure of the Mayence crew in a stirring race. Two American crews tomorrow will strive over the course of 1 mile 550 yards to see which is the better, and that the race will be an exciting one was made evident by the time each made in gaining the final today. Both crews pulled their shells past the finish flag in seven minutes flat—time that had been beaten only on three previous occasions. Tomorrow will be the fourth time that foreigners have won the coveted trophy, but the first time that two crews from outside the United Kingdom have competed for it in the final.

To make matters worse for the English oarsmen the Diamond Sculls, the next important prize of the regatta, seems almost certain to go to Italy, as Giuseppe Sinigaglia has easily disposed of every oarsman he has raced against, including Robert Dibble of Toronto, the American champion, and should have no difficulty in defeating C. M. Stuart, Trinity, in the final tomorrow. Sinigaglia reached the final today by winning from Dibble, and Stuart won his place by defeating E. G. Williams of the Viking Rowing Club.

Englishmen Chagrined.

Englishmen make no attempt to hide their chagrin at this successful invasion of a sport which, until recent years, was considered exclusively Britain's own. However, they are still getting a lot of enjoyment out of the regatta by cheering the college crews in the minor events and looking on with admiration at the superb oarsmanship of the Americans and the sculling of the Italian. They are divided in their opinion as to what will be the result of the race tomorrow between Harvard and the Union Boat Club, but they confess that the Americans are likely to provide in the contest one of the greatest thrills ever experienced at Henley.

Both American crews tonight expressed the greatest confidence of their ability to be returned victors in tomorrow's race. The Harvard oarsmen said they would repeat their recent victory over Yale at New London and also over the crews at Philadelphia, while the Bostonians promise to prove that, but for a foul, they would have beaten the collegians in the American regatta.

The only thing now left to the Englishmen is the Henley record of 6 minutes 51 seconds, in which time the race has been rowed twice. The Americans will go after this record tomorrow.

The general opinion of the English oarsmen is that the American crews won their places in the final, despite their style, because their training methods were the better. Of the Harvard crew a Leander oarsman said tonight: "I have never seen a better crew. They row with perfect uniformity and are a credit to America, which has shown the world of sport what team work really means." Leander already is considering the possibility of raising a crew of experienced men to regain the trophy in 1915.

Guy Nickalls, who coached the Yale crew which recently defeated Harvard, said tonight of Robert F. Herrick, coach of the Harvard second crew and his men:

"Herrick has a great bunch of boys and has done wonders with them. He has taught them the exact English style. If Herrick continues to coach then I shall be nervous at New London next year. They have got a much better catch and swing than they had when they met Yale. The Boston men are the strongest crew, but they have not got the swing, and I believe the collegians will beat them."

Mr. Herrick tonight expressed his pleasure at the reception he and his men had received at the hands of the Englishmen.

Prince Alexander of Teck and Prince George, fourth son of King George, were interested spectators of the races.

Bad Weather for Rowing.

The races were rowed in miserably wet weather with a strong wind, but the conditions did not cause either of the American crews to vary the almost perfect watermanship they had shown since their arrival here, which has called forth the admiration of English experts.

The race between Harvard and Winnipeg, which came first, was a hard one, and was rowed in the best time recorded at this year's regatta. Winnipeg went away at 42 strokes while Harvard struck 38 to the minute. The Canadians gained a slight lead at the start and at the quarter mile were a quarter of a length in front. Harvard then came up and got the nose of their shell in front, but Winnipeg caught them again.

At the half mile the boats were level, but before the half-way mark was reached Harvard had pushed a little ahead again. The time was 3 minutes 24 seconds.

The Canadians then spurted and Harvard replied. Harvard then went in front and at the mile were leading by three-quarters of a length. They were rowing 36 to the minute and retained their advantage to the end, although the Canadians made a last great effort to overhaul them.

On crossing the line Harvard seemed perfectly fresh. They had maintained their form throughout and had rowed a perfect race in a drizzling rain and a strong following wind.

On the other hand, Winnipeg showed signs of faltering after passing the half-mile post and were rowed out at the finish, when they were just able to raise a feeble reply to Harvard's cheer.

When the second semi-final started excitement was keen. The American spectators, stirred to enthusiasm by Harvard's victory, cheered the Unions (also old Harvard oarsmen) as they left for the starting line.

The shells got off to a good start. The Germans began with forty-one strokes to the first minute, against Union's forty. Boston took the lead at once, and were leading by a good quarter of a length at the quarter mile.

The Germans then started rowing faster, but Boston appeared to have taken their measure.

At the half mile Boston was leading by half a length, but lost little of their advantage before the halfway mark was reached. The time was 0:3:24, and Boston was just leading.

The Gemans were rowing forty strokes a minute at the three-quarter mile mark, where Boston was a mere quarter of a length ahead and rowing a long thirty-six.

Boston was still a quarter length in front at the mile, where the Germans spurted, but could not make any impression.

Another magnificent effort by the Germans in passing the grandstand brought them closer together, but the Bostonians passed the line with only part of the bow deck in front in seven minutes flat—the same excellent time as had been accomplished by their fellow-countrymen.

The Germans and Bostonians exchanged hearty cheers at the conclusion of the race, which found the Bostonians still fresh, while their opponents were completely rowed out.

The Harvard crew was composed as follows: Bow, L. Saltonstall, J. Talcott, H. H. Meyer, H. S. Middendorf, J. W. Middendorf, D. P. Morgan, and Louis Curtis; stroke, Charles Lunn; coxswain, H. L. Kreger.

The Union crew was as follows: Bow, J. Balch, E. Farley, R. Tappan, S. A. Sargent, J. E. Waide, L. Withington, and Paul Withington; stroke, R. Cutler; coxswain, C. P. Abeles.

ENGLAND'S FIFTH DEFEAT.

Grand Challenge Cup Has Been Won by Three Countries.

The Grand Challenge Cup which this year will come to the United States, has left England only on four other occasions. It was captured by the Royal Nautical Club of Ghent, Belgium, in 1906, 1907, and 1909, and by the Sydney Rowing Club, New South Wales, in 1912.

Many other American and foreign crews have tried for it in previous years. In 1895 Cornell was defeated in the fifth heat by Trinity; in 1896 Yale fell before Leander in the first heat, in 1897 Utrecht University succumbed to Leander in the third heat, in 1899 the Argonaut Rowing Club of Toronto, Canada, was beaten by London in the sixth heat; in 1900 the Royal Nautical Club of Ghent, Belgium, lost to Leander in the third heat; in 1901 the University of Pennsylvania went down before Leander in the first heat, and the Royal Nautical Club of Ghent to the same club in the third heat; in 1902 the Argonaut Rowing Club of Toronto trailed Third Trinity in the fifth heat; in 1905 the Royal Nautical Club of Ghent lost to Leander in the final, after the Vesper Boat Club of Philadelphia had been defeated by the same club in the fourth heat; in 1906 the Argonaut Rowing Club of Toronto was defeated by Trinity Hall in the seventh heat.

The Diamond Sculls, emblematic of the world's sculling championship, have attracted many American oarsmen, but only one really representative sculler from the United States met with success. This was Edward Hanlan Ten Eyck, who captured the event in 1897, although many British critics questioned his amateur status, owing to his father being engaged professionally in the sport. B. H. Howell, a New York oarsman, while a student at Trinity College, Cambridge, won the sculls in 1898 and 1899, but as he spent most of his life in England few credited the victory to America.

HOAX LURES SOCIETY AS MOVIE SUPERS

Leaders of London Social and Artistic Life Are Tricked by Barrie, Barker, and Shaw.

MIDNIGHT THEATRE SUPPER

Guests Secretly Filmed at Tables on Stage, Then as Audience in Auditorium for a Revue.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 3.—A colossal but brilliant hoax, whereby the Premier and Mrs. Asquith, the Duchess of Rutland, the Duchess of Sutherland, and 150 others prominent in the social and artistic life of London were made to play rôles as supers in a cinematograph film was carried through successfully in the small hours of this morning by that arch joker, Sir James Barrie, Granville Barker, who will produce Barrie's new play in the Fall, and George Bernard Shaw, who, when the proceedings were finishing, let the cat out of the bag.

The bait that lured the guests was an invitation from Barrie and Barker to a "cinematograph supper in two acts," at the Savoy Theatre, beginning at midnight.

Carriages began to arrive at the theatre at 11:30 o'clock, bringing, in addition to the Premier, other members of his family and the two Duchesses named, Mr. and Mrs. Waldorf Astor, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Hope Hawkins, Lord and Lady Helmsley, Sir Alfred and Lady Mond, Lady Lytton, Lady Diana Manners, Sir Arthur Pinero, Sir Philip Sassoon, Sir Edgar and Lady Speyer, Sir Herbert and Lady Tree, Mr. and Mrs. Cornwallis West, W. B. Yeats, Mr. and Mrs. John Lavery, Haddon Chambers, G. K. Chesterton, Lord and Lady Howard De Walden, Ina Claire, Ethel Levey, Pauline Chase, Charles Frohman, Lord Chief Justice and Lady Reading.

As the guests entered the foyer of the theatre a moving picture apparatus was working all the time, and as they sat down to supper, which was served at small tables on stage the film operators still kept busy. The supper over, the guests moved into the auditorium and the stage was cleared of the supper tables. This ended the first act.

Act second consisted of a revue arranged by Frank Finney and made up of a number of playlets in which several well-known actors and actresses appeared. The cinematograph worked occasionally during the performance of these playlets, the last of which was a burlesque version of Barrie's play, "The Legend of Leonora," in which Marie Tempest played She.

The action was interrupted on various occasions by gags from members in the audience who took up their cues from the dialogue on the stage. The last of these carefully placed interruptions came from George Bernard Shaw, who rose in his seat in the audience. The cinematograph was carefully trained on Shaw, who, after rattling off a series of smart sayings, explained that he was doing this merely to keep things going while the operators were filming him and the audience. Shaw then went on to give an explanation of Barrie's supper party.

"You understand, a Scotsman doesn't give you a supper for nothing," he said.

"You are all supers in a revue which Barrie is writing for Granville Barker. You'll have the pleasure of seeing yourselves—and me—on the film, for I'm working tonight for a greater dramatist than myself."

Seizing a property sword, Shaw brandished it, crying, "Who'll follow me?" Chesterton and Barker cried, "I will follow!" and charged the stage. Then the curtain fell and the cinematograph machine stopped.

The guests filed out, laughing at the realization that they had been "caught." Whether Barrie and Barker will be able to carry out their plan of incorporating this morning's films in their Autumn revue remains to be seen.

KAISER'S NEW STEWARD.

Conrad Uhl to Provision Imperial Residences and Yachts.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 3.—Conrad Uhl, well known to American visitors to Berlin as the founder and long-time proprietor of the Hotel Bristol in the Unter den Linden, is about to become the Kaiser's Commissary General. He will have complete charge of provisioning the Kaiser's fifty-four royal castles, shooting-boxes, yachts, and other habitats, and his Majesty's elaborate wine cellars in various parts of the empire.

His appointment appears to be due to the fact that the Kaiser's entertaining propensities have outgrown the capacity of the bureaucrat who has long been in charge of the department.

Herr Uhl sold the Hotel Bristol eight or nine years ago at a handsome price and retired, in accordance with his contract with the purchasers, never again to engage in the hotel business within 100 miles of Berlin. He has been married twice, on each occasion with the daughter of a New York brewer.

BUENOS AIRES, July 3.—Dr. Victorino de la Plaza, acting President of the Republic, received in audience today Harry Erwin Bard, Director of the Pan-American division of the American Association for International Conciliation. Later the Minister of Instruction gave a banquet in honor of Mr. Bard and the American educators who are accompanying him on his tour of the South American republics.

BRITISH GOLF CLUBS FOR THE PRESIDENT

American Business Men in London Present a Set Specially Made for Him.

COUSIN JOHN TO BRING THEM

Had Been Commissioned to Buy the Sticks, and Luncheon Club Heard of It.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 3.—The American Luncheon Club at the Savoy today made a formal presentation of a set of British golf clubs to President Wilson, the latter's cousin, John Wilson, receiving them on his behalf and promising to deliver them personally to the White House. E. A. Seitz, the toastmaster, explaining the genesis of the gift, said:

"When 'Uncle' John Wilson was about to start for England, Cousin Woodrow expressed the desire to get a first class set of British golf clubs. When Cousin John reached London he promptly aired the President's ambition, with the result that one of our prominent members, Wilson Cross, with his usual generosity in spending other people's money, suggested that the American Luncheon Club should present a set of clubs to the President. The suggestion met with hearty approval, and James Braid was commissioned to turn out the best set he could produce."

John Wilson, in accepting the gift on behalf of Cousin Woodrow, said:

"I know President Wilson will be like a boy when he gets them. He's more boy than man when by himself. In his name, I thank you."

Asked if he would pay duty on the President's clubs or smuggle them, John Wilson replied:

"I took a coat over in February for the President, but when I intimated to the customs officer who it was for the man suggested that I pay double duty. I won't attempt to get the clubs in free."

James Braid, maker of the set, thanked the members of the club for the honor done in commissioning him to make the President's golf sticks. He said it was one of the greatest moments of his life. He hoped the President would come to England soon and be his partner in a foursome or opponent in singles.

Sir Leo Riddle, the principal English guest, praised President Wilson as "one of the greatest men in the world." He added:

"This is an historic occasion. It appeals to the imagination that a body of business men in London came together, regardless of political differences, to send a simple gift to a man who rules the destinies of the mighty nation across the water."

WORLD SHAKESPEARE FETE.

Nations to Celebrate 300th Anniversary of Poet's Death.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 3.—A meeting presided over by Viscount Bryce today discussed a world-wide scheme to celebrate in 1916 the three hundredth anniversary of Shakespeare's death. Those present included Ambassador Page, Arthur J. Balfour, the Earl of Plymouth, Sir Squire Bancroft, and Sir Herbert Tree.

Acceptance of membership on the general committee was received from diplomatic representatives of Germany, France, Italy, Spain, Austria-Hungary, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Switzerland, Holland, Greece, Persia, China, Argentina, Chile, and from the High Commissioners of the British dominions. Many American universities have expressed the desire to join.

Ambassador Page moved that the tercentenary of the death of Shakespeare should be commemorated in a manner worthy of his memory and of the veneration in which Shakespeare was held by the English-speaking peoples and by the world at large.

Mr. Balfour, in seconding the motion, said it was a very happy inspiration that put the responsibility for the first resolution in the hands of the American Ambassador. It emphasized at the start of the proceedings that they were regarded as embracing the whole English-speaking world.

The meeting appointed an executive committee to consider the best means of carrying out the celebration. The members include Ambassador Page, the Earl of Plymouth, Bishop Boyd Carpenter, Lord Burghclere, Lord Tennyson, Hugh Chisholm, Edmund Gosse, Sir Sidney Lee, Sir William Osler, Sir Herbert Tree, and Prof. Gollancz.

DE KAY APPEAL POSTPONED.

Rumors That Dispute with Jewelry Firm May Be Settled.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 3.—Amid rumors of a settlement, the appeal of John W. De Kay against the judgment for the defendant rendered in the suit brought by Callows & Sons, the jewelers, to recover about $15,000 balance on account of goods sold to him was postponed unexpectedly today until November next.

Mr. De Kay's counsel had concluded a five days' argument for setting aside the judgment when the court stopped the hearing for the present, probably being influenced by the intimation that an amicable settlement of the action was possible. The extraordinarily high legal costs already incurred tended to this decision.

HIGH PRICES FOR PICTURES.

Sale in London of Canvases by Millet, Corot and Other Masters.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 3.—Some high prices were realized today at a sale at Christie's of pictures, mainly of the Barbizon school, which had been collected by Archibald Coats. The entire sale brought in $215,000.

For Corot's "Dance of the Nymphs, a Memory of Morte Fontaine," Carfax & Co. gave $34,650. It represents a sylvan landscape with a deep wood, through which are caught glimpses of the rays of the setting sun. At the edge of a lake in the foreground four nymphs dance, hand in hand, to the pipe of a shepherd, and another nymph reclines on the ground.

Silva White obtained for $30,450 Troyon's "Glade with Cows." It represents a corner of a pasture under a great clump of trees. Several cattle are grazing or lying ruminating, and bright sunshine strikes through the trees and lights up their trunks. The same bidder bought for $28,825 another of Troyon's pastorals, his "Oxen at Their Toil." This shows a team of oxen, yoked to a plow, which are just turning at the end of a furrow. A lad guides the foremost couple, and a peasant, bent with his effort, is raising the plow from the ground.

Millet's "Guardian of the Flock" fetched $29,400, and was knocked down to Knoedler. The figure of a young shepherdess, leaning against a rock as she knits, is silhouetted against a brilliant sky. The sun is obscured by a rain cloud, and behind her and on either side are her sheep. Daubigny's quiet "Evening" also became the property of Knoedler for $18,900. It shows a barge lying in the middle of a peaceful stream. A woman washes clothes in the foreground, ducks paddle across the water and stand on the bank, and a clump of trees throws an almost unbroken reflection in the water.

Corot's "Lake" went to Silva White for $15,225. It represents the shore of a lake, with two women conversing near a clump of trees and a man in a punt near the bank. On rising ground in the background is seen a château.

Knoedler paid $10,500 for Millet's "Cliffs of Gruchy," a glimpse of the sea through a cleft in the rocks. Dupré's "Pasture Near the Oise" was knocked down for $11,025. For Diaz's "Deserted Nymphs," which represents four nymphs lamenting the flight through the trees of Cupid, $7,612 was given.

Other notable prices realized were $4,305 for Meissonier's "Regnard, the Dramatist, in His Studio"; $3,625 for Ricard's "Young Musician," $3,555 for Duprés "Thatched Cottage," $2,887 for Claude Lorraine's "Juno Confiding Io to the Care of Argus," $2,625 for Meissonier's "Man-at-Arms," and $2,205 for Velasquez's portrait of the Countess Ruffo Bonneval de la Fard.

SALE OF MODERN PICTURES.

Two Collections Dispersed Under the Hammer in London.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 3.—A sale of modern pictures and drawings took place today at Christie's, collections of W. McArthur and William Thorburn, reinforced by a few lots, the property of a collector whose name was not revealed, being dispersed. Most of the pictures were of the Continental schools, though a few of the British school also were offered.

For Maris's "Towing-Path," showing the bank of a Dutch canal with a peasant in a white blouse riding a white horse, and another man with two horses, while a barge and sailing boats are in the water way, was knocked down for $7,350. A still better price, $8,400, was given for Fantin-Latour's "Immortality." This represents a winged female figure with flowing red drapery in the clouds. She holds a palm-leaf in her left hand and scatters flowers with her right, and in the distance are seen the towers of a city.

An interior by Lhermitte, "Asking a Blessing," brought in $3,937. It shows a peasant cottage, lit by a single narrow window, in the centre of the background. A family sits at meat, as a woman stands with bowed head and clasped hands to say grace. For another interior from the brush of J. Israels $4,830 was bid. It was his "Washing-Day," and represents a woman bending over a tub in front of the window of a bare cottage.

Two companion drawings of the same artist were sold. His "Going to the Fields," showing a party of peasants and children riding on a wagon to the harvest field, while a beggar woman and her child trail behind, fetched $2,529, and his "Returning from the Fields," a peasant trundling a wheelbarrow filled with potatoes, alongside his son with another barrow, and behind them another group of his wife and her children, followed by a goat, was knocked down for $2,362.

AUSTRIA MOURNS AT ROYAL FUNERAL

Great Crowds File Past Coffins of Murdered Archduke and His Wife in Court Chapel.

EMPEROR AT THE SERVICE

Cheered as He Drives Through Vienna Streets—Anti-Servian Demonstrations.

VIENNA, July 3.—In the presence of Emperor Francis Joseph, the new heir to the throne—the Archduke Charles Francis Joseph—many Archdukes and Archduchesses, Cabinet Ministers, diplomats, and high military and civil officials, funeral services for the Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife, the Duchess of Hohenberg, who were assassinated last week, were held in the chapel of the Hofburg this afternoon.

Emperor Francis Joseph and the members of the imperial family had assembled in the Gobelin salon of the Hofburg and proceeded thence to the chapel. The aged Emperor and the new heir-apparent to the throne occupied seats on the oratorium above the right side of the high altar, while the Ambassadors had places on the left. Twenty members of the Corps of Gentlemen at Arms, in gorgeous uniforms, stood at attention at the sides of the catafalque.

The ecclesiastical procession, when the Emperor and the imperial party had taken their seats, came slowly down the aisle headed by the court master of ceremonies and twenty acolytes carrying lighted candles and took places at the sides of the coffins. The Cardinal Prince Piffi, Archbishop of Vienna, assisted by two Bishops, officiated at the service, which was very brief. The only music was an anthem, which was beautifully sung by the court choir, composed entirely of boys.

Later in the evening the children of the Archduke and the Duchess, accompanied by the Countess Chotek, proceeded to the chapel and prayed by the side of the coffins of their parents. Their grief was heart-rending.

Emperor Francis Joseph left the suburban palace of Schoenbrunn at an early hour this morning for the Hofburg, within the city, and as he passed through the streets thousands of people cheered him heartily.

Before the funeral service took place great crowds of mourners visited the chapel, and a continuous procession marched past the catafalques on which the bodies were lying in silver coffins ornamented with gold. That of the Archduke was decorated with gold bands and oak leaves, while that of the Duchess was covered with lilies. Tall candlesticks surrounded the catafalques, bearing enormous wax candles, while at each corner was a silver girandole with fifteen branches in which were burning candles. Life guards formed a guard of honor.

Two wreaths from the late Archduke's children had been deposited in front of the coffin. They were composed of small white roses on a background of palms, and large white roses, with red and white streamers bearing the simple inscription, "Sofie, Max, Ernst." Other floral offerings numbering several hundred were placed in the apartments adjoining the chapel.

Masses were said at all the altars of the chapel from 8 o'clock in the morning till noon. At 10 o'clock the court choir entered and sang the "Miserere," while the bells of one of the city churches tolled from noon until 1 o'clock.

The bodies were removed at 10 o'clock tonight to the Western Station, to be taken to Artstetten, Lower Austria, where interment will take place. Enormous crowds in the streets through which the funeral cortège passed paid their last respects to the dead, and cordially acclaimed Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, who accompanied the bodies. The entire Vienna garrison turned out to render military honors.

The train had hardly started for Artstetten when anti-Servian demonstrations broke out in the vicinity of the Servian Legation. The demonstrators were dispersed by the police.

PECHLARN, Saturday, July 4.—The funeral train bearing the bodies of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenburg arrived here from Vienna at 12:30 o'clock this morning and was received by the civil and military authorities. At 2:30 o'clock the coffins will be transferred to a ferryboat which will cross the Danube with them to Artstetten. The route of the ferryboat will be illuminated by torches.

SEES A GOOD FUTURE FOR CLAFLIN HOUSE

If Modernized It Will Be Profitable in a Restricted Territory, The Economist Says.

DOING BUSINESS AS USUAL

Company Is Carrying On Operations Under the Receivers Just as Before the Assignment.

Judge Hand signed an order in the United States District Court yesterday authorizing J. B. Martindale and Frederic A. Juilliard, receivers for the H. B. Claflin Company, to waive protest of the notes indorsed by it. The notes number about 8,000 and aggregate about $30,000,000. If protested, the notaries' fees would amount to about $16,000, which will be saved to the creditors by Judge Hand's order.

Messrs. Martindale and Juilliard were desirous yesterday of correcting an idea which they had found to exist among merchants, that the receivership would affect the conduct of the business of the H. B. Claflin Company. The fact is that so far as carrying on its mercantile operations is concerned the company under the receivers is in exactly the same position as it was before, under John Claflin. Goods are being bought and sold just as if Messrs. Martindale and Juilliard had bought the business from Mr. Claflin, and this will continue to be the case.

"We are authorized by the order of the court," said Mr. Martindale, "to carry on the business as usual, to make contracts, to purchase and sell goods, and to conduct the business as a going concern."

Some merchants also have an idea that a big sacrifice sale is impending. The receivers said that nothing of the sort was in contemplation. It has been customary for the company to have a July sale each year, and this custom may be followed, although even that has not yet been determined. Whether it is held or not, no such sale as seems to be expected in some quarters is planned.

The Dry Goods Economist will say today that whatever uneasiness was created by the appointment of receivers for the H. B. Claflin Company has largely quieted down, and that it is generally held that the trouble was the result of conditions peculiar to the house and its allied enterprises, and was not due to weakness in the general business situation.

"Much interest," the Economist will say, "is expressed as to the possibility of the reorganization of the Claflin headquarters as a wholesale institution, free from ownership of retail stores or affiliation therewith. The view taken by the Economist that the day has gone by when a general jobbing house located in New York could do a great national business, sending its salesmen and merchandise into every section of the country, is indorsed. The opinion strongly prevails, however, that the Claflin Company, if thoroughly modernized in its system and its methods of distribution, and occupying a suitable location in the wholesale dry goods district, could carry on a very profitable business in the territory directly tributary to New York.

As one large New England manufacturer put it to an Economist representative this week, this territory has a population of not less than 20,000,000, and really requires the services of more than one up-to-date, progressive general jobbing concern operated on modern lines.

"Naturally, such a development would require a radical change in tactics on the part of the Claflin Company. It is asserted that there are various ways in which savings might be effected. Doubtless the turnover could be substantially increased. The concern's location at the present time, as Mr. Claflin himself remarked in the statement given out on the morning when the receivers were appointed, is too far down town, now that the great majority of the wholesale dry goods houses have removed to sections above Fourteenth Street and even much further.

"The separation of the jobbing concern from its retail stores would in itself be a decided advantage, both to it and to them. We referred last week to the extent to which some of the buyers for the retail stores were hampered by the feeling that they must purchase as much as possible from the Claflin headquarters. In addition to this, however, it is believed that the concern lost business because to many retailers its stores were direct competitors.

"All things considered, however, it is highly desirable that some satisfactory reorganization be effected. Such a jobbing house as Claflin's is desirable, not only for the retailers of the section, but also for numerous manufacturers.

"We have no doubt that the problem is receiving very careful attention on the part of those directly interested. The concern itself is continuing to do business and is in a position to take orders for merchandise. In fact, announcement to this effect has been sent by the receivers to every customer of the jobbing concern. The receivers, moreover, are empowered to make purchases of such new merchandise as, in their judgment, is essential to the carrying on of the business."

WATCHING BIG GAS SUIT.

P. S. Commission Interested in Thomas Read's Charge.

The suit brought against the Directors of the Brooklyn Union Gas Company by Thomas Read in the Brooklyn Supreme Court is to be watched closely by the Public Service Commission. At present, however, the commission has no reason for interfering in the matter.

Mr. Read charges extravagance and mismanagement against the officials of the company, and asserts on behalf of a committee of stockholders that millions of profits have been concealed from the commission in order to prevent it making an order for the reduction of the price of gas.

The commission is in no way concerned in the method of distribution of such profits as are earned among the stockholders of the company, but it is interested in the total amount of profits realized. Every year the Brooklyn Union Gas Company is required by law to make a return to the commission setting forth how much gas it has sold, what its operating expenses are, and how much profits have been made. If Mr. Read and his associates produce evidence which shows that these returns have been falsified, the commission will take action. Moreover, if it be shown that the profits earned amount to an excessive percentage, the commission would entertain a complaint looking to a reduction in the price charged consumers for their gas.

SAVES MONEY FOR BANKS.

Times Editorial Brings a Reform in Statement Advertising.

The new State banking law requires a long affidavit to be attached to statements made by banks and trust companies on the call of the Superintendent of Banks, and heretofore these have been included in the advertisements inserted in the newspapers. THE NEW YORK TIMES in an editorial called attention to this waste of the banks' money, but Supt. Van Tuyl showed that such publication was enforced by an opinion of the Attorney General.

With the call issued last Thursday the practice of publishing the long affidavits has been discontinued. Mr. Van Tuyl, who is now President of the Metropolitan Trust Company, speaking in Albany last night, said the change was directly due to THE NEW YORK TIMES editorial.

BOSTON ELOPERS IN CANADA

Miss Hallian and Her Father's Chauffeur on the Way to Quebec.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, July 3.—Miss Fern Hallian, daughter of a wealthy Boston business man, and Louis Elsman, her father's chauffeur, who ran away from Hull on Wednesday night, were heard from in Canada today. The Montreal police were notified to arrest them, but reported that the couple had left that city and were on their way to Quebec. The message from Montreal said they were not married.

Joseph F. Hallian has obtained a warrant for the arrest of Elsman on the charge of abduction and will undertake to extradite him if he is caught. He also has offered a reward for the capture of the couple.

"I do not believe my daughter went with Elsman willingly," said Mrs. Hallian today. "She made absolutely no preparations for an elopement. She had ample opportunity as we never suspected any attachment between herself and Elsman. I feel sure it is a case of abduction and I want Elsman brought to justice.

"He hired a car in Hull, and that seems to indicate my daughter was abducted. They might easily have taken our car without exciting suspicion."

"We still love our daughter and will take her back," said Mr. Hallian. "We hope to reach an understanding with her, but we will not receive Elsman under any circumstances. I am sure it is a case of abduction, but, of course, if they are married and she chooses to live with him we can do nothing. But I do not believe she will marry him willingly. However, even if they are married and she wishes to leave him and return home, we will receive her. I do not know if force was used in getting her away. But I cannot conceive of my daughter's making a runaway marriage without money or a change of clothing."

Daniel Brassett, a Boston chauffeur, furnished information that led the chase to the Canada line. Brassett said he drove Elsman and Miss Hallian to South Lawrence and saw them get aboard the Portland Express. He asserts that both Elsman and Miss Hallian frantically urged him to hurry so they might catch the train. Brassett said Elsman had very little money left after paying for the automobile drive.

MONTREAL, Quebec, July 3.—Miss Fern Hallian, daughter of a Boston business man, and Louis Elsman, her father's chauffeur, who disappeared from the Hallian home at Hull, Mass., have been traced to Quebec, where it is believed they arrived about 6 o'clock tonight.

It was understood that the couple were coming to Montreal, but became suspicious and left the train at St. Hyacinthe at 1 o'clock this afternoon. Thus they eluded the detectives who were waiting for them here.

Some of the detectives were from Boston, and had been close on the trail of the couple all the way to St. Hyacinthe.

EQUITABLE BUILDING TIE-UP.

Teamsters' Strike Forces the Bricklayers to Quit Work.

Though lack of building materials owing to the building material teamsters going on strike at the new Equitable Building on Wednesday, in sympathy with the teamsters on strike against the Meade Transfer Company, the bricklayers and laborers were forced to quit early in the day yesterday. A crowd of several hundred of them gathered at the Broadway entrance to the building to be paid off. There was some delay and the crowd made a rush for the entrance every time the partition door was opened. It finally required the services of several policemen to keep the people in line. They were not discharged, and were told to hold themselves in readiness to return to work whenever materials are furnished.

The officers of Building Teamsters' Union 654, to which the strikers belong, said last week that the strike of its members at the Equitable Building would take place on Wednesday, a general strike to follow on Monday if the Meade Transfer Company did not agree to arbitration. The building contractors throughout the city will leave no stone unturned to bring about a settlement in the meantime, as when the material drivers quit no work can go on in most of the trades.

The Thompson-Starrett Company has the general contract for the Equitable Building, and when the bricklayers and laborers were forced to quit Henry L. Marsh, Vice President of the company, had a talk over the telephone with Charles J. Jelly, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Building Trades Employers' Association, which represents 1,000 building contractors. They arranged for an effort by the large contractors to bring all pressure possible to bear on the Meade Transfer Company to agree to arbitration.

The officials of the Meade Transfer Company say that the strike of its teamsters, which was declared three months ago, went into effect in violation of a promise by the leaders of the union that they would not strike until the Board of Directors of the company met and took up their demands, the strike taking place the day before the board met.

LEASED WIRES AID NATION.

Government Makes Use of Brokers' Lines, B. B. Bryan Says.

Benjamin B. Bryan, of Logan & Bryan, testified before Interstate Commerce Commissioner Hall at the Custom House yesterday, in the investigation of alleged abuses in the use of leased wires, that brokers were not only willing, but anxious, to eliminate the sending of messages from outsiders over their wires.

"There is no lessee of private wires who would not be glad to get rid of such messages," he said. "The lessees do a lot that we do not get credit for. When President McKinley was in Los Angeles he wanted information as to a threatened panic and he used our wires to get this information from several cities. We have helped this Congress and do many things for which we get no credit.

"We are doing all we can to prevent the abuse of the wires. We now have counsel that tell us we can't do this and we can't do that. I don't know whether I can talk to my brother in Cincinnati. I wish I could go somewhere and find out what I can do."

Mr. Bryan admitted that "drops" were sublet, and he said the telegraph companies knew that drops were to be sublet, and that other outside business was to be sought. He said that the telegraph companies even suggested that the lessee should get others to "club in" so as to help pay the rental.

Mr. Bryan said there were instances when a public wire was preferable to the private wire. He said his firm did not have a direct private wire from New York to San Francisco, but did have wires by which it could send through messages by relaying. In that case, he said, it was quicker to use the public wire.

As a remedy for the alleged misuse of leased wires, Mr. Bryan suggested that the telegraph companies might install an instrument called the "telltale." He exhibited a "tell-tale" record which, he said, showed all that went over the wire.

The next hearing will be in Chicago on July 9 and there will be additional hearings here later.

Another White Slave Arrest.

Antonio Daranzo of 225 East 149th Street was arrested yesterday in connection with the Bronx white slave cases in which eight men and a woman were arrested on Thursday. District Attorney Martin said Daranzo had served a term in the Reformatory and was now on parole from Sing Sing, to which he had been sentenced for two and a half years for assault and robbery. In the Morrisania Court Magistrate Freschi held him in $5,000 bail on suspicion.

THREE MEET DEATH IN TENEMENT FIRE

Many Rescued Through Heroic Work by Firemen and Police at Early Morning Blaze.

ONE BLUECOAT SAVES SIX

Drags Entire Family Hemmed In on Roof Across Airshaft to Adjoining Building.

Three persons met death and a number of others were injured as a result of a fire early yesterday morning in a tenement house at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and 112th Street. That the total of dead and injured was not greater was due to the heroism of police and firemen, who at the risk of their lives made many thrilling rescues. One policeman alone saved a whole family by dragging them from the roof of the burning building to that of the adjoining building over an air space four feet wide. Those who lost their lives were:

Dead.

FINKELSTEIN, JACOB, died in the Knickerbocker Hospital shortly after his removal there.

NICKOKIRI, Mrs. HANNAH, burned to death in her apartment on the fifth floor.

NICKOKIRI, SARAH, 17 years old, also burned to death in apartment.

Injured.

The more seriously injured are:

GOLDRICK, SADIE, burned about body and head; taken to Harlem Hospital.

NICKOKIRI, SAMUEL, husband of Hannah Nickokiri, burned about head, body, and hands; taken to the Harlem Hospital.

SILINSKY, Mrs. SARAH, burned about body and head; taken to Harlem Hospital.

SUMMERS, HENRY, of 6 West 114th Street, hands and feet burned while aiding in work of rescue; treated at Knickerbocker Hospital and sent home.

It was about 3:30 A. M. when the fire was discovered by Policeman Waxman of the East 104th Street Station. He turned in an alarm and then rushed back to the tenement to awaken the tenants. In a few minutes he was joined by Policemen Broderick, Jenkins, and Murphy, who responded to his raps for aid, and half a dozen passersby. The entire neighborhood was soon awake, and at every window in the burning building frightened men, women, and children could be seen, while the fire escapes were jammed to capacity by struggling tenants, screaming for help.

When the first of those to start down the fire escapes reached the lower ladders they found that a distance of about five feet separated the bottom round from the sidewalk. The result was more confusion, many women refusing to make the leap.

Two engines and a truck under command of Deputy Fire Chief Clark and Battalion Chief Weber, arrived in a few minutes. By this time the upper floors of the tenement were ablaze and scores of tenants were hemmed in by fire and smoke so far as egress by fire escapes and stairways were concerned, when the big extension ladders from the fire truck were swung into position.

Firemen Gilchrist and Leahy were the first to ascend the ladder, and on the third floor they found Sarah Silinsky. She was terribly burned and was barely able to hold herself at the window. The firemen dragged her through the window and then relayed her down the ladder where an ambulance was waiting. From the same apartment and in just as thrilling fashion the firemen rescued Sadie Goldrick.

Finkelstein, who also was a third floor tenant, leaped from a window and caught a rope at the second floor. He swung out over the street, and policemen, grasping the line, held it taut and then caught him as he fell. He was hurried to the Knickerbocker Hospital, where he soon died of his burns and other injuries.

On the fifth floor firemen and police found Samuel Nickokiri unconscious and suffering from burns all over his body. Near him on the floor were the dead bodies of his wife and daughter. With great difficulty the husband was carried out of the room to the fire escape and then lifted down to the sidewalk. Adjoining the Nickokiri apartment was that of George Philips. In this apartment Policeman Jenkins found Mr. and Mrs. Philips and their baby daughter. Jenkins carried the baby in his arms, and at the same time guided the parents down the fire escape to safety.

Policeman Schasberger was the man who rescued the family that was hemmed in on the roof of the burning tenement. He went up the stairways of the tenement house at 3 East 112th Street, and when he reached the roof he saw Morris Saddock, his wife, and their four little children lying there. Schasberger shouted to Saddock to bring the children to the edge of the roof. The bluecoat then leaned far over and one by one caught the youngsters and lifted them over the open space. The oldest of the children was 7 years old. Next the policeman caught Mrs. Saddock by the wrists and dragged her to safety, and finally saved the husband in the same way.

Fire Chief Kenlon, who came with the second alarm, said he had never seen finer or braver work by policemen at a fire. He also praised the many citizens who aided firemen and police in guiding panic-stricken men and women down the fire escapes.

Believing that the fire may have been of incendiary origin Fire Marshal Prial is conducting a rigid investigation. The fire started on the second floor. The damage done was estimated at about $10,000.

CHARGES SERVED ON SMITH.

District Attorney of Queens Has Until July 17 to Answer.

District Attorney Mathew J. Smith of Queens County was served by a messenger from Albany yesterday with the charges filed with Gov. Glynn demanding his removal made by D. Nelson Raynor of Jamaica, Secretary of the Jamaica Citizens' Association. He makes the charges as a citizen of Queens County and not as an officer of this association. He is a Brooklyn newspaper man. Gov. Glynn gives the District Attorney until July 17 to file his answer.

The full text of the charges has not been made public, but it is understood that Mr. Raynor says District Attorney Smith failed to perform his duties in many ways. The charges include a recital of the manner in which Smith handled the complaint of Mrs. Clara Ellert of Richmond Hill against James Heffernan and Harry Scanlon, that they attacked her in the Democratic Clubhouse in Long Island City on Dec. 18, 1913. It is charged that Smith knew all the facts of the case and refused to place them before the Grand Jury; that he and his assistants tried in every way to prevent the true facts being brought out, and that after the case was placed in the hands of the Attorney General by Gov. Glynn the force in the District Attorney's office was turned over to the assistance of the attorney for the defense.

Copies of the arraignment from the bench made by Justice Scudder, who presided at the trials of Heffernan and Scanlon; some of the minutes of the trial, and extracts from the Grand Jury minutes are also included.

District Attorney Smith said he had not yet had time to go over the charges very carefully, and then added: "It seems singular to me that the only person found to make these charges against me is one of the editors of a Republican newspaper printed in Brooklyn. I will answer all the charges and make a most vigorous defense."

Special investigators from the Attorney General's office in Albany were in Queens County yesterday pursuing investigations in connection with the charges and other matters relating to Mrs. Ellert's case.

DISAVOWS WILSON INSULT.

Dr. Shaw Tells President Suffrage Association Was Not Even There.

To assure President Wilson that members of the National Woman Suffrage Association were not among those who hissed his remarks at the hearing which he gave to suffragettes in the White House on Tuesday, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, President of the association, has sent him this letter:

> July 2, 1914.
> Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States.
> Dear Mr. President: The officers of the National Woman Suffrage Association desire on its behalf to state that when you granted an audience to its representatives, who sought your aid in securing favorable Congressional action last November, to whom you stated your position as President of the United States, and as the highest representative of the political party which elected you, we accepted your statement, looking forward to the time when the political situation would presage a more favorable response, and your great influence might be given to aid in extending the principles of "The New Freedom" to women.
> To this end, through the National Congressional Committee, of which Mrs. Medill McCormick is Chairman, we have sought to secure favorable Congressional action; but at no time has any delegation from the National Suffrage Association endeavored to secure an audience with you upon this subject since November, 1913.
> We greatly deplore any act in the name of woman suffrage which mars the record of dignity, lawfulness, and patriotism which has marked the conduct of the campaigns to obtain political justice for women in the United States. In the expectation that the time will come when we may secure your great influence in behalf of a true democracy, I am, sincerely yours,
> ANNA H. SHAW,
> On behalf of the officers of the National Woman Suffrage Association.

At the reception to which Dr. Shaw refers, five hundred women were present, and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Mrs. Ellis Logan and Mrs. Rheta Childe Dorr spoke for them. So many women were in the room that only those in the front ranks could hear what was being said. The President said he believed that the franchise for women should be gained through the States if at all, and he gave his hearers to understand that he did not favor the Bristow-Mondell amendment and would not use his influence for it. When the women attempted to question him he informed them that he did not consider it proper for him to submit to a cross-examination. The spokeswoman thanked the President for receiving them and he expressed his pleasure at the meeting. The disapproval was expressed after the President had retired.

"VOTES" PLEA TO LAWYERS.

Suffragists to Circulate Petition on Tuesday.

Next Tuesday will be Lawyers' Day for the Women's Political Union, and men in the legal profession will be approached with petitions. The women will march in procession, headed by Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain, from the Custom House to the Sub-Treasury, where Miss Eleanor Brannan, who has just returned from India, will speak. The women will then march to the Woolworth Building, where Secretary of State Mitchell May will be asked to be sure that the bill of the suffragists as one of the constitutional amendments be duly advertised three months before election.

The suffragists, breaking ranks, and two by two, will next visit different lawyers with the petition.

Among the men who have signed the petition are Jacob Schurman, President of Cornell University; Louis P. Fuhrmann, Mayor of Buffalo; C. A. Betz, President of the New York State Press Association; William McAndrews, President of the Washington Irving High School; Joseph H. Appel, advertising manager, John Wanamaker, and P. V. D. Lockwood, advertising manager, New York Central Lines; Senator Whitney and the sixteen members of the Republican County Committee for Saratoga County, the entire Town Board of Rotterdam, Schenectady County; William H. Kelley, member Democratic State Committee, Thirty-eighth Senatorial District; Senator H. Seth G. Heacock, and Assemblyman Franklin W. Cristman.

FOR MORE ROOF GARDENS.

President Marks Asks Architects to Support Playground Plan.

More than fifty architects in the city have been asked by Borough President Marks in this letter to co-operate with him in stimulating interest in playgrounds and gardens on the roofs of high buildings in all parts of Manhattan:

> Dear Sir: May I ask your co-operation in the development of the use of roofs, both for playgrounds and gardens, and also the stimulation of the open-air sleeping porch? Not only will we be able by this development to improve health conditions, but also to relieve the congestion of the streets of our borough. As you know, there is about three times as much space on the roofs of the city as there is on the streets, and most of this space has not been utilized up to this time.
> I have suggested to the Superintendent of Buildings that only the actual necessities for safety in construction be insisted upon, and that the public in this way be encouraged to increase the use of roofs in a sane and safe way.
> I am addressing this letter to you with the hope of securing your personal activity in this movement. Appreciating the value of your co-operation, I remain very sincerely yours, MARCUS M. MARKS, President Borough of Manhattan.

President Marks announced that he would ask the American Institute of Architects and the New York Society of Architects to appoint committees to develop his plan.

HAD SAFE ALL BUT OPENED.

Early Arrival of Manager Scares Burglars Away Bootless.

Men who had worked three hours to open a big safe in the factory of the El Progreso Cigar Manufacturing Company at 7 Chatham Square were scared off at 5:30 yesterday morning when Nathan Dauer, senior partner in the firm, arrived to open the factory for the day. In three minutes more, it is believed, the robbers would have had the strongbox open. Papers, cash, and valuables worth $3,000 were inside.

The cigar company occupies the fifth floor of the building, and the outer door was fastened with padlocks. Mr. Dauer said it took him about five minutes to open the door, and that while he was unlocking it he heard men running to the rear of the factory. On entering he found the outer door of the safe blown open, and drills, chisels, and other tools on the floor. Holes had been bored into the inner door near the lock, and nitroglycerine had been placed ready for firing. Going to the rear, he found that the men had gone through a window to a fire escape.

A smaller safe in another room had been opened without explosives. It contained only books and $200 worth of revenue stamps, which were left. Aside from a few cigars and a box of candy belonging to the stenographer, nothing was stolen.

TALK OF WAR UNITES NEW YORK IRISHMEN

Meeting Pledges Funds to Arm Men at Home to Fight Against Division.

QUEEN MARY IS ATTACKED

Accused of Meddling in Behalf of Ulster—Protestants and Catholics Work Together.

New York Irishmen, Catholics and Protestants, pledged themselves last night to give "prompt aid in the patriotic work of arming and equipping" the National Volunteers in Ireland to fight against any decision of the country or any weakening of home rule.

At the same meeting, Queen Mary was attacked as a meddler in State affairs in behalf of Ulster and aristocracy, and Great Britain was warned of the danger of an early struggle "unparalleled in the dark history of Ireland."

The meeting was held in the Emmet Arcade, Madison Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, and was under the auspices of the New York Municipal Council of the United Irish League of America. Its announced purpose was to bring about united support of the Irish home rulers and to pledge financial aid to the men at home who are ready to fight if cause arises. Mayor Mitchel was put on a committee to further the movement in America. The meeting began with unanimous indorsement of the appeal for a general defense fund for the Irish Volunteers.

Only one woman attended the meeting, Dr. Gertrude Kelly of 507 Madison Avenue, who was introduced by the Chairman of the meeting, Patrick Egan, ex-Minister to Chile, as a "Protestant home-ruler."

"I represent the United Irish Women of New York," said Dr. Kelly, presenting a check for $100 to the fund. "I offer this as $100 worth of bullets for the friends of Queen Mary who may try to defeat the cause of political liberty."

She then offered this resolution, which was adopted and a copy of it ordered cabled to The Freeman's Journal at Dublin:

> Resolved, That while this gathering has unlimited confidence in the determination of the leaders of the Irish Party in Parliament to stand unflinchingly, and if necessary go down fighting, for the absolute conservation of every foot of Ireland's soil, we deem it opportune in this momentous crisis to warn the powers that be in England that any surrender now to the arrogance of power, whether of the party of ascendency, of the Tories, the military cabal, or from whatever other quarter however high attempted, that would result in the geographical mutilation of Ireland as a nation will lead, and we know whereof we speak, to a struggle in the near future unparalleled in the dark history of Ireland.

Dr. Kelly remarked that she supposed Mr. Egan and herself were the only persons whose memories went back to the days of the Fenians. Immediately Capt. O'Meagher Condon, a civil war veteran, was pointed out in the audience as one of the associates of the "Manchester Martyrs," who took part with Larken, O'Brien and others in the rescue of the Fenians. Half a dozen others were designated as having been in Fenian cells or in land league troubles.

Mr. Egan, before reading the appeal for funds made by Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia, President of the United Irish League of America, charged Queen Mary and her friends with attempts to influence the King against the Home Rule measure. He said:

> There is an attempt being made through outside influences to induce the cabinet to weaken the measure by the inclusion of certain clauses providing for the exclusion of Ulster permanently from its political effect. I know this influence is coming not only from the aristocracy and absentee landlords, but from royalty itself. The Marchioness of Londonderry is asserting her influence upon Queen Mary, and through her it is hoped by the foes of home rule to induce the King to bring pressure on Premier Asquith for the insertion of the objectionable clauses.

John McKee, whose ancestors were Ulster Presbyterians, asserting that there was no religious issue involved in the Home Rule measure, said:

> It seems that nothing in this world dies so hard as past privileges. The cat's nine lives appear to be nothing compared with it. This talk of Ulster uprising is the last kick of landlordism.

Capt. Condon, John P. Hayes, President of the Cork Men's Association; Stephen McFarland, Mr. Egan, Lieut. Col. Healy of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, and others told of the ardent patriotism of Protestant men, whom they referred to as "brothers" in a common cause for political liberty, in which no thought of religious or social differences had a place. Capt. Condon presented this resolution:

> Resolved, That in response to the appeal of John E. Redmond, the victorious leader of our race in Ireland, repeated by Michael F. Ryan, national President of this league, his only authorized representative on this continent, for prompt aid in the patriotic work of arming and equipping the National Volunteers in Ireland to conserve and defend Ireland's hard-won fight for self-government, this meeting pledges its unstinted efforts to comply with these soul-stirring calls to duty.

The resolution was adopted, and this committee appointed on ways and means for co-operating throughout the city and State with other organizations: Capt. Stephen McFarland, Capt. James Morarity, James Hanney, John P. McKee, Dr. Gertrude Kelly, John P. Hayes, and Col. Edward Duffy.

Mayor Mitchel, who was President of the Municipal Council some years ago, is one of the committee of three of the local organization who will meet with the National Executive Committee here on July 16, for a general campaign for funds. The other members are W. Bourke Cockran and Stephen McFarland.

Wm. H. Cooper Found Guilty.

William H. Cooper, who had been on trial for a month in the Federal District Court on two indictments charging him with conspiracy to use the mails to defraud in connection with the New York Central Realty Company, was found guilty yesterday by a sealed verdict. It was alleged that the purchasers of the bonds of the company were defrauded out of $475,000.

A motion was made to set aside the verdict on technical grounds, and Judge W. I. Grubb deferred decision on it until July 24. Until that date Cooper was released in $25,000 bail, on a bond furnished by a surety company.

URGES AID FOR SALEM.

President's Message Asks for $200,000—Relief Fund Grows.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—President Wilson sent a special message to Congress today urging the appropriation of $200,000 for the relief of those made homeless and destitute by the Salem fire. In the message the President repeated the telegram he had received from Gov. Walsh asking for an appropriation of $200,000 and saying that 3,000 families were homeless. Then the President said:

"In view of the great number of homeless and destitute in Salem, I very earnestly urge the immediate appropriation by Congress of $200,000, as requested by the Governor to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War."

The message was referred to the House Appropriations Committee which will not take it up before early next week at least.

BOSTON, July 3.—A bill permitting the City of Salem to abate taxes in the district destroyed by fire and allowing the city to borrow $100,000 in anticipation of taxes was passed in the House of Representatives today. This was the second of the Salem fire relief measures, the House yesterday having authorized a loan of $700,000 outside the debt limit.

Contributions of $41,274, received today, brought the Salem relief fund up to $369,822. The largest gift, $5,000, came from the Chamber of Commerce, Cleveland, Ohio. The people of Dayton sent $1,500, making a total of $4,500 received from that city.

SALEM, Mass., July 3.—At a meeting of the General Relief Committee of Fourteen today $25,000 was appropriated for the purchase of furniture and other household necessities for fire sufferers.

About 11,000 rations are distributed daily, according to Col. John E. Spencer, who has charge of the food supply. The food costs about $2,200 daily.

BRITONS HOPE FOR MEXICO.

Sir Alan Johnstone and E. W. P. Thurston Here on Mauretania.

The Mauretania of the Cunard Line arrived yesterday from Liverpool with 372 cabin and 520 steerage passengers, after experiencing rough weather and fogs all the way across. For a Summer voyage the weather was unusually boisterous, the officers said. The temperature was very high nearing New York, according to the passengers, and reached 90 degrees in the dining saloon on Wednesday night. The liner made the voyage of 3,154 miles in 5 days 12 hours 42 minutes, at an average speed of 23.77 knots.

Sir Alan Johnstone, G. C. V. O., British Minister at The Hague, whose wife is a sister of Gifford Pinchot, arrived on the Mauretania to spend six weeks at Saugatuck, Conn., with his wife's family. As a member of The Hague tribunal, Sir Alan said he was very much interested in the Mexican question, and pleased to learn that there was a prospect for peace.

"With the large investments in Mexico held by Americans," he said, "the United States has a right to demand law and order in that country, and foreign nations know that what this country has done in the Philippines indicates its policy. The United States has never shown that it desires territory, and that is the reason that other nations have been quite willing to let America settle Mexican affairs in its own way."

E. W. P. Thurston, who was British Vice Consul in New York six years ago, also arrived on the Mauretania on his way to Mexico City as British Consul. He said he hoped the Mexican troubles would be cleared away in twelve months and his post raised to a Consul Generalship.

Edward J. Berwind, the coal operator, was another passenger. He returns from a two and a half months' rest in Europe. He thought the general business conditions abroad were not satisfactory.

BLUE HEADS PLAGUE WAR.

Surgeon General Takes Charge at New Orleans—No New Cases.

NEW ORLEANS, July 3.—The cost of the campaign for the eradication of bubonic plague here will be from $20,000 to $25,000 a month, and six months' time will be required to stamp out the contagion, according to a statement made to-day by Dr. Rupert Blue, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, before a citizens' committee. Dr. Blue today received authorization from Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo to take charge of the work.

He ordered a corps of twelve ratcatchers from San Francisco to start for New Orleans. These experts will play a leading part in the campaign of rat extermination being waged by the health authorities. Assistant Surgeon Williams of Washington and Passed Assistant Surgeon French Simpson of New York, both of the Public Health Service, also have been directed to report to Dr. Blue.

According to Dr. Blue the situation here is not alarming. There has been no further outbreak of the malady.

Upholds New Nevada Divorce Law.

CARSON CITY, Nev., July 3.—The validity of the new State divorce law was upheld by the Supreme Court here today. The opinion was signed by a full court.

FINDS CITY'S 'GUEST' LIVED IN PARK FREE

Commissioner Weier Ousts B. R. T. Man Whose Bills Father Knickerbocker Paid.

SHOWS ECONOMY IN QUEENS

Funds Saved in Buying Supplies and Using Dead Trees for Fuel—New Menageries.

Although he was one of the last of Mayor Mitchel's appointees and took office on May 1, Park Commissioner John E. Weier of Queens has managed already to save the city $15,000. In a report of his department to the Mayor yesterday Commissioner Weier explained that this saving constituted the difference between the appropriation asked for supplies for 1914 and the budget request of 1915.

Through the report a remarkable case of a squatter became known. The Commissioner said he found that a man employed by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and his family had been using a building in Forest Park known as Forest Lodge for living quarters. The man was not connected with the city Government, was paying no rent, and the city was paying for his heat, light, and telephone service. The Commissioner ousted him and restored the building for park purposes.

By rigid supervision of the purchasing work of the department and the inauguration of a better system of accounting, the Commissioner hopes to effect further economics before the close of the year.

"We have no purchasing agent," Mr. Weier said in his report, "and the work has been done in a more or less haphazard fashion. Frequently new supplies have been ordered when there were in the stores a quantity sufficient to last for some time. If corporate stock can be obtained for the construction of a suitable store room I believe the saving could be increased from 10 to 15 per cent. more."

The Commissioner requested an issue of $85,000 in corporate stock for improving the several thousand acres of park property in the twenty parks in the borough. He suggested that the different city departments use the dead wood and the standing dead trees in the parks for fuel. The Board of Education alone, he pointed out, used about 1,000 cords of kindling wood a year for which $15 a cord was paid. The Fire Department used 400 cords and paid $14 a cord. Other departments also use kindling.

"On this basis," the Commissioner said, "it is probably that the city is paying at least $30,000 a year for wood. I have purchased a small saw and a splitting machine at a cost of less than $500 and now have a crew of four men working it, and the experiment indicates that it will be possible to get out from ten to fifteen cords of wood a day with an expenditure of $2.50 a day for each of the men's pay. In supplying the wood we will not only effect a saving in money but will clear out the dead wood and improve the parks at the same time."

Referring to the remains of the old Parsons' nursery in Kissena Park the Commissioner said:

"Without going into details the city possesses in this nursery more than 1,100 rare and ornamental trees and shrubs and a large quantity of the more common varieties, which can be used not only in Queens but in the park system in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Brooklyn, if they are given proper care and cultivation. The city appropriates money annually for the purchase of trees, and if the Kissena Park nursery is extended it can produce all the stock required for replanting purposes throughout the greater city."

Menageries for forest animals such as elk and deer are being provided in Forest Park, and five elk have been obtained from the Brooklyn Park menagerie. New greenhouses will be built to care for valuable plants and palms. Plans for two baseball diamonds, a football field, and a skating pond are being prepared, and the tennis and golf courses have been improved, the Commissioner stated.

Fire Stops New Haven Trains.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH NORWALK, Conn., July 3.—Fire destroyed the lumber yards of the Hatch & Bailey Company tonight, causing a loss of $75,000, and interrupting the service of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad east of this city. The railroad bridge was partially consumed, and it is expected that trains will not be able to use it before Saturday. For a time the fire threatened the plants and factories of several other concerns, but was controlled before it reached them.

OWNS TO HERR DYNAMITING.

Miller, Arrested, Takes Blame and Shot Himself to be a Hero.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., July 3.—Robert Miller, the Wilkinsburg contractor who reported to the police that he had found a dynamite bomb on the grounds of the Edgewood residence of E. M. Herr, President of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, was arrested shortly after noon today, and it is reported that he has confessed to Capt. L. G. Adams that he placed the bomb on the grounds and shot himself to allay suspicion.

Miller is being detained in the Westinghouse plant at East Pittsburgh. It is said that after his arrest, Miller told Capt. Adams, who is in charge of the State constabulary here, that he thought it would be a good plan to get some notoriety and that he went to the grounds and placed the bomb there. After this, he shot himself and threw the revolver away, it was said.

According to Capt. Adams, Miller took him over the grounds this morning and the revolver was found where Miller said he had thrown it. Miller is alleged to have told Capt. Adams that he bought five sticks of dynamite to make the bomb, but used only four. He told where the fifth stick was hidden, and it was said this was also found.

After the attempted dynamiting was discovered, Miller said he fought the would-be dynamiter and that he had been shot. He described his assailant and said he appeared to be a Greek.

According to strike leaders and J. D. Hern and E. P. Lewis, their attorneys, the whole plot was framed up to discredit the strikers.

Miller was released after an exhaustive examination. Police officials say he is irresponsible, and will be placed in a sanitarium by his friends. The charges against him were dropped.

MAJOR RUSSELL NOT POOR.

Chief Clerk Believed Penniless Left Realty Worth $50,000.

It has been discovered that Major William Russell, chief clerk of the current index department of the Register's Office in Kings County, who died on June 17, supposedly a poor man, really owned property believed to be worth about $50,000. The discovery was made by Register E. T. O'Loughlin while sorting out the papers filed in the dead man's desk in the Hall of Records. Several deeds establishing Major Russell's title to pieces of real estate on Long Island and in Westchester County were found.

Major Russell, who was 76 years old and a veteran of the civil war, lived at 51 Cranberry Street. His nearest relative was a sister, who died several months ago. At the time of Major Russell's death it seemed that the only possessions of value left by him were a gold watch and $10 in money. He was buried with military honors in Cypress Hills Cemetery by the Veterans' Union.

All the private papers found in the desk have been turned over to the Public Administrator by Register O'Loughlin. The Major's only known living relative is a cousin, John H. Russell of Plantsville, Conn.

J. M. HORTON'S WILL FILED.

Ice Cream Man Left Estate to Son and Daughter.

James Madison Horton, founder and President of the J. M. Horton Ice Cream Company, who died on June 26, left all but $15,000 of his large estate to Harry C. Horton, his son, and Mrs. Mary Hope Lewis, his daughter. His will was filed yesterday.

Mr. Horton provided for these bequests: Five thousand dollars each to Mrs. Susan Robertson and James M. Horton; $3,000 to Horace T. Horton, and $2,000 to Burrie L. Horton. The residuary estate was divided between his son and daughter in equal shares.

Mr. Horton was largely interested in real estate and the will set forth that the residuary estate included four houses in Middletown, N. Y., and one in Jersey City. In April, 1912, Mr. Horton transferred eleven pieces of property to his son and daughter. It was purely a domestic matter, he said at the time, and in no way involved the J. M. Horton Ice Cream Company.

Stayed in America 150 Minutes.

Edgar R. Bowring, who arrived yesterday at 8:30 on the Mauretania from Liverpool, sailed at 11 on the Red Cross steamer Stephano for St. John's, N. F., so as to be at the opening of Bowring's Park by the Duke of Connaught on July 15. The park was given to St. John's, Mr. Bowring said, to celebrate the 100th anniversary of Bowring Brothers' connection with the fishing industry of that port.

During July and August this Store will be closed

INDEPENDENCE DAY.

The people of the United States can celebrate the 138th anniversary of their nation's birth in the heartiest spirit, confident that they have achieved the noblest kind of independence and that the position of their country, in the eyes of the civilized world, was never more exalted or more enviable. We have shown the nations how war can be averted by conciliatory methods. A short time ago circumstances had driven us to the verge of a desperate conflict. Everything had been done by us to keep the peace, but our efforts had been thwarted and our troops had been compelled to occupy territory of a neighboring nation. Then the good offices of the South American republics were proffered and accepted, and after long deliberations, often discouraging, peace with honor is assured and a new bond of friendship formed between this nation and the others of the Western Hemisphere, which time will surely strengthen. A precedent has thus been established in international relations. History records no incident like the peaceful settlement of our trouble with Mexico, but history as it is to be written in the future will, we are convinced, deal more frequently with the avoidance of wars between nations because of this good example.

We have other good reasons for self-congratulation in celebrating the Fourth of July. That the outlook for a business revival on a large scale is favorable is admitted by all but the confirmed croakers, while the measure of prosperity that we have is not to be despised. We are at peace with the whole world. We have met with courage of the highest sort the problem caused by a mistaken attempt to disregard our treaty obligations, and the recent action of Congress in the canal tolls matter has carried assurance to the whole world that we place honor above profit. The great waterway connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific is nearly finished, and will soon be thrown open to the ships of all nations on equal terms, constituting such a gift to international commerce and the advancement of humanity as our forefathers could never have dreamed of accomplishing. All things considered, this fourteenth year of the twentieth century is the greatest year of our history, and we can afford to take pride in our growth, not only as a nation great in commerce and the arts but as a people inspired by the highest ideals and determined to keep our national fame bright in the annals of time.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN had been lost to British politics so many years that his death carries no shock to his countrymen. For seven years he had been a hopeless invalid, and he was an aged man, not only in years but in appearance, before he was stricken. From his entrance into political life, after his early retirement from business with an ample fortune, until some years after the close of the Boer war he was a personage to be reckoned with in European politics. At first he was renowned as a radical and accounted dangerous by the Tories, although his earlier inclinations had all been conservative. So great was his reputation by the time he was elected to Parliament, in 1876, that it may be said he never had a novitiate in that body. His speeches were reported from the beginning, which is uncommon, and he was the subject of a "leading article" in The London Times after the first of them. His radicalism as Mayor of Birmingham, political essayist, and Member of Parliament, however, was soon overshadowed, in the public estimate, by the revelation of his enormous capacity as a political organizer. Great Britain has developed many greater statesmen, but never a greater politician.

This extraordinary skill, combined with his unquestionable tact, enabled him to retain potential leadership after his split with the Liberal Party on account of Irish home rule. The "red" radical of the seventies, who had declared that England, like France, must inevitably become a republic, who shrank from the idea of doing public honor to a royal heir, easily fitted himself to the environment in which Lord SALISBURY was the foremost figure. They called him "the envious Casca," but GLADSTONE testified to his sincerity. He had said he would never countenance an Irish Parliament.

Thereafter, for a long while, CHAMBERLAIN was one of the most conspicuous and least popular of the world's statesmen. But he always had the courage of his convictions, and the verdict of history will be that he served his country faithfully and well. He supported moderate protection for the purpose of warding off the kind of taxation which LLOYD GEORGE has inflicted upon England. As a choice of evils his policy had its merits. He made the proposed tariff a Conservative war cry, but it has had few strong supporters since his enforced retirement. A man of remarkable ability, Mr. CHAMBERLAIN was also a man of strong personality. He was in the later days of his public life the most commanding figure in the House of Commons. The climax of his career was pitifully tragic, and the present British Opposition has developed no leader of his adroitness, sagacity, courage, and personal force.

VICTIMS OF DRUGS.

The first case tried under the Boylan law, operative July 1 and designed to stop the regular sale of drugs of a narcotic nature to their victims, resulted in the commitment of the patient to the State Hospital for the Insane at Central Islip. He was a patient, not a prisoner accused of crime. In this case the addict was of good family and an able lawyer before the use of morphine in a surgical operation started him into the habit. Other cases are not so innocent in the beginning. But the drugs themselves attack and break down their victims' moral fibre, and they are soon helpless. The penal legislation of this State has hitherto failed to provide for their medical treatment and, when possible, restoration to health. The miserable sufferers had to go the round of the jail and workhouse, which in their cases were not reformatory.

But the chief effect of such a law should be preventive. Patients who have taken opiates under their doctors' prescription may not get the prescription refilled by their druggists. Heavy penalties are attached to the purveyance of drugs to satisfy a habit. The law is operative only in this State, and for a time, at least, habitual users will get their supplies from outside cities. Those who have not yet formed the habit and have only incipient longings will be quickly discouraged by a rebuff at the drug counter. It is for them that the law was passed.

A BANKER'S DISQUALIFICATIONS.

The country rather than Mr. WARBURG has cause for anxiety in the character of the objections to his confirmation as a member of the Federal Reserve Board. No personal disqualification is alleged. The objections are that he is a naturalized citizen, not a politician, and a Wall Street banker. Every naturalized citizen is affronted by the first objection. Indeed, every citizen is affronted, in a sense, for there are no grades of citizenship in this country. There is a certain reproach against Americans who abandon their citizenship, but there is a hearty welcome for the recruits with brains and brawn who have so enriched our civic blood and business capacity. This disqualification recoils especially upon those who assert it against a banker. For, while there are American bankers inferior to none, the disproportion of foreigners among them is conspicuous. As a class foreign bankers are more accomplished than our own in the sort of banking which is about to be established, and in which all the experience is foreign. The rediscount system, the control of foreign exchange, the establishment of foreign branches, are all novelties to Americans. They must be guided by foreign experience. Only financial and political provincialism can object to any banker on this ground. A banker not thus disqualified would not be fit to nominate, however eligible for ignorant or prejudiced objection.

The same is true about the political objection. The suggestion that partisanship is either qualification or disqualification for duties of this sort will be disturbing to hopes of the success of the system, if it is allowed to prevail. For the objection is limited to politics, not to patriotism. There is no suggestion that Mr. WARBURG is deficient in interest in public affairs. There can be no suggestion of that kind in the case of a man who abandons ease and wealth for a public duty, of which the annoyances already are too evident. The objection that he is disqualified by membership in a Wall Street firm tries the patience. The specifications refer to incidents preceding his business activities in the firm from which he has retired at a sacrifice only a public-spirited citizen would make. There is no suggestion that he had any personal part in acts which are misrepresented because they are misunderstood, and which could be defended if it were worth while in connection with a matter of a sort entirely different from anything within the range of Federal reserve bankers' functions. If Mr. WARBURG is to be disqualified for anything of this sort the proportion of wealth and character which is proscribed will be a severe loss to the Federal reserve system. In this connection "Wall Street" is an adjective of character rather than of place. There is a Wall Street wherever there is a financial centre, and it is not only the Wall Street bankers of New York who are affronted by this sort of objection.

LOOKING FOR THE SMITHS.

The wife of a Washington resident came here a few days ago to spend the Fourth with a family named SMITH. When her husband made ready to join her, he found that he had forgotten the address of the Smith family. He seems to resemble husbands in general very much. However, being a man of resource, he requested the Washington newspaper correspondents to make known his forgetfulness, and to announce that he would visit the Mayor's office, where a telephone message from the particular branch of the Smith family with whom his wife is stopping would be greatly appreciated.

The city is bespattered with Smiths, corpulent of Smiths; as far as the eye can reach it is struck with Smiths; neither hath it entered into the mind of man to conceive the total Smithry of this metropolis. This resourceful husband should be encouraged for discovering a new use for Washington correspondents and Mayors. The occupations of both are of a nature that soon gets their minds on a single track. Constant contemplation in the one case of uplift problems and in the other of certain kinds of Senators makes a joyful routine of life and narrows the mind. If they can join forces for the solving of such human questions as the redemption from error of forgetful husbands their sphere will be profitably broadened. It is not impossible that the idea might be extended in some way so as to avert the painful consequences of the familiar unmailed letter in the husbandly coat pocket. We are sure that both the Mayor and the Washington correspondents would welcome such an enlargement of their labors.

DISTRESS IN SALEM.

The letter to THE TIMES from Miss MABEL T. BOARDMAN of the National Red Cross, appealing for help outside of Massachusetts for the 10,000 men, women, and children bereft of their possessions and means of livelihood by the fire in Salem, will not go unheeded. Miss BOARDMAN says that the first estimates of the distress and its probable duration fell far short. The generous responses of the people of Massachusetts need prompt supplementing.

Given time, perhaps that Commonwealth would find in its own resources sufficient for its stricken members. But readiness and dispatch are of the very essence of relief in this case. The aid that comes must come quickly.

AN UNPRECEDENTED TRIBUTE.

If Senator ROOT's disinclination to be a candidate is because of his unwillingness to subject himself to the distortion of an honorable public record and the fostered misunderstanding of an upright official's aims and purposes which have often been the lot of good men seeking re-election, it is not to be wondered at in his case. At the age of 70, with a record matchless among the public men of his day, he may have felt, when he wrote his letter to Chairman BARNES, a reluctance to submit that record to two months of hostile criticism, and thought his duty to the public did not call for such a sacrifice.

But he must by this time have learned that there is little danger of it. From the general expression of regret over his action he must have learned that the understanding of his public service and its motives is not limited by lines of faction, party or State geography. To him, at the close of his first Senatorial term, has come an unprecedented tribute; men of all parties have joined in the recognition of his honesty of purpose and greatness of ability. Those who opposed him most bitterly when he was first a candidate for the Senate have joined generously in it. It is already evident that the party opponents of Mr. ROOT, with hardly an exception, will treat him with that respect which his great public services impose upon them.

It must also be evident to him that he will be the strongest candidate the Republican Party can name. He is its greatest asset in this State. It needs him. The universal change of feeling toward him among all his opponents whose opinion is of any weight—among all his opponents with the one exception already noted—makes it certain that he would be a tower of strength to his party in this campaign. That party, for its sins of Odellism and Alldsism, and Nixonism, was turned out of office in 1910, and however the people may have been revolted by some of the things that have happened under Democratic rule, they have not forgotten those things; the party is no more fondly regarded by them than it was then. Its ticket needs strengthening, and any man whom it is likely to name will weaken it by the mere force of the contrast between that man and the man he aspires to succeed. The Republican campaign not only needs ELIHU ROOT, but cannot be made presentable without him.

Why he will be the strongest candidate his party can name is plain. No man in New York, having to engage counsel, would think himself otherwise than fortunate if he could engage ELIHU ROOT. That good fortune has been the State's for six years; he has been its counsel in the court of the nation. Men of all parties have felt the great advantage of that connection, for the State of New York, so often harried and made the victim of a prejudice against her among legislators from other States, has had need of the ablest counsel she could get, and has had it seldom indeed. The people have seen this; they are not so stupid as demagogues suppose. And they are not willing to let their counsel go.

SARAJEVO'S PLOTTERS.

The criminals of Sarajevo went back to the slaying of ALEXANDER II. in 1881 for their model, and seem to have made a close study of it. In that case thirty or forty young men and women plotted the crime, and distributed themselves at various points along the route the Czar was to take. The first hand grenade failed to hit the Czar, but wounded members of the escort. ALEXANDER left his carriage to inquire about the injured, and a second explosive was thrown, killing him. Others were ready had this failed. The story of the secret organization of young assassins of Sarajevo shows a deliberate attempt to copy the older conspiracy.

All this is very different from the anarchist method, in which some individual, without taking others into his confidence, selects some victim, usually the most inoffensive or useful one he can find, and slaughters him. The murders of CARNOT, the Empress ELIZABETH, President McKINLEY, King HUMBERT, and the rest cannot be called political. The wild beasts of anarchy aimed in those cases to strike at society, and society as a whole being too big to kill they killed conspicuous individuals. The more innocent the victim the better for their purpose. But the Bosnian crime was clearly political, a reversion to the old type. Following the precedent of the Russian assassins, the criminals had laid no plans for a rebellion or for anything which could palliate the deed by producing any political result. But the motive was not the blind hate toward society which caused all recent assassinations; it was Serb enmity to Austria and to the man who was soon to direct, and had already begun to direct, Austrian policy toward the Serbs.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Stories of Murder Considered.

People whose high estimate of their own delicacy and refinement is revealed by themselves whenever excuse offers—and often when it doesn't—are particularly fond of announcing, as proof of their superiority, that they "don't read murder stories." The hearer of such a statement, remembering the interest with which, a few minutes or hours before, he has studied the details of the latest account of a murder committed or of a murderer tried, as presented in his favorite paper, naturally feels put on the defensive. He does, that is, unless he has already thought the question out. Should he have done so, however, he knows that the profession of superiority is really a confession of inferiority.

In every language a large part of the literature which by common consent is described as "great" consists of "murder stories." This is no less true of sacred than of secular books, of poetry than of prose, of romance than of history. Whoever would know anything about the workings of the human mind under the stress of strongest emotion must observe it when engaged in the ultimate conflict that ends in murder. This genius has always done, with never a thought, evidently, that it was unworthily employed or exhibiting a morbid curiosity concerning matters of which it were better to remain ignorant.

Of course there is a wrong as well as a right way to read murder stories, and not all who tell them are either sound psychologists or literary artists. Nevertheless, these narratives, as purveyed by newspapers of the higher class, are of an interest legitimate and deep to every intelligent student of his kind, and nobody need be in the slightest degree ashamed of reading them with careful attention. Intellectually, the current criticism of their publication is on a par with that of the "tired business man" in his comparisons of "Hamlet" or "Tartuffe" with the variety show which he finds so "restful." He simply acknowledges that tragedy, and comedy as distinguished from humor or horseplay, are beyond his mental grasp. The person who sees only the horrible in murder stories does the same thing, and he should conceal the fact as he does any other humiliating misfortune.

We Offer Another Suggestion.

Our more observing readers will notice that the bank statements of condition, as published in compliance with law, are now considerably shorter than they used to be. This change, though it is one not immediately conducive to the pecuniary interests of THE TIMES or any other paper in which such statements are printed, we view with satisfaction and with something of pride. For the shortening of the statements has been effected, not by withholding any information of public utility or interest, but by omitting the long and verbose certifications by notaries that bank officers have sworn as required by law to the correctness of the figures given. And it was THE TIMES that suggested and urged this elimination, not because of any disinclination to sell advertising space, but from a conviction that general as well as particular interests are injured by the waste of money involved in advertising that brings no return to the advertiser.

The State Banking Department answered THE TIMES's appeal with the assertion that on the publication of the full certificates depended the fixing of responsibility on bank officers making inaccurate statements. Further consideration, however, has reversed the department's opinion. It has now decided that this worthy object can be attained, though the required certifications appear only on the document actually signed, and under revised regulations the statements of the banks to which the law applies will henceforth appear in the shortened form.

This encourages us to propose another innovation—one unlike the first in that it will give to cynics the joy of questioning our disinterestedness. Every reason that exists for the publication of any bank statements applies to savings banks, and yet they are not required to take the public into their confidence in this particular way. They should be. Even more than other depositors do those who put their money in savings banks need the protection which a published statement gives, and none of the excuses given for withholding it is of convincing validity. It would cost money—depositors' money—but the expenditure would be wise, and THE TIMES would take it without a single tremor of repulsion or compunction, since for it full money's worth would be given.

He Should Leap at the Chance.

Even the most vehement of "antis" might safely confess to an at least slightly responsive thrilling as a result of the latest feminine protest to Premier ASQUITH against sex discrimination. The Women's Freedom League, it seems, has written to that much-harassed statesman, asking him why it is that at none of the periodically recurring distributions of what are called "royal honors" is recognition ever made of the possibility that not all public services are rendered by men.

By custom hitherto inviolate, English women can get a title, high or low, in only one of two ways—by marriage or by birth. They are not allowed, as the men are, to earn it, or rather they are allowed to do the earning, but are forced to go without the immaterial reward that is, nevertheless, so highly valued. This looks like a real grievance and makes a noise like one.

To emphasize their demand, the leaguers have made out and sent to the Premier a list of names the wearers of which, in their opinion, have done things that, when done by men, win an honorific. Some of these names are known on this side of the water and some of them presumably convict us of ignorance by reminding us of no high achievement, but connected with none of them are associations violent or undignified. So perhaps they are all those of women thoroughly respectful of the established proprieties.

Here is a chance, apparently, for Mr. ASQUITH to prove himself kind and modern—to win a little of the popularity which he so desperately needs in his business.

New York Takes to Its Roofs.

At New York's discovery that roofs can be utilized as the scene or locus of joys other than gustatory, potatory, and saltatory, the immemorial East must be smiling wearily. For ages and ages ago the Oriental began to do a lot of his living and playing on his roof, and he has kept it up ever since. There, as ever, humanly speaking, he finds liberty with seclusion and fresh air with protection close at hand.

Of our immense acreage of roofs we have hitherto used only a minute fraction, and of that fraction only an infinitesimal part for purposes domestic or philanthropic. We are going to be wiser in the future, it seems, and—thanks be!—the reform will necessitate a rigid enforcement of the smoke-nuisance laws.

Nobody can be happy on a roof while subjected to a rain of comminuted carbon.

MR. ROOT'S INFLUENCE.

His Counsel and Judgment Highly Esteemed by His Colleagues.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A few months ago a United States Senator from one of the Southern States said to me: "There is not a more conscientious man in the Senate than your Mr. Root. I always feel like resenting every imputation upon the purity of his motives in any matter that comes before him. I value his counsel more than I value that of any other Senator. His wisdom and statesmanship put him in a class by himself. Although we belong to opposing parties, even in political questions I find it a great benefit to discuss matters with Mr. Root."

New York State ought to feel it a duty to the whole country to continue such a man in the Senate, and Mr. Root himself ought to realize that, at this period, when popular turbulence is endeavoring to alter the very character of our government, it is the supreme duty of every man as capable of representing sound principles as Mr. Root is, to remain at his post. What if the mania for new legislation detains Congress in the depressing heat of Washington? Doubtless it would shorten the life of our Senator; but what nobler death could he die than giving his life in that way for his country?

ELIJAH R. KENNEDY.
New York, July 2, 1914.

Faith in Dr. Hornaday.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having followed the spirited controversy about Gunda's fate with great interest, and being an intense animal lover myself, it seems only fair to me to ask the question, What of Dr. Hornaday? Can it be possible that the public can think of this friend of man and beast as cruel or tolerating needless cruelty? He is the man who labored unceasingly with the help of a few others to save our birds from wanton slaughter. Perhaps some of his critics can think back to a viciously adorned hat in their own homes which Dr. Hornaday happily succeeded in doing away with.

I have seen Gunda, and though the poor animal is sad to look at now, I think we can safely leave its fate in Dr. Hornaday's hands, a man of such long and varied experience in the animal kingdom. I am sure he never intended Gunda to be chained in one spot for the rest of his life, and the criticism of the other animals in the Zoo is extremely unjust, to say the least. We residents of New York City and of the entire country owe to Dr. Hornaday our unbounded gratitude for his kind and wise treatment of the animals placed in his care.

Mrs. E. C. BERNAUER.
Brooklyn, N. Y., July 2, 1914.

Wife's Espionage Despicable.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My indignation was aroused to the highest pitch when I read in your paper this morning the confession made by the wife of Dr. Carman that she had stooped to spy upon her husband and his patients. In the army and navy spies are dealt with as they deserve. Are the secrets of those organizations greater or more sacred than those of a physician's consulting room? I do not think they are.

I have in the past been obliged to submit to examinations which were later followed by operations, and to think that they might have been made to the accompaniment of the dictograph makes me shudder. However, I have no cause to think that the wife of my physician was a woman of the calibre of Mrs. Carman, otherwise my mental suffering would be greater than my physical suffering ever was.

AN INDIGNANT WOMAN.
New York, July 2, 1914.

Opposed to New Bus Lines.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a property owner and resident in East Seventy-ninth Street, which is now threatened with the establishment of a bus line through it, I wish heartily to indorse all that you say against the multiplication of such lines in this city. To the facts and figures you give I might add that these "man-killers," as you term them, would be especially dangerous in the crowded district east of Third Avenue. There seems to be no public demand for them; I have personally talked with a large number of my neighbors in regard to this threat to the peace, quiet, and safety of our street, and have yet to find any one in favor of it, notwithstanding systematic and long continued canvassing by the bus companies. You are entitled to the thanks of the community for so cogently presenting the case.

JOHN H. ISELIN.
New York, July 2, 1914.

NO MORE FOR ROOSEVELT.

Republican Party Will Not Again Accept Him as a Leader.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read your editorial article entitled "Roosevelt's Bid for Union" with deep interest. You have correctly analyzed his motives and interpreted his speech at Pittsburgh, but Roosevelt will fail in his attempt to unite the Republican and Progressive Parties and become the leader of both. The intelligent citizenship of this country has now discovered that he is a man with no fixed principles or permanent convictions. He has been on all sides of every question, and his political convictions rest on no more secure foundation than the quicksand of expediency.

The intelligent rank and file of the Republican Party want no more of Roosevelt. They want for a leader a statesman and not an unscrupulous demagogue who shifts with every breeze like willows in the wind. By his unparalleled career of political hypocrisy Col. Roosevelt has done more to prostitute the chastity of the public mind than any other man in American history. Not only this, but he will never be called to lead the Republican Party until vice predominates over virtue and until party loyalty is an acknowledged crime and party treason is regarded as a supreme virtue. This will never be so long as reason is the torch that lights and patriotism is the motive that moves mankind to political action.

CHARLES H. BETTS,
Editor of The Lyons Republican.
Lyons, N. Y., July 2, 1914.

ELIHU ROOT.

His Independence and Constructive Statesmanship Are Recognized.

From The Baltimore News.

The refusal of Elihu Root to stand for re-election as United States Senator from New York is very nearly matter for national regret. All partisanism aside, the Senate has not, and never had, so many members of Mr. Root's type that any of them could be spared.

Curiously enough, it has been as a member of the minority in the Senate that he has best demonstrated his constructive statesmanship. The country will not soon forget the contrast between the intellectual force with which the Republican Senator from New York turned to the Administration's support in the canal tolls controversy and the claptrap with which his Democratic colleague opposed it. Nor will the country forget his masterly last-hour analysis of the Currency bill, or the way in which the Democratic majority hastened to eliminate the faults he uncovered in it. Not often has that exhibition of respect for sheer intellect been duplicated in the United States Senate.

Sagacious and Patriotic.

From The Baltimore American.

Mr. Root has created for himself a degree of consideration that makes him a subject for the highest regard of the nation, aside from partisan opinion, and in the Republican ranks there is no one who stands higher than he.

The nation needs Mr. Root's continued services in public capacity and the future still has for him the stern work of service in the cause of the party whose ideals he has so uniformly supported, and for whose furtherance, as the party best fitted to perform the work of the nation, he stands committed by his record and by his expressions and by the needs of the day. The Senate can have no man to adorn its counsels possessed of greater sagacity or such unerring patriotism, and the country will always be his debtor.

The People His Clients.

From The Jamestown (N. Y.) Post.

During his single term in the Senate, Mr. Root has been recognized as one of the leaders of that body, showing an independence on occasion that is rare among our public men, as in the matter of the recent repeal of the Panama tolls provision, when he supported President Wilson's position in favor of repeal.

Small in stature, but great in intellect, Elihu Root has long been recognized as one of the leaders in American public life. By his retirement from the Senate, the Empire State will suffer a great loss. His place will be difficult to fill. No man must be considered who does not measure up to the high standard of public service which Elihu Root set for himself when he made the people his clients on entering the Cabinet fifteen years ago.

He Would Be Nominated.

From The Knickerbocker Press.

The opponents of direct nominations have always claimed that the system would do away with all possibilities of the office seeking the man and that it would not interfere with the condition which had existed for years of the aspirant for office seeking the indorsement of the bosses.

If Elihu Root would accept the nomination for United States Senator at the hands of the enrolled voters of the Republican Party, there would be no opposition to him on Primary Day, Sept. 28.

THE PATRIOT.

Hero of an Unsafe, Insane Fourth.

What though for long years cold, the
For Liberty, Life, Happiness' Pursuit!
Shall one who reaps thereof the golden fruit
In patriotic showing lag behind,
Or claim, in Independence won, less share
Than had he been on hand to help "declare"?

As, glorious, each Fourth comes round, behold
His holy sacrifice of limb and life * * *
Albeit not his own! * * * Haply
  some wife
Made widow, slaughtered babes, that he, enrolled
In Hero-Hall of Fame, may stand, though not
With Washington et al. upon the spot!

Explosives fatal, e'en as shot and shell:
Play-cannon, powder, match, bestowed on boys,
Paternally, as patriotic toys,
This Day of Days, will do the work as well
And cause the parent heart as proud a thrill
As had these fought, bled, died, at Bunker Hill!

Anew his grandsire's gun shall echoes
  wake,
Not as at Valley Forge, when shot ran low,
But with the hand that knows not friend from foe;
With brute, insensate noise for noise's sake,
And, consecrated thought! the reckless aim
That kills his brother in his country's name!

Then, grateful nation, let your praises
For him, the patriot, who, though born too late
To seek the dulce-et-decorum fate,
Yet freely maims and slays to prove ye
  free,
Staining Old Glory's stripes a deeper red—
Lest Peace the Blest mulct war-gods of their dead!

MARGUERITE MERINGTON.

SALEM'S NEED.

Aid for 10,000 Stricken People Asked from All Sides.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The people of this fine old Commonwealth of Massachusetts have responded most generously to the needs of Salem, and at first it was the hope of the Relief Committee that no assistance outside the State would be needed.

A more complete and thorough investigation of the situation has revealed the fact that the relief problem is far larger than at first supposed. Not only have thousands of persons lost their homes, but the burning of the large factories and mills has deprived them of their means of livelihood. To prevent still further suffering and distress, these people must be cared for until employment and more adequate shelter than tents, schools, and other crowded dwellings can be provided for them. The Committee on Employment is making every effort to secure work until the mills can be rebuilt.

In the largest camp, at Forest River Park, there are over 2,000 men, women, and children. At the outdoor kitchens the occupants of the tents secure their food in tin plates and cups and take it to a large tent where tables and benches are provided. No food is allowed in the tents, as it is necessary to maintain cleanly conditions in order to prevent disease. The daily expense of providing food for from eight to ten thousand persons amounts to thousands of dollars, and is eating its way rapidly into the relief fund.

Large quantities of clothing have been donated to the Red Cross Clothing Bureau, but great quantities of blankets and mattresses had to be purchased. Continued cold and rainy weather has required warmer clothing, more blankets and the flooring of all the tents in the camps. The Red Cross has provided a large number of its efficient enrolled Red Cross nurses, who are doing most excellent service at headquarters, the camps, maternity, and contagious hospitals. The patients and nurses of the Salem Hospital, which was burned, are being cared for at the Beverly Hospital. Milk stations, where proper food for babies is prepared, have been established at the camps and in other parts of the city, and at the maternity hospital babies have been born every day since the fire.

Many of the refugees are Canadian French, Poles, Italians, and Greeks, but there are also a large number of Americans. The people are brave, but it is pathetic to watch the trembling lips and tear-filled eyes of some good woman as she tells you of the loss of her little home and of the beloved household treasures. Few of the people had any insurance, and, save for a little hastily gathered clothing, generally lost all they had. They need help which should be and will be given them.

No call for aid was ever made to Massachusetts in vain, and now the American Red Cross, our great national mutual aid society, asks that our people help the sufferers in this old Commonwealth.

Contributions can be sent in New York to Fulton Cutting, appointed Special Treasurer of this fund by the Mayor, or to Jacob Schiff, Red Cross Treasurer, to be forwarded to Gardiner Lane, the Massachusetts Red Cross Treasurer.

Chairman of the National Relief Board for the American Red Cross.

Rabbis Oppose Christmas Celebrations Held by Municipalities.

DETROIT, July 3.—Municipal Christmas celebrations were denounced today as sectarian, and contrary to the spirit of America by the delegates attending the meeting of the Central Conference of American rabbis here. A resolution protesting against the celebrations was adopted.

There was an animated discussion over the question whether a separate Prayer Book should be published for those Jewish congregations which worship on Sundays. The argument for the separate Prayer Book was made by Rabbi Joseph Rauch of Louisville. He contended that present conditions made Sunday worship a necessity to many Jewish congregations. Others opposed the plan on the ground that it would be giving sanction to the observance of the Gentiles' Sunday by Jews.

Addresses were made by Mayor Good, George P. Gardner, Gen. Darling of the militia, and Ballard Thurston, President, Sons of the American Revolution.

Medal for New York Policeman.

TO INCLUDE BANKS IN TREATY INQUIRY

Senate Orders General Investigation of the Financial End of Nicaraguan Compact.

POWER TO CALL WITNESSES

Senator Smith's Resolution Adopted, with Names of New York Bankers Eliminated.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The Senate today adopted a resolution authorizing the Committee on Foreign Relations to conduct a general investigation of the financial relations of American bankers and the State Department with the Republic of Nicaragua. The resolution was introduced by Senator William Alden Smith, Republican, of Michigan. As introduced it bore a preamble reciting charges against Brown Brothers & Co. and J. & W. Seligman & Co. of New York, but this was stricken out when the resolution was reported.

For the past ten days the committee has been conducting an inquiry into facts related to the pending treaty with Nicaragua, under which the United States is to pay to that republic $3,000,000. The witnesses who have appeared have done so voluntarily. Senator Smith's resolution empowers the committee to subpoena witnesses and compel them to testify under oath. The inquiry will be resumed Monday.

At the same time that this resolution was brought before the Senate the Committee on Audit and Control of Contingent Expenses reported the Stone resolution providing for an investigation of the sources from which newspapers had obtained their information respecting the Nicaraguan inquiry in executive session. Senator Norris of Nebraska said that Senator Borah of Idaho, who was absent, wished to discuss the resolution. Senator Williams of Mississippi, Chairman of the Committee on Audit and Expenses, said there was no particular need of haste in adopting the resolution, and it was laid over until Monday.

So much opposition to the Nicaraguan and Colombian treaties has developed that some members of the Committee on Foreign Relations expect Secretary Bryan to drop his effort to have the conventions ratified during the present session of Congress. The Secretary of State outwardly maintains a composed calm, but it is known that part of the fire directed at the Nicaraguan treaty surprised him and caused him to realize that the ratification of the treaty would be far more difficult than he had expected.

WAR ON NAVY "PLUCKING."

Britten to Push His Bill for Reform in Retirement System.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Characterizing the navy retiring law a "self-evident and complete failure," as shown by Secretary Daniels's recent order taking fifteen officers off the active list, Representative Fred A. Britten of Illinois said tonight he would urge action on a bill which he introduced last May to abolish the so-called "plucking board."

Mr. Britten called attention to a statement by Secretary Daniels to the effect that the officers forced to the retired list were thoroughly efficient.

"This is only another evidence of the fallacy of retaining the present law of retiring by selection fifteen officers each year," said Mr. Britten. "Uncle Sam, by the action, has begun to pay an additional sum of nearly $54,000 each year to these 'able and efficient officers' for passing their time in idleness."

The Britten bill would provide for the retirement of the least efficient officers as shown by the records in the Navy Department.

FRENCH TREATY READY.

To be Sent to Senate with British Peace Agreement.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Secretary Bryan announced today that the finishing touches had been given to the new peace commission treaty between the United States and France, and that it would be signed and transmitted to the Senate at the same time as the proposed British-American peace treaty was.

Though similar in scope, the conventions are somewhat different in details, owing in part to the different colonial systems of Great Britain and France. Generally both are on the lines of The Netherlands treaty and do not include a provision for a suspension of armaments during the year's period of investigation to which the parties bind themselves before proceeding to hostilities in the eevnt of differences.

CALLS ON BARNES TO QUIT.

Editorial Barring Whitman Puzzles Followers of Aldridge.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, July 3.—Politicians were astonished today when they read an editorial article in The Evening Times, the Republican organization newspaper in this city, which demanded the resignation of Chairman Barnes, and said that the candidacy of District Attorney Whitman was not available as he was "Barnes's man."

Progressives throughout city and country are elated at what they call recognition on the part of George W. Aldridge, member of the Republican State Committee, of the stand taken by Col. Roosevelt and other Progressive leaders in the State.

Mr. Aldridge declined to discuss the matter tonight, but the rank and file of the Republican organization, very much puzzled, assert that the editorial really reflects the views of Mr. Aldridge and those close to him in the control of the Monroe County organization. Until today 90 per cent. of the Republican vote here was solid for Whitman.

McGuire Takes Dowling's Place.

ALBANY, July 3.—Lawrence M. D. McGuire of New York today was appointed a member of the State Factory Investigating Committee by Gov. Glynn to succeed Robert E. Dowling, who retired to become a member of the Workmen's Compensation Commission. Real estate interests of the State, which recently protested to the Governor against the manner in which the building laws were enforced, indorsed Mr. McGuire.

Walsh Vetoes Trading Stamp Tax.

BOSTON, July 3.—Gov. Walsh today vetoed the bill imposing a license fee of $100,000 on persons or firms giving trading stamps and coupons, and the House sustained the veto by a vote of 171 to 33, making an unbroken series of fourteen vetoes upheld. The Governor said the bill was unconstitutional.

Lower Fares After Federal Inquiry.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—After an investigation into a recent increase of passenger rates on steamboat lines plying between Norfolk and Washington and Norfolk and Baltimore, the Department of Justice announced tonight that the old schedule of fares had been restored.

Loft and Others Legally Elected.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The House Elections Committee today declared Representative George W. Loft, Democrat, of New York; Dick T. Morgan, and Bird S. McGuire, Republicans, of Oklahoma, to be legally elected. Mr. Loft succeeded the late Timothy D. Sullivan. The elections of all three had been contested.

CHAMBERLAIN DIES; SURPRISE IN LONDON

Statesman's End Was Not Expected and Casts a Gloom Over the Season.

TRIBUTES TO HIS MEMORY

Great Reformer and Business Genius Who Exercised Powerful Influence In Shaping British Legislation.

LONDON, July 3.—Joseph Chamberlain died at 10:30 o'clock last night in his London residence, but the fact was not made known until today. The announcement came as an entire surprise as the condition of his health was not publicly known to be any worse than at any time in the past two or three years. It appears that he had been sinking since Tuesday, but that the members of the family had preferred that his desperate condition should not become publicly known.

Mrs. Chamberlain, who never left her husband's side since he was stricken with paralysis seven years ago, and his son, Austen Chamberlain, were with him when he died.

The event has cast a gloom today over the London season, which was at its height.

Mr. Chamberlain's last public appearance was at a garden party on the grounds of his Birmingham home on May 6, when, with his wife and son, he received several hundred constituents. Mr. Chamberlain was wheeled out on the lawn and appeared very emaciated and feeble when he lifted his hat to friends and neighbors in acknowledgment of their salutes.

The funeral, which, according to his own wish will be a most simple one, will be held in Messiah Unitarian Church, Birmingham, next Monday. Interment will be in Hockley Cemetery. In his youth Mr. Chamberlain was a Sunday school teacher in the Messiah Church.

Mrs. Chamberlain throughout the day received numerous messages of condolence, including telegrams from King George, Queen Mary, the Queen Mother Alexandra, and other members of the royal family and from prominent persons at home and abroad.

CHAMBERLAIN'S BUSY LIFE.

Made Himself a Power in Politics by Applying Business Methods.

Although Joseph Chamberlain never attained to the Premiership of Great Britain, he has left upon the political life of his country a far deeper mark than many of those who have been the First Ministers of the Crown. To him was largely due the rejection of Mr. Gladstone's home rule proposals; to him was due the strong attempt to reverse the historic free trade policy of the empire. He split the two great British parties in turn, and forced a new alignment of the political leaders. Opinions differ as to how far he was the author of the Boer War, but there is no dispute as to his pre-eminence as an imperialist.

He was, moreover, in his early life a great municipal administrator, and he was the first to introduce into British politics the businesslike methods which characterize political life on this side of the Atlantic. He was, in fact, a business man through and through, and in this was in strange contrast with his associate, Arthur Balfour. He achieved success as a young man in commercial pursuits, and used the same methods as Mayor of Birmingham and Colonial Secretary.

Mr. Chamberlain was born in London in 1836, the son of a well-to-do merchant, a member of the Cordwainers Company. He was educated at a private school and University College, London, and at the age of 16 entered the office of his father, who had formed a screw manufacturing firm, Nettleford & Chamberlain, in Birmingham.

Before he had been very long in business he made an invention which established his fortune. Screws fifty years ago were blunt, and a gimlet had to be used to make the hole for them. Chamberlain conceived the idea of sharpening their points and making them self-sufficing. The idea brought him wealth, and by the time he was 38 he was able to turn his back on the counting room, secure from financial worries.

It was in 1874, during his first term as Mayor of Birmingham, that Mr. Chamberlain stood for Parliament. He was defeated, but in 1876 he stood again and was returned, never again to suffer defeat. So firm has his control become over his constituency that until the end of his life Birmingham and its neighborhood remained as much his own possession as any of the rotten boroughs of the unreformed Parliaments were of their patrons.

In the four years during which the Liberals were in Opposition after his election, he made himself a force on their side in the House and in the constituencies introduced a new and powerful political weapon. He adapted to British use the political machinery of America and formed the party caucus. Under Mr. Schadnorst the Liberals organized the voters thoroughly, and in spite of the anger and scorn heaped on their methods by the Conservative leaders and press went into the general election of 1880 far more efficiently prepared than their rivals. Mr. Chamberlain had, in fact, applied business principles to the great game of politics.

In these circumstances it was not remarkable that Mr. Gladstone should at once promote him to Cabinet rank. He was made President of the Board of Trade, and with Sir Charles Dilke held the leadership of the Radical wing of the Liberal Party. The hopes entertained of the Gladstone administration were largely frustrated through the unfortunate Bradlaugh controversy and the obstruction of the Irish Party, but Mr. Chamberlain managed to get through Parliament one useful piece of legislation, the Bankruptcy act. He also attempted to pass a strong Merchant Shipping bill and made his influence felt upon all departments of domestic affairs.

In dealing with Ireland it is curious to note that the future bitter opponent of home rule was one of the prime movers in the abandonment by Mr. Gladstone of the coercion policy. A keen business man, more concerned to get reform through Parliament than to haggle over principles, he saw that Ireland must be kept quiet. He advised the recall of W. E. Forster, the coercion Chief Secretary for Ireland, and was one of the prime movers in the Kilmainham treaty, as the attempt to reach a compromise with Mr. Parnell was called. It has been always held by those who resented most bitterly his later attitude on the Irish question that at this time a very little would have made Mr. Chamberlain forestall his chief as a home ruler.

However, he did not, and when Mr. Gladstone asked him to enter his Cabinet in 1886 as President of the Local Government Board he stipulated that he could not and would not assent to the creation of a separate Parliament on College Green, Dublin. To this Mr. Gladstone replied that he accorded him the "unlimited right of judgment and rejection."

In spite of this, Mr. Gladstone did not consult him in the preparation of his Home Rule bill, and it was only just before its introduction into the House that its terms were revealed to him. There was nothing for him to do but to resign, and with his retirement from the Ministry, with such prominent leaders as Lord Hartington and Mr. Goschen, the great split in the Liberal Party was complete.

For nine years Mr. Chamberlain held no office, but in this interlude to his Cabinet career was sent to this country in 1888 as Chairman of the Fisheries Commission, which drew up an important treaty on the much-vexed fisheries question between Great Britain and the United States. The visit to America was of particular importance to Mr. Chamberlain, as during the negotiations he met Miss Mary Endicott, daughter of Judge W. C. Endicott of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, who was Secretary of War under President Cleveland. He married her as his third wife at Washington on Nov. 15 of the same year.

In spite of what was then held extreme radicalism, though nearly all this programme has long since been placed on the statute books, Mr. Chamberlain, who had become the leader in the House of Commons of the Liberal Unionists on the succession of Lord Hartington to the peerage in 1891, was far too powerful to be omitted from the next Unionist Ministry, and in 1895 he entered Lord Salisbury's coalition Cabinet. To the astonishment of those who had thought him interested first and foremost in domestic affairs, he took office as the Secretary of State for the Colonies. This was, in fact, an innovation in British politics, quite apart from the personality of Mr. Chamberlain. It was the first time that a statesman of the first rank had accepted the portfolio of the colonies, and it was a formal recognition that no longer could the British dominions beyond the seas be regarded as a nuisance to the practical politician.

With South Africa his name will always be bound up. He was an ardent supporter of Cecil Rhodes in his schemes to paint the map red. He was in entire sympathy with the establishment of Rhodesia and his connection with the ill-fated Jameson raid on the Transvaal remains to this day one of Britain's State secrets. Mr. Chamberlain was, of course, exonerated of any complicity in the matter by a Parliamentary committee, but it is generally supposed that he had some inkling that it would happen, and that if it had been successful Mr. Rhodes was confident that Mr. Chamberlain would accept what had been done as a "fait accompli." It created, however, such a stir in National and international politics that it was absolutely essential to disown all authorization of it.

The opponents of Mr. Chamberlain have always asserted that in the days before the outbreak of the South African war he did not do all that he could and ought to have done to avert the struggle. It is quite certain, on the other hand, that his policy met with the approval of the majority of his countrymen, and that the worst they would have accused him of doing was the refusal to postpone what he felt to be inevitable and the miscalculation of the difficulties with which British arms would have to contend. At the conclusion of the war he made a personal tour through the conquered States and did much to obtain the allegiance of the Boer and Free State leaders to the new régime.

His Preferential Trade Policy.

Once more the business man was to come out in Mr. Chamberlain's career, and once more he was to disrupt the party with which he was associated. In 1903 he came out in favor of preferential trade within the British Empire. His views had obtained some sort of support from Mr. Balfour, who prepared for the consideration of his colleagues in the Cabinet a characteristically philosophical pamphlet, setting forth the dangers to British trade from the ever increasing customs barriers of other nations.

He refused, however, to go the whole way with Mr. Chamberlain, and the Duke of Devonshire, the leader of the Liberal Unionist organization, found it impossible in his old age to accept so complete a departure from the free trade principles of his youth. The position of Mr. Chamberlain became intolerable. He was pledged to an active reform of the fiscal system, Mr. Balfour preferred to leave it an open question, and he decided that he would be more useful to the cause he had at heart if he resigned from the Cabinet. His son Austen remained in office, and was even promoted, but in 1903 Mr. Chamberlain stepped down and became once more a private member of Parliament.

Outside of his career as a statesman, Mr. Chamberlain did much for the establishment of the University of Birmingham, an institution devoted to practical business education rather than literary studies. He was its first Chancellor in 1901, and was also once elected Lord Rector of Glasgow University, a semi-political office.

Mr. Chamberlain was known as a grower of orchids, and he never appeared in public without one of these costly exotics in his buttonhole. Part of the exasperation he created in the ranks of the Irish Parliamentary Party was undoubtedly caused by these flowers, which, with his faultlessly groomed figure, shining monocle and cold, expressionless face, gave a point to his bitter sallies which they resented keenly.

In the choice of his third wife, Miss Mary Endicott, Mr. Chamberlain was singularly happy. His domestic life afforded him real relief from the struggle of his Parliamentary career and she nursed him during the years of his final illness with assiduous care. She was a particular favorite of the late Queen Victoria, and at the time of the jubilee was one of the few non-royal personages to receive the gold instead of the silver medal.

At his home in Highbury Mr. Chamberlain gathered many valuable works of art, among which are masterpieces by Lord Leighton, Marcus Stone and Turner. Amid all his occupations as a Cabinet Minister he found time to look personally into the condition of the London poor, and many tales are told of his kindness to unfortunate dwellers in the slums.

Mr. Chamberlain's son, Austen, is already a prominent figure in British politics and has held several official positions. He was Postmaster General from 1902 to 1903, and was Chancellor of the Exchequer in the concluding years of the last Balfour Administration.

LLOYD GEORGE'S TRIBUTE.

Chamberlain Great Social Reformer Diverted by Home Rule Schism.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 3.—Among the most notable tributes to Joseph Chamberlain was one paid by Mr. Lloyd George, who said:

"I always had profound admiration for Mr. Chamberlain's great powers and deep respect for his character. He was a man of immense personal force, quite fearless, and capable of inspiring millions with faith in great ideas and principles and courage to fight for them. He had genuine enthusiasm for social reform.

"I always have been a believer in his sincerity and his desire to improve the condition of the masses of the people. In my judgment, but for the fatal diversion of his energies caused by the Home Rule schism, he would have been the greatest democratic statesman this country has yet seen. But for the events of 1886 and the loss of Mr. Chamberlain to Liberalism we would, I believe, be living today in a happier and stronger Britain, as a result of the courageous legislation inspired by Mr. Chamberlain's zeal for social reform. For all the splendor of his career, my feeling, now that it is closed, is one of sadness when I think of what might have been.

"I believe the attitude of his mind on many questions remained radical to the end, but his alliance with the Tory Party made it impossible for him to give effect to his genuine instincts as a reformer. As a speaker Mr. Chamberlain had wonderful gifts. I would not call him an orator, but he could stir great audiences as few men can. He was the most consummate of parliamentarians.

"For dramatic power and intensity and interest I have seen nothing in the House of Commons to match the long, tremendous duel between Chamberlain and Gladstone over Home Rule in the session of 1893."

GREAT MAN, SAYS ROOSEVELT.

Chamberlain Equally Efficient as Administrator and Debater.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 3.—Col. Roosevelt gave out this statement tonight when told of the death of Joseph Chamberlain:

"I sincerely regret Mr. Chamberlain's death. He was one of the great figures in public life not only in his own country but internationally. He was of commanding personality, of great strength, and of striking capacity for leadership—one of those rare men who were as effective in the House of Commons as on the stump, being equally efficient as legislator and administrator, and also as orator and debater.

"All who knew him and his family will feel sincere and respectful sympathy with his family in his loss."

OVERSEAS FOR SMALL JOB.

Travels 10,000 Miles to Work 30 Minutes on Ice Machine.

W. R. Sonecker, a refrigerating engineer for the Carbonade Manufacturing Company of Pittsburgh, arrived last night from Brazil on the Lamport & Holt steamer Vauban after traveling 10,000 miles to make repairs to a machine at Pernambuco, which took him just thirty minutes.

The Rosspach Brazil Company of Pernambuco purchased a refrigerating plant from the Pittsburgh company, and something went wrong which the Brazilian engineers did not understand. Mr. Sonecker had to go from New York to Bahia and then take another steamer back along the coast to Pernambuco and returned the same way after repairing the machine.

H. W. DENISON DEAD; EULOGIZED BY JAPAN

Nation's Legal Adviser for 34 Years Succumbs to Paralysis in Tokio at 68.

DECORATED BY EMPEROR

Career of Modest American Diplomat Who Was a Silent Power Behind the Oriental Throne.

TOKIO, July 3.—Henry Willard Denison, legal adviser of the Japanese Department of Foreign Affairs since 1880, died today in St. Luke's American Hospital. Mr. Denison was stricken with paralysis a week ago.

The announcement of Mr. Denison's death was withheld for several hours in accordance with Japanese custom in order to permit the Emperor to confer the decoration of the Grand Cordon of the Order of Paulownia on the dead man.

A eulogistic statement in regard to the services of Mr. Denison was later issued by the Japanese Foreign Office. In it he was hailed as one of the greatest benefactors of Japan. It concluded: "The whole Japanese nation joins in the sentiment of thankfulness and indebtedness for the distinguished services of Mr. Denison and in the expression of sorrow at his departure."

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The State Department today instructed Ambassador Guthrie at Tokio to convey to the Emperor of Japan and to the Japanese Government condolences of President Wilson and of the Government of the United States upon the death of Henry Willard Denison, adviser to the Japanese Foreign Office since 1880.

Henry Willard Denison was a man ranked by students of international politics with Hay and Lansdowne and Grey and Delcassé in the first rank of diplomats; yet because his work was done unobtrusively, because it was bound up in the achievements of Japanese statecraft in general and was hardly ever marked as his own, very few people knew his name outside of the circles of diplomacy and international law. But this man had been called the most influential of all the Westerners who had guided the destinies of Oriental nations—almost, his admirers even said, a power behind the throne.

He was born at Guildhall, Vt., May 11, 1846, and was the son of Col. John Paine Denison and Mary Shepard Cooper Denison. After receiving an academic education at Lancaster, N. H., he went to Washington and studied law at Columbian (now George Washington) University. After a time he obtained a departmental clerkship, but found the life too dull and promotion too slow to suit his fancy. At this time Japan was just being opened up to Westerners, and there was a certain romance about the country which made a strong appeal to young Denison. After the war of 1868, which determined that the Mikado and the progressive party should rule the country, Denison obtained an appointment as consular clerk at Yokohama under Gen. Van Buren. Here he served for several years, continuing meanwhile his law studies in a practical manner. This was the period when foreign concessions, with extra-territorial rights, were numerous in Japan, and the first treaties which the island empire had made with European nations were in many instances unjust or intentionally ambiguous. There was in consequence an almost hopeless tangle of conflicting laws and even of conflicting systems of law, which left most foreigners and most Japanese entirely in the dark as to the rights of any particular case. In this situation Mr. Denison resigned his clerkship to practice law among the foreign population of Japan, and attained an extraordinary success.

He had already returned to America for a short time in 1873, when he was married to Miss Helen Wilder Cross of New York. On going back to Japan he settled down definitely, and his reputation as an expert in the laws of various nations grew to such a pitch that in 1880 Count Inouye, then Minister of Foreign Affairs, appointed him legal adviser to the department.

At that time there were many foreigners—Americans, English, and Germans—in the Japanese service. With the passing years they grew fewer; as the older men died or retired their places were filled by Japanese. But Mr. Denison survived them all.

Mr. Denison followed Eli T. Sheppard in the position, and Sheppard had succeeded Pershine Smith—both Americans; but Smith and Sheppard had served Japan in the early days when her position was hardly better than that of Afghanistan or Siam. Denison was one of the most powerful men in the State during its change from an autocracy to a constitutional empire, from a mediaeval State with a demi-god ruler to a nation modern in almost every respect, from a country off on the edge of nowhere to one of the great powers.

In 1905 he visited the United States as a member of the Japanese party which concluded the Treaty of Portsmouth with Count Witte and his associates. Here also he was unobtrusive, and in the reports of the conference, when Barons Komura and Takahira were holding forth in the sessions of the envoys and Aino Sato was handling the announcements made to the outside world, Denison's name crept into dispatches only once or twice. Then nothing was said except "Mr. Denison spent the entire day at his desk." But there were not lacking men who said that it was Denison's work behind the scenes which had almost as much to do with the terms finally concluded as did the activities of Takahira and Komura.

He held two Japanese decorations which are the highest granted to any one except Princes of the blood—the Grand Cordon, First Class, of the Imperial Order of the Rising Sun, and the Grand Cordon, First Class, of the Order of the Second Treasure. Besides this he was a member of the Association de Législation Comparée, of Paris, and of the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague. He was a delegate from Japan to the second Hague Peace Conference. He held membership in clubs of New York, Washington, Yokohama, and Tokio.

GIANTS PLAY IN FINE FORM AND WIN--YANKEES LOSE TWO--TURF

DEMAREE'S RESIN BALL BAFFLES PHILS

Giants Play Like Champions Again and Romp Home Easy Winners.

After trying at various times and in various places, Al Demaree, the Giant pitcher, won a ball game yesterday at the Polo Grounds. Charley Dooin's badly disorganized Phils bore the brunt of Demaree's fit of good pitching. The score was 6 to 3. To all intents and purposes the Giants meant to treat the Quakers to a shut-out, but in the last inning the Phils began to rally and just didn't stop until three runs had oozed over.

Pitching for the Phillies yesterday was Joe Oeschger, who hails from St. Mary's College in California. The Giants bunched hits on Joe in the fourth and sixth innings and got runs aplenty.

Demaree's resin ball was behaving much better than it has for some time. He didn't allow any hits to speak of until the ninth inning, when his service was solved and hits were bunched on him to the effect of three counts. A pleasant feature of the game was the appearance of some umpires who took the place of Lord Byron and Bill Johnson. Most every one around here hope that these two have gone on a long journey. Rigler and Bill Hart are working here now, but at times the work of Rigler on the bases was very suggestive of the kind that Johnson has been spilling around here of late.

In the first inning Bescher got a hit, stole second, and went to third when Joe Oeschger perpetrated a life-sized balk. There have been many balks at large around here since Buck O'Brien made one in the world's series a few years back. Bescher scored on Fletcher's single to left. In the third inning Bescher singled and was forced by Burns. Burns stole second, Fletcher walked, and Burns and Fletcher worked a double steal. Burns scored on Dave Robertson's sacrifice fly. Burns seemed to be out on each of his steals, but Rigler called him safe, and even the home folks jeered the decisions.

Larry Doyle got a pass in the fourth and Stock fouled to Killifer, the human chattel. Meyers singled and was forced by Demaree. Bescher got an infield hit and scored Doyle. Burns then got a two-bagger which sent Demaree home. Burns's double came in handy in the sixth inning and scored Bescher and Demaree.

In the ninth Demaree weakened for a while. Bobby Byrne singled and Beals Becker doubled to the right wing of the grand stand. Hans Lobert singled, scoring Byrne. Sherwood Nottingham Magee, who is not shortstopping as a regular job, was thrown out at first and Becker scored. While Cactus Cravath was being tossed out by Fletcher Lobert counted. The score:

O'Toole Pitches a Winning Game.

PITTSBURGH, July 3.—It was a pitchers' battle that Pittsburgh won from Chicago today by a score of 2 to 1. O'Toole was in the box for Pittsburgh and Lavender for Chicago and each man allowed four hits. Chicago scored in the second inning on Schulte's double and two infield hits. Pittsburgh did not score until the seventh inning when Konetchy singled, Zimmerman fumbled Kelly's grounder, Mitchell sacrificed, scoring Konetchy and advancing Kelly, who also scored when Coleman hit safe. ST. LOUIS, July 3.—Cincinnati was more fortunate in placing its hits than St. Louis and won the opening game of the series, 5 to 3. Schneider pitched fine ball until the ninth inning, when he weakened and was relieved by Ames. Cincinnati was strengthened by Manager Herzog's return to the game. Score:

Strand's Ineffectiveness Puts Superbas in Lead Early.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., July 3.—The Superbas opened their five-game series today by beating the loose-fielding Braves 6 to 5. Strand, Crutcher, and Cocreham each took a turn in the box for the home team, but Brooklyn, with a 5 to 2 lead on seven hits against the lefthander, got the breaks at the finish. Manager Robinson yanked Aitchison out in the eighth, Ragan finishing strong until he passed two men with two out in the ninth, O'Mara then making a fast play on Maranville to prevent a tie.

Each team scored two runs in the first inning, Brooklyn on O'Mara's hit, which Dugey juggled; Strand's wild throw on Daubert, Evers's rainbow return to third, and a well executed squeeze play. Boston's runs came on a pass to Evers, who stole; Maranville's single, a wild pitch, and a hit by Schmidt.

A pass to Stengel and singles by Aitchison and O'Mara got Brooklyn a run in the second, and in the fourth two runs resulted from a pass to Aitchison and hits by O'Mara and Daubert, together with a double steal. Daubert's run in the seventh, setting the score at 6 to 2, came on his hit, Schmidt's fumble, and an out at first, while Boston came back with three runs on passes to Whaling and Gowdy and Gibert's homer over the right-field fence. Evers then singled, but nice stops by Cutshaw and Smith saved the Superbas from having the game sewed up in a tie. The score:

BOONE AND MAISEL LOSE TWO GAMES

Yankee Infielders' Errors Give Athletics Two Shutout Victories.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., July 3.—The New York Yankees were shut out twice by the Athletics here today, 2-0 and 1-0. In the first game Warhop and Bender were the opposing pitchers and in the second Keating and Pieh opposed Shawkey.

Only thirty-one New York batters faced Shawkey in the second fray. He retired the side in five of the nine innings and never was in danger. Pieh, however, twirled excellent ball and the Athletics were unable to get the necessary hit and run they needed until the seventh inning.

Lapp opened the seventh for the Athletics with a pass and advanced to third on Shawkey's sacrifice and Murphy's out. When Maisel threw wild on Oldring's grounder Lapp scored.

Previously the Athletics had wasted six singles. Twice they had the bases filled, the first time in the second inning when Murphy caused the runners to be stranded by giving Daley a fly and second in the fourth when Baker fanned with the bases filled and two out.

It was not until two men were out in the sixth inning that New York got a hit off Shawkey. Their second safety came in the eighth when Sweeney led off with a two-bagger. Shawkey, however, prevented the visitors from scoring. Seven thousand fans were present.

Successive errors by Boone and Maisel in the fourth inning caused New York's defeat in the first game. Up to this inning Warhop did not allow a Mackman to reach first base. He broke his clean string by passing Murphy, and then Collins added to the gayety of the occasion by singling to left, after Oldring had flied to Daley. Baker grounded to Mullen, who was playing his second game in the major league, and the trouble began. Boone juggled McInnis's grounder and in failing to make the play at first he allowed Murphy to score. Noting that Collins had turned third base, Boone heaved to Maisel and the latter dropped the throw and Collins crossed the rubber.

Twice after this inning Murphy was retired at the plate. Warhop allowed the Athletics four hits, and the New Yorkers got the same number off Bender, but they could not collect them in clusters.

Bender did his best work in the seventh. Then, with runners on third and second and one out, Bender fanned Holden and Nunamaker. Pete Daley put up a fine game for New York and made a double and a single and drew a pass in four times at bat. The score:

Johnson opposed Walter Johnson in the opening game, but his offerings were hit to all corners of the field. Cooper succeeded him in the fifth inning an dwas also hit hard. Williams starred at bat for the locals, with a double, a triple, and a home run. The second game was a pitcher's duel between Wood and Boehling, the Red Sox winning out in the tenth after two were out on singles by Yerkes and Wood and Cady's double. Scores:

DETROIT, July 3.—Coveleskie allowed Cleveland four hits today, while his teammates were pounding three visiting pitchers for twelve hits, the Tigers winning 8 to 2. White Sox Triumph in Thirteenth.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Berger's hit, after two men were out in the thirteenth inning, gave Chicago a 3 to 2 victory over St. Louis today. James was taken out to let a pinch hitter bat for him in the thirteenth. Wellman, who succeeded him, started the last inning against the locals by walking Bodie. Schalk sacrificed and Wellman threw wild to first, allowing Bodie to reach third and Schalk second. Baumgardner displaced Wellman, and when Alcock hit to Pratt, Bodie was caught at the plate. Faber grounded out and Berger followed with the hit which won the game. The score:

HOUCK PLAYS DOUBLE ROLE.

Stars on Defense and Offense in Brookfeds' 9-to-1 Victory.

Stimulated by the chilly weather young Byron S. Houck, whom Connie Mack did not think good enough for his world's champions, went a long way toward proving that he is still good enough for the Federal League yesterday by holding down Buffalo, while the Brookfeds were getting away with a 9-to-1 victory. It was the first game Houck had finished with successful results since joining the new league. The way the Brookfeds were batting Houck could probably have won the game even if he had the proverbial glass eye and wooden arm, and he sort of rubbed it in when he held the visitors down to one lone tally. Houck did a little fancy batting himself, as is said to be his wont, and made one clean home run into the bleachers in centre field.

The game was a walk-away contest from the moment the Brookfeds got wise that Pitcher Moore, who started the game for the Buffalo team, did not have anything but a smile, which soon disappeared. The discovery that Moore was something of a flivver was made by Hap Myers, the second man up for Brooklyn, who started a battingfest by singling cleanly. Singles by Shaw and Hofman, Steve Evans's double, and bases on balls to Westerzil and Gagnier accounted for three runs scored in this period. This was the end of Mr. Moore, who is officially entitled to credit for pitching one-third of an inning, and Moran was trotted out by Larry Schafly.

Moran proved to be little better, and although he managed to halt the Brookfeds' scoring in the first inning, he was unable to withstand the attack in the second inning, and three more runs were driven across the plate. A couple of errors by Moran himself contributed largely to this very desirable result from a Brooklyn standpoint. The score:

WIDE INTEREST IN OLYMPIC GAMES

Col. Thompson Says New International Rules Will Prove Satisfactory.

Col. Robert M. Thompson, President of the American Olympic Committee, returned yesterday from Paris on the Mauretania. He headed the American athletic delegation to the Olympic Congress which sat at the Sorbonne, Paris, June 13 to June 23, to arrange rules for the Olympic games to be held at Berlin in 1916. Col. Thompson was not only enthusiastic over the result of the deliberations of the Congress, which was attended by 150 delegates from all parts of the world, but also over the international interest displayed, and he predicted that the Berlin Olympic games would be the greatest ever held.

The Congress was the most important ever held in the history of international sports, and the delegates decided the conditions, programme, regulations, and classification of the games, and Col. Thompson said it was particularly gratifying to the delegates that political questions were kept out of the debates. He, however, said that individuality had been practically eliminated from the games, and that the nations were entering into the spirit of competition with a whole-heartedness that has been missing in past Olympic games. Instead of the individual athlete being the first consideration, the nation now directs the actions of the athletes, and this, Col. Thompson asserts, will result in better competition, world-wide interest, and add to the importance of the games.

That the representatives were intent upon complete harmony was evidenced early in the conference, and the subjects debated were treated in a dignified manner, without any particular nation attempting to take any advantage of a loophole to advocate a measure that would benefit the athletes of that country. It was early demonstrated that, however useful the congress as constituted was for the purpose of deciding questions of principle, it was far too unwieldy to deal with details, and that was particularly noticeable when the French proposition that there should be a universal amateur definition applicable to all sports and all countries came to be considered.

The idea itself was impracticable, if only for the fact that prizes for riding and shooting competitions are almost always in money, and to frame a definition which should provide for such exceptions would be a matter of some consideration. It was therefore decided that the amateur definition obtaining in each sport and accepted by the Sports Internationale Federation should be accepted, and in cases of sports having no international federation they should be asked to at once form one and decide upon a definition. In other words Col. Thompson explained that the definition of an amateur was left to each country, but if the Olympic Committee discovers any attempt to take advantage of the broad ruling, or that they were not playing fair, the committee will at once "jack them up."

Col. Thompson explained that the international federation of each sport is to draw up a programme which, subject to the approval of the Olympic Committee, is to be accepted. The Congress was unanimous in the opinion that a competitor who has once competed as of one nationality shall never be eligible to compete under another, even if in the meantime he has been naturalized—an exception being made where a country has been "annexed by conquest."

The question of women competing in several branches of sports was favorably received and while the list of sports in which women can take part is limited it has been enlarged and will serve to place women on a more nearly equal plane with the men. Archery has been added to the list of events in which women can compete, as well as other minor sports.

The application of Finland and Bohemia to compete as separate countries as hitherto was denied, but it was felt that as much as the committee desired to permit these countries to compete as hitherto, it would be impossible to alter the political map of the world, and therefore the representatives of these countries will have to compete as Russians and Austrians respectively.

Col. Thompson was gratified over the result of the American delegation in securing the consent of the Congress to limit the number of contestants from any one nation in one event to twelve, with six alternates or substitutes. The Congress first placed the number at six entries with three reserves, but upon reconsideration the question was submitted to a committee which accepted the American proposition. This will enable the United States to send a big delegation as in former years.

The American delegation was successful in every proposition submitted by them. This, Col. Thompson explained was due to the fact that every point raised was in the interest of general athletics and not with a view to benefit specially American competitors.

One interesting incident, illustrating the complete harmony of the occasion occurred at the end of the session of the day of the first international polo match between America and England. As the session adjourned the American delegates crossed the room in a body and congratulated the English representatives on the result of the match.

Col. Thompson explained that he would not charter a steamship for the American athletes as was the case with the Swedish games in 1912. The American representatives will be sent abroad on a transatlantic liner flying an American flag. During their stay in Germany they will be quartered at one of the hotels in or near Berlin. In discussing the outlook for the games in 1916 Col. Thompson said:

"With the establishment of international rules, and new sports provided, the American International Olympic Committee can now get down to details. Many of the athletes who competed two years ago will again be available, while we have a number of new men who promise to worthily uphold American athletics.

"There will be two meets, the first in February, which will give an opening for skating and skiing and other Winter sports. Rugby football will be a new feature of the latter games. This will give this country two teams in football, one in Rugby and the other for soccer. Sailing races will also be inaugurated, each country having one entry. The second meet will be for general athletics, and from an American standpoint, the most important.

"About the only regret we have is that all marksmen must use German rifles. This will offer a hardship on our rifle shots who are used to American-made rifles." "But," jocosely remarked the Colonel, "we are too good for the other nations when using our own guns."

Martin played with the Rochester Internationals last season.

President Gaffney of the Boston club announced tonight that the following players have signed contracts for two or more seasons: Evers, Maranville, Schmidt, Gowdy, Gilbert, Rudolph, James, and Strand.

JACK DUNN TO GET HELP.

International League to Assist Its Clubs Crippled by Federal League.

The club owners of the International League held another long session at the Hotel Imperial yesterday, and decided to stand together and weather the losses which some of the clubs are experiencing in the keen competition with the Federal League.

President Barrow said last night: "We will see the season through just as we stand, and there is not the slightest possibility of any change in our circuit. While conditions in some of our cities are unsettled, we believe that conditions will adjust themselves before the season is over. The matter can be left to the fans. The people in Baltimore will realize after a while what a fine team Dunn has, and that the brand of ball they are playing is of a much higher standard than the Federal League's."

It is understood that the club owners practically decided to establish an emergency fund to meet any financial deficiencies which may arise in the various cities where there is Federal League competition. If business does not pick up with the Baltimore or Jersey City clubs, the league stands ready to help these clubs.

Jack Dunn returned to Baltimore last night with the assurance of the other members of the league that they would support him in any losses he might suffer this season.

M'CAHEY PILOTS THREE WINNERS

Blue Thistle Makes a "Killing" in the Fourth Race at Aqueduct Track.

In all the races in which they rode at the Aqueduct track yesterday, McCahey and Marco got into the money. McCahey started off by winning the first three races, in each of which Marco rode the horse that finished third. McCahey had no mount in the fourth race, but Marco again ran third. Then Marco shifted things and won the last two races, McCahey riding the third horse in each of these. So they divided things up between themselves in a rather unusual fashion. Butwell and Kederis each landed mounts in second place in two races. Marco was the only one of the lot that got a favorite home, he doing that trick with Goldy in the fifth race. The consistent way in which the favorites were bowled over made the layers very happy and the players equally despondent.

There was an old-fashioned "killing" in the fourth race, in which Blue Thistle was a nentry. Blue Thistle has been performing consistently among the "also rans" in Maryland and in Canada for a few moons back, earning a recod such as would keep any but a blind man who couldn't read the racing charts from backing him to do anything except be beaten. But his shrewd trainer found a "soft spot" for him in the fourth race, a seven-furlong selling affair. Blue Thistle conveniently found the speed he seemed to have lost on the Canadian tracks and utilized it with such surprising effect that he beat such fairly good "platers" as Louise Travers and Perthshire.

The race was made additionally picturesque by the appearance in it of Loretta Dwyer, which was erratic. She refused to parade with the others before the race, tried to climb over the fence down near the paddock, and did all the steps of a high-school horse in the middle of the track near by. Then she took it into her head to run a spell an dstarted off so suddenly as to nearly unseat her jockey, running around the track to the starter's post like a quarter-horse trying to break a time record. Sumter stopped her just as she reached the barrier, and she then remained fairly well behaved until that was lifted.

Getting away Loretta Dwyer raced with Perthshire until she ran that fast plater "into the ground," and made him quit at the head of the stretch. Then Louise Travers took the lead, but held it only for a couple of hundred yards, for Blue Thistle, the "good thing," suddenly came to life, and under Schuttinger's vigorous guidance shot to the front, and from the last sixteenth post won as he pleased, beating Perthshire home by a couple of lengths. Perthshire lasted just long enough to get the place from Progressive, which finished with a fine show of speed, coming from last place at the instant that the erratic Loretta Dwyer, having raced herself to a standstill, literally came down to a walk and foxtrotted to the finish. BAKER WINS TWO HEATS.

New York A. C. Runner Qualifies for Half and Quarter Mile Races.

LONDON, July 3.—Homer Baker of the New York Athletic Club won his heat in the British half-mile amateur championship to-day. He won by four yards in 2:02 2-5. The other two heats in the half-mile were won respectively by Henley of Brighton in 1:58 2-5, and Hill of the Polytechnic Harriers, whose time was 0:1:58 4-5.

Baker also won his heat in the quarter mile championship by four yards in 50 4-5. The other winners of heats in the quarter-mile were Mitchell, London University, in 51 3-5 seconds; Seedhouse, London Athletic Club, 50 4-5 seconds, and Jacobs of Herne Hill, in 51 2-5 seconds.

The preliminary heats in the British field and track championships were run off today at the Stamford Bridge ground, London.

Among the entrants are ten American athletes, including hurdlers, sprinters, and middle and long distance runners. They are: James C. Patterson, University of Pennsylvania; W. F. Potter, Yale University; Thomas J. Halpin, and James A. Powers, Boston Athletic Association; Harry J. Smith, Bronx Church House, New York; Thomas Kelly, Irish-American Athletic Club, New York, and James I. Wendell, Homer Baker, Thomas Paton, and Horace Hocking, all of the New York Athletic Club.

The four miles flat championship was won again by the holder, G. W. Hutson of the Surrey Athletic Club, in 19:41 1-5. A. H. Nicholls of the Surrey Athletic Club was second, and C. F. Price of the Newport Harriers third. There were twenty-six starters.

The putting the weight championship was won by A. R. Taipale of Finland with a put of 44 feet 7¼ inches. H. Harbison of the New York Athletic Club was second with 43 feet 6½ inches.

Taipale won the discus event with a throw of 144 feet 6¼ inches; Quinn of the Polytechnic Harriers was second with 125 feet ¾ inch, and Tolby, Hungary, third, with 123 feet 4 inches.

Harry J. Smith, Bronx Church House, New York, was among the competitors in several of the events, but was never prominent.

Cleveland Lightweight to Box Here.

Dick Stosh, the lightweight of Cleveland, who boxes Gene Moriarity of Syracuse in one of the star bouts at the Fairmont A. C. tonight, is one of the most prominent aspirants for a title uncovered in a long time. Stosh was an amateur up to about a month ago. He won the championship in the West and three weeks ago made his professional debut at the Fairmont Club. He stopped his man in a few rounds. Since then he has boxed twice and each time scored a knockout in quick time. Because of the length of the card it is planned to start the show promptly at 8:15.

Twenty-Round Bouts Legalized.

NEW ORLEANS, July 3.—After a lapse of more than twenty years, twenty-round boxing contests under the auspices of chartered clubs, were legalized in Louisiana today when Gov. Hall, at Baton Rouge, signed a bill limiting glove contests to twenty rounds instead of ten.

PLEIONE CAPTURES MACDONOUGH CUP

Twinkle and Okee Other Notable Trophy Winners in American Y. C. Regatta.

The breezes of Long Island Sound recovered from their attack of psychological depression yesterday, and the forty-two yachts that started in the American Yacht Club's open regatta were sent away at top speed with the aid of a brisk southeasterly wind. They made fast time over the course and there were a number of close finishes. An encouraging sign was the large turnout of trim thirty-footers, there being ten starters in this class, and over a 16½-mile course less than ten minutes separated the first from the last at the finish.

There were three special prizes in the shape of Joseph M. Macdonough's cup for fifty-footers, George C. Boldt's cup for sonder boats, and Mrs. Edgar Palmer's cup for thirties. The cup put up by Commodore Oliver Harriman and Rear Commodore Ogden Mills Reid for the America's Cup candidates—Vanitie, Resolute, and Defiance—went begging, as these sloops withdrew to prepare for the Newport races.

Pleione, the smart fifty-footer owned jointly by C. C. Rumrill and E. Townsend Irvin, won the Macdonough cup after a keen contest with Barbara, Carolina, and Spartan; S. C. Hunter's Twinkle captured the Boldt cup, defeating Mrs. Edgar Palmer's Joyette and four other competitors with ease. The Palmer cup went to Okee, owned by Commodore J. A. Mahlstedt of the New Rochelle Yacht Club, which finished last in the New Rochelle regatta three days ago.

The committee was composed of H. deB. Parsons, Chairman; Joseph M. Macdonough, Stuyvesant Wainright, Oren M. Beach, and Philip R. Mallory, and the power yacht Alacrity, chartered by Mr. Macdonough, was the committee boat.

The start was off Scotch Caps, and the fifties were sent away at 12:25 over a 16½-mile triangle which gave them a beat to Woolsey's Reef, a reach to Matinicock Point, and a run home. Carolina, owned by Pembroke Jones and sailed by A. Bryan Alley, got the best start, although she was under the lee of Spartan, owned by Edmund Randolph. Both these sloops were on the starboard tack, while Pleione and H. P. Whitney's Barbara crossed at the north end of the line and on the port tack. It was a two-division race to windward, but after that Pleione and Carolina pulled away from the others and fought it out the rest of the way. On the run home, with spinnakers to starboard, Pleione led by 1 minute and 35 seconds.

The smaller boats were sent away at five-minute intervals, a twelve-mile course with turns at Great Captain Island and Matinicock Point being sailed by the sonder boats, Larchmont interclub class, and Jewel class, and an eight-mile course being sailed by the Stamford one-designers and Star boats. Miss Anna Bruel, the New Rochelle yachtswoman, sailed her Pavlowa over the short course, although she had no class R competitors.

George F. Scott's Miladi finished ahead of H. C. Smith's Ahmakola in the mixed class for schooners, but the margin of 5 minutes and 19 seconds was not enough, and Ahmakola won on time allowance. Lewanna, owned by the Spence brothers, led the Larchmont interclub fleet, and D. B. Jennings's Moonstone defeated W. W. J. Bucknall's Brilliant in the Jewel class. R. W. J. Kingan's Scaup placed another victory to her credit by showing the way to Adrian Iselin, 2d's, Wake in the Stamford one-design class, while George A. Coiry's Little Dipper was the best of the Star boats.

VAGRANT SAILS TO VICTORY.

Eastern Yacht Club Cruise Starts from Newport in a Northeaster.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., July 3.—A moderate but decidedly cool northeaster blew the Eastern Yacht Club fleet from Newport to this coastwise stopping place today in one of the best runs that the fleet has enjoyed for several years. Sheets were flat aft from the start at Brenton's Reef Lightship to the finish off Westchop, and for twenty miles through Vineyard Sound it was uphill work all the way.

The winners of the day were: Vagrant in the first division of schooners, Alice in the second division of schooners, and Avenger in the sloop class. In the special class the Enchantress beat the Vagrant by 32 seconds.

The first leg of seventeen miles to Vineyard Sound Lightship was slightly off the wind, making it a close fetch with booms well in and small reaching jibtopsails set. The big fellows at once began to walk by the smaller craft, and half an hour after the start the Enchantress, the giant of the fleet, was well out ahead. Off the entrance to Buzzard's Bay the wind fell off a bit, but upon turning into Vineyard Sound it breezed up to over ten knots. As the tide was running strong up the Sound, the twenty-mile beat to the finish furnished fine sport.

Astern, the little yachts struggled gamely along, and had they been sailing in the same class with their larger sisters, would probably have won out on time allowance. The little Stamford schooner Alice, which could have been carried on the deck of the Enchantress, was less than an hour astern of the larger yacht at the finish.

The fleet will continue the cruise tomorrow with a run back down Vineyard Sound, through Quick's Hole, and across Buzzard's Bay to Mattapoisett, where a yacht club fleet has not been seen in twenty-five years. The summary:

Britton Wins Mystic Canoe Cup.

BOSTON, July 3.—Ralph Britton of the Gananoque Canoe and Motor Boat Club of Ontario won the Mystic Cup, but was eliminated in one of the preliminary heats for the inter-city trophy in sailing canoe races on the Charles River basin today.

Britton captured the Mystic Cup in a close race with three competitors, among them Herman D. Murphy of the Union Boat Club, holder of the cup. Hildig Froilg of this city, representing the Gothenburg Canoe Club of Sweden, led up to the fifth round, when Britton went to the front.

In the inter-city competition Britton was beaten by J. W. Newman of the Union Boat Club. A second heat in this event was won by Frolig, who led Murphy over the line after the latter had been ahead for five of the six laps. The final in the inter-city match will be held tomorrow.

VANITIE OVERBOARD AGAIN.

Cup Candidate Will Tow to Newport Today.

After two days of polishing, scraping, and painting, Alexander Smith Cochran's cup candidate Vanitie slid back into the water at high tide last evening, and at 8 o'clock this morning she will leave City Island in tow of her tender, City of Stamford, for Newport. The early start was decided upon in order that Vanitie should have all day Monday to stretch sails and test rigging over the course where the actual trial races start next Tuesday.

Defiance, the tri-city contender, will be hauled out and scraped today, and she will not leave City Island until tomorrow morning. She will be towed by a tug, and with good weather Capt. Selah B. Howell, her skipper, expects to reach Newport Sunday night so as to do some sail stretching Monday.

In the hurry to be off Vanitie will leave behind her new hollow steel boom, which was counted on to lighten her considerably. The new spar has proved more of an experiment than was expected, and if it is used at all it will not be until after the eleven races at Newport are over. The two pieces were fitted together yesterday at Wood & McClure's, but there is still a good day's work to be done on it, so it was decided to stick to the hollow wooden boom for the present, although it is 400 or 500 pounds heavier. Although William Gardner, the designer, is a firm believer in the new spar, it will not be used in a race until it has been thoroughly tested with the sail up.

Prof. Harold W. Webb of Columbia, official measurer of the New York Yacht Club, completed his measurements of the Cochran sloop before she was lowered into the water yesterday. Today he will do the same with Defiance, so that official ratings will be in hand when they face Resolute next week.

While the only important change in Defiance for the coming series will be the new headsails which set from the topmast truck, it is understood that the present plan is to abandon the knockabout rig immediately after the last Newport race, and to follow the example of both Resolute and Vanitie by giving her a double headrig. This will mean a return to the bowsprit and restepping the mast four feet or so further aft.

While members of the tri-city syndicate insist that there has been no friction between themselves and George Owen, the designer, it is known that Owen is opposed to this plan. He is opposed even to the change in headsails, having from the first favored the knockabout design. But after giving his ideas a fair trial, those in charge of the yacht are not satisfied with the results, and if they have their way, Defiance will appear later in the Summer with a double headrig.

KITTY HAWK FAST BOAT.

Motor Craft Runs at Rate of 52.9 Miles an Hour at Peoria.

PEORIA, Ill., July 3.—Kitty Hawk VI., the fast boat owned by H. H. Timkin of Canton, Ohio, exceeded two American power boat records at today's racing of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat Association. She covered a mile down stream in 1:06, a rate of 54.54 miles an hour. Then she ran a mile up stream in 1:08 3-5, and a mile down stream in 1:07 3-5, averaging a rate of 52.9 miles an hour for the round trip. The Kitty Hawk's marks were not made in races, but in trials against time.

In the Class B event, fifteen miles, Warren Groat, owned by W. T. Warren, Chicago, won the second heat and the race in 29:49. Warren Groat also won the second heat and the race in the Class D event, ten miles, time 20:14 1-5, and the first heat in the Class C event, fifteen miles, time 29:49½.

Spot, owned by Thomas J. Tracy, New York, captured the first heat of the Class E event, twenty miles, in 33:35½. The first heats of the races concluded today were run yesterday.

Lyon of Toronto, who has taken seven Canadian championships.

ANDERSON DEFEATS VOSHELL AT TENNIS

Bronx Champion Loses Three Hard Sets in Kings County Tournament.

Frederick B. Anderson, the former Long Island champion, showed much of his old-time form yesterday in a semi-final round of the men's singles for the Kings County lawn tennis championship on the courts of the Long Island Club at Brooklyn, when he defeated S. Howard Voshell, the Bronx champion in three hard-fought sets by the score of 4—6, 6—4, 6—3. The result was a surprise to the big gallery, as Voshell was generally favored to win the Kings County title. Anderson, however, was at his best, and played a strong game.

The first set was well contested, with Voshell always a little in the lead. Anderson opened the second set with an aggressive attack, and although constantly threatened by his opponent, he managed to pull through and equalize matters. The victory in this set appeared to give Anderson confidence, and he played a stronger game. Voshell seemed to feel the strain, and fell away in his play. He had previously played in singles and doubles, and was suffering from the effects.

Playing with a broken racquet in one set, Dr. William Rosenbaum defeated Guernsey after a hard contest. The winner was badly off his stroke in the first set, and lost by a 6—3 score. He recovered in the second set, but broke his racquet. This enabled his opponent to make the set closer than it otherwise would have been. Dr. Rosenbaum was seen at his best in the third set, and kept Guernsey on the run throughout, winning by a 6—2 score.

Frederick C. Baggs and Benjamin M. Phillips played the closest match of the day. Although only two sets were played, the score in each was carried to deuce. Thirty-four games were contested in the two sets, with final honors in favor of Baggs by the score of 8—6, 10—8. Dr. Rosenbaum and Baggs will play the final round this morning, and the winner will face Anderson for the title later in the day.

The doubles were advanced to the fourth round. B. Dwight and J. Allen won a hard three-set match from J. H. A. Williams and A. Guggenheim, but were unable to hold their advantage, as they fell before the attack of Baggs and Voshell in the following rounds. The summary:

Men's Singles, Kings County Championship.—Fourth Round—Philip Cumming defeated J. H. A. Williams, 5—7, 6—4, 6—2.

Fifth Round—Frederick C. Baggs, defeated Benjamin M. Phillips, 8—6, 10—8; Dr. William Rosenbaum defeated H. Guernsey, 3—6, 6—4, 6—2; T. B. Anderson defeated J. W. Anderson, 6—3, 6—0; S. Howard Voshell defeated Philip Cumming, 6—3, 6—0.

Semi-final Round—Frederick G. Anderson defeated T. Howard Voshell, 4—6, 6—4, 6—3.

Men's Doubles.—First Round—Dr. William Rosenbaum and R. G. Langdon defeated A. Edmonds and partner by default; B. Dwight and J. Allen defeated J. H. A. Williams and A. Guggenheim, 6—3, 1—6, 6—2; T. Howard Voshell and Frederick C. Baggs defeated A. Oelner and partner by default.

Second Round—J. Anderson and T. Trask defeated Leonard Beekman and Allan Tobey by default; Benjamin M. Phillips and G. A. L. Dionne defeated B. Davis and A. Mathey, 6—4, 4—6, 6—2; Dr. Rosenbaum and R. G. Langdon defeated Philip Cumming and R. F. Wood by default; S. Howard Voshell and Frederick C. Baggs defeated B. Dwight and J. Allen, 6—3, 6—3; T. Ackerland and G. Gatwilly defeated C. B. Burrows and F. C. Burrows by default; Frederick Anderson and C. C. Chambers defeated W. Hartye and partner by default.

Third Round—Frederick B. Anderson and C. C. Chambers defeated R. Lake and W. Ross, 6—4, 8—6.

LARNED LOSES AT TENNIS.

Mahan Defeats Former Champion in Glen Cove Tournament.

Lyle E. Mahan, the former Columbia University tennis player, created a surprise in the Nassau Country Club invitation tournament yesterday at Glen Cove, Long Island, by defeating William A. Larned, the former national amateur champion, in the third round, 2 sets to 1, by the score of 6—3, 4—6, 6—4. Although the veteran appeared in improved form in his driving game, he was unable to overcome the clever work of Mahan. Larned put up a stubborn contest and several times appeared as if he might pull through, but weakened at the critical stages. He was at his best in the second set, which he won by driving.

Four matches were played in the doubles, the most important being between Theodore R. Pell and Karl H. Behr, who won the New Jersey championship early in the week, and Harold H. Hackett, the former Captain of the American Davis Cup team, and Walter Merrill Hall, in which the former won in hollow fashion, 6—2, 6—2. Combination play was the keynote of the success of Pell and Behr. Clothier, with George L. Wrenn as a partner, won from W .L. Pate and W. A. W. Stewart, and Bull and Mahan took two love sets from Inman and Doubleday. The summary:

Men's Singles, Nassau Country Club Invitation.—Third Round—William L. Clothier defeated Charles M. Bull, Jr., 6—3, 6—3; Theodore R. Pell defeated Frederick C. Inman, 6—2, 6—3; Lyle E. Mahan defeated William A. Larned, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4.

Men's Doubles.—First Round—Charles M. Bull, Jr., and Lyle E. Mahan defeated Frederick C. Inman and Felix M. Doubleday, 6—0, 6—0; Theodore R. Pell and Karl Behr defeated Harold H. Hackett and Walter Merrill Hall, 6—2, 6—2; William L. Clothier and George L. Wrenn defeated Walter L. Pate and W. A. W. Stewart, 6—0, 6—1.

Murray Reaches Title Round.

WILMINGTON, Del., July 3.—Robert L. Murray of California, metropolitan champion, and Joseph J. Armstrong of Minnesota, the Middle West champion, will meet tomorrow in the final round of the Delaware State championship lawn tennis tournament. In the semi-final round today Armstrong defeated Wallace F. Johnson in a brilliantly played and closely contested match, 6—4, 9—7, while the Californian easily defeated Alexander D. Thayer, 6—2, 6—1.

Jones to Play Seaver for Title.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., July 3.—J. E. D. Jones of Providence, R. I., State champion, defeated W. S. Cushing of Simmsbury, Conn., in the final round of the Connecticut Valley championship singles at the Springfield Country Club this afternoon, 6—4, 5—7, 6—4, 6—2. Jones improved as he progressed and won through steady, consistent playing. He defeated H. L. Davenport of Boston in the semi-finals and will play W. R. Seaver of Boston, holder of the Connecticut Valley singles cup, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the challenge round.

Harvey Wins at New Polo A. A.

Johnny Harvey, the Harlem welterweight, outpointed Paddy Sullivan, the west side boxer, last night in the main ten-round bout at the New Polo Athletic Associaton. The Harlem boxer was the aggressor during the majority of rounds, and in the third session sent his opponent to the floor of the ring with a hard right-hand blow to the jaw. Sullivan was on his back when the bell came to his rescue. Again in the eighth round Harvey floored his opponent with a similar blow, but Sullivan always came back doggedly to the attack and fought hard to land an effective blow. Harvey sent the west sider to the floor of the ring for the third time in the ninth session, when as the boxers were mixing matters in the centre of the ring he sent over first a left and then a right to the jaw, the latter blow having sufficient steam to send Sullivan down again. He was game, however, and immediately upon gaining his feet attempted to even the score. In the semi-final ten-round bout Buddy Ryan of the Bronx was easily entitled to the honors over Ray Hatfield, the Newark boxer. Ryan gained the honors in the majority of rounds on his aggressive tactics and cleverness.

Chip Favorite Over Murray.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—George Chip of Newcastle, Penn., and "Fighting Billy" Murray of Petaluma took only light exercise today in preparation for their twenty-round bout tomorrow afternoon. The men are middleweights. The wagering favors Chip at odds of 10 to 6.

FRUIT CROP UP-STATE.

Lake Ontario Counties Average 92 Per Cent.—Other Sections Less.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 3.—Secretary E. C. Gillett of the New York State Fruit Growers' Association in his annual report on crop conditions issued today says the Lake Ontario counties—Oswego, Wayne, Monroe, Orleans, and Niagara—have a fruit crop that averages about 92 per cent., while the four fruit-growing counties in the Hudson Valley—Columbia, Dutchess, Ulster, and Orange—average only 63 per cent. The Central New York counties—Ontario, Yates, Genesee, and Wyoming—average 74 per cent. Pears in these lake counties average only 40 per cent., while in the Hudson Valley there will be about 55 per cent. of a pear crop.

Grapes in the Chautauqua district will have about a 75 per cent. crop and in the Keuka Lake district the yield will be 95 per cent. Oswego County is far ahead in both Fall and Winter apples, expecting 105 per cent. of a normal yield of Fall apples and 116 per cent. of the Winter varieties.

Pears and peaches are apparently better in Orange County than in any other part of the State, the former being 75 per cent. and the latter only 25 per cent. The peach crop will average only 8 per cent., in the State. Allegany and Westchester Counties report a 100 per cent. plum crop; quinces in those counties will also be heavy.

Cabbage acreage this year is 88 per cent. of a normal year, several of the cabbage-growing counties having 100 per cent. Oswego has 200 per cent. bean acreage, while nine of the bean-growing counties have 100 per cent. The cabbage acreage is 89 per cent. in the State.

SMUGGLED DIAMOND SUITS.

Steerage Passengers to be Tried, Stones to be Forfeited.

Suits for the forfeiture of the uncut diamonds weighing 2,182¾ carats and valued at $57,506.18, brought into this country on April 24 by Emil Poppele and Adam August Tischer, steerage passengers on the liner Mauretania, were instituted yesterday in the Federal District Court by Assistant District Attorney Carstarphen. The stones were done up loosely in an old cigar box and in a package, and the two men were arrested a few days later when they tried to sell them to a Maiden Lane dealer.

Some interesting questions of law and fact may come up at the trial. The men came from the Luederitzbuch district of German Southwest Africa, where it is known that they were employed as diamond sorters, and although they will not say how they came into possession of the diamonds, it is presumed that they came from that region. On this theory it is expected that the German Government may lay claim to the ownership of the stones, as under the German mining law no person or company is permitted to market diamonds mined in German Southwest Africa for himself, but must turn them over to the Government, which will act as his agent in disposing of them.

Poppele and Tischer are under indictment for smuggling, and their trial will be held in the Federal District Court on July 20. They assert that they were ignorant of the customs law and had no intention of smuggling. As steerage passengers they were not called upon to make declarations and the diamonds were in their baggage without any attempt at concealment for the Inspectors to discover.

LAW MAKES CHILDREN IDLE.

Paterson Silk Mills Dismiss 500 Rather Than Give 8-Hour Day.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., July 3.—Many families depending upon children for support have applied for aid since the silk mills dismissed 500 children under the new law, which provides that children under 16 shall not work more than eight hours a day.

Poormaster Thomas O'Neill has taken up the matter with City Attorney Lewis, who is investigating as to whether the new act supersedes the old law, which put no restriction upon children under 16 and over 14.

Manufacturers are not compelled to discharge the children, but are doing so because they say it would be unfair to retain them eight hours a day while the older hands work ten. Such an arrangement would cause the older employes to demand eight hours, and this the manufacturers say they cannot grant.

SHIP FIREWORKS BY MAIL.

Contraband Goods Seized in Five Shops in Paterson.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., July 3.—An attempt to smuggle fireworks into the city by parcel post was discovered by the police today and the contraband goods were confiscated at the five stores where they were found. They were shipped by the A. Jeddo Company of Newark, Del. An ordinance was passed several weeks ago prohibiting the sale or use of fireworks of any kind.

The safe and sane ordinance is being enforced rigidly, and for the first time in the history of the city not an explosive of any kind has been fired.

BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday...4@4½ per cent. for the best names
Thursday...4@4½ " " " " " "
The quotation is for six months' paper.

Expect Better Business Soon.

There was an optimistic view of things taken in the cotton goods market yesterday, and, despite the quiet of the moment, there were plenty of predictions that better things are coming in the very near future. A number of big wholesale buyers are looked for in the market after the holiday, and, with their coming, it is contended that things are going to start humming. Already an improvement has been noted by two or three of the prominent houses.

Business Was Suspended Early.

There was not a great deal of business put through in the wholesale dry goods market yesterday after the luncheon hour. Many of the prominent houses closed early, although this seemed truer of the business houses along Worth Street than along Fourth Avenue and lower Fifth Avenue. The H. B. Claflin Company store was closed for the day at 1 o'clock, and by 3 there were a large number of blinds drawn along Worth Street. Some of the larger Fourth Avenue houses also shut their doors before the regular closing hour.

Making Factory Alterations.

A number of manufacturing plants were either closed all or part of yesterday either for the purpose of stock taking over the holiday period or to enable the houses to make certain alterations in the buildings to conform to the labor laws. Some concerns found it necessary to rearrange their floor space so that the law's requirements on aisle widths might be filled. The three-day holiday proves to be a very auspicious time to make the necessary changes, and accordingly many manufacturers have taken advantage of the occasion.

Under the Compensation Law.

The Cotton Garment Manufacturers' Association is now engaged in gathering together a number of manufacturers in their own and allied industries to take advantage of the separate grouping feature of the Workmen's Compensation law. When a specified number of houses with a certain payroll are organized into a mutual company it is permitted to keep a separate record of liabilities, and, while the employers are insured with the State, the amount over and above the policies paid out will be refunded in the shape of dividends. Under this scheme, it is pointed out, all the advantages of the mutual companies are retained, with the added benefit of the State's guarantee of the policy issued.

Holiday Hurts Gray Goods.

The approaching holiday held business in the local gray goods markets to a low level yesterday. There were a few sales of 38½-inch 64-56s at 4⅝ cents for July delivery, but bids of buyers at this figure for August and September deliveries were turned down by the mills. There was a fair demand for 38½-inch 64-60s at 4⅞ cents for nearby delivery, and 60-48s in the same width moved in a small way for nearby delivery at 4¼ cents. The latter goods had been held at 4 5-16 cents. There was a slightly easier tone to the market, but it was thought by sellers that prices will strengthen when the reins are taken up again next week. Novelty voiles moved in a fair way yesterday for late shipment, as did plain goods of this kind. A heavy business has been done on piques in the last few days, and because of this the demand for these goods fell off somewhat yesterday.

Brass and Copper Products Quiet.

Manufacturers of copper and brass products say that business is none too active with them these days. One day it will be good, they say, and on the next it will be bad. The average is poor. By one well-posted member of the trade it was said that the building operations around this city and throughout the country were absorbing a good part of the output of brass pipe and copper trimmings, while some of the new structures are being roofed with copper. Specialties are not going well, and there is little business coming in in the shape of marine work, aside from repair jobs. Complaint is made that prices received for the finished products are not commensurate with the cost of the raw material, and that these prices are going lower all the time. On certain lines prices have been shaded twice within the last month.

Can a Lady Be Contradicted?

Record hot weather is told of in a letter from W. E. Wells, Secretary of the Homer Laughlin China Company, Newell, W. Va., to the editor of The Crockery and Glass Journal. In his letter Mr. Wells quotes from a trade letter sent out by one of the firm's local customers as follows: "A letter received this morning from a customer in Columbia, S. C., states that they have had some hot weather in Columbia, and that he has just had a complaint from one of his country customers saying that recently she purchased a glass bowl from him, and before she got home it melted. He asked her a few questions, and she 'stood him down' that it did melt in her lap while riding home in the buck." From this the question naturally arises as to whether a lady can be contradicted under any circumstances.

Imports of a Week.

Imports of general merchandise, including dry goods, here in the week ended June 27 were valued at $17,960,312, compared with $17,618,999 the week before and $16,825,893 the week before that. Included in these imports were $264,227 worth of precious stones, jewelry, and watches. Imports of leather, hides, &c., were $1,534,427, and of coffee $1,129,601. India rubber, manufactures, substitutes, waste, &c., had a value of $944,852. Imports of wool were 3,862 bales, appraised at $270,453. Imports of dry goods for consumption totaled $2,310,356, while silk goods entries were appraised at $734,477. The week before the entries were, respectively, $2,210,369 and $569,679. Withdrawals of dry goods of all kinds from bonded warehouses last week were $457,949, while those entered for warehouse had a value of $768,196. Statistics of the previous week were, respectively, $587,874 and $533,447.

The Matter of Coat Linings.

Uncertainty on the question of what linings will be used has brought this branch of the silk trade to a temporary halt. With the matter of coat lengths still undecided, the coat and suit manufacturers are in a quandary as to what linings fashion will dictate. Below the surface, however, there is a marked tendency toward peau de cygnes and some talk of cotton back satins. Coat lengths will have a lot to do with swinging the demand from one of these fabrics to the other. If the coats come above the knee, it is said that cotton backs will prove too heavy a material to be used as a lining. If, again, the coats fall below the knee, the garments will be only half lined and the matter of weight will not be so important a factor. Cotton backs have enjoyed a fair amount of attention for some time past, and it would seem for the sake of variety that a change should be made to fancier goods. If coats are made to sell at about the same prices as formerly, this should be an additional reason for using a lining that will show up well. In this respect Roman stripes may be favored to some extent, together with brocades and similar fabrics.

CUSTOMS RULE MODIFIED.

Date for Certifying Invoices by New Method Postponed.

Ex-Judge Sharretts, counsel for the American Importers' Association, announced yesterday that, following a conference held on Wednesday in Washington with officials of the Treasury Department, Assistant Secretary Malburn has modified the time originally set for the going into effect of the amended Consular regulations recently ordered by President Wilson.

The regulations to which the importers objected directed United States Consuls abroad to require shippers to change their forms of invoicing on and after July 1 to conform to the regulations issued in connection with the new tariff. Later, the Treasury Department directed Collectors of Customs to require importers to produce on entry of invoices of merchandise after July 1 new forms of declarations which it was declared by merchants could not truthfully be done.

The committee visiting Washington on Wednesday consisted of Judge Sharretts, L. E. B. Craig of the York Street Flax Spinning Company, S. A. Streuli of Rusch & Co., I. S. Wolf of I. S. Wolf & Co., Carl W. Stern of M. J. Corbett & Co., and Mr. Sharretts. The committee pointed out that the regulations could not be complied with in the manner prescribed in the new Consular rules. By putting both regulations into effect the same day no allowance, the committee asserted, was made for the time which must elapse between certifying the invoices abroad and their entry into this country. The committee urged the further fact that the shortness of the notices made it impossible for the foreign shippers to comply with the regulations. The matter was taken under advisement by the department. Yesterday, Collector Malone received a letter, which has the effect of an order to all officials of the customs, modifying for the present the earlier instructions putting the rules into effect the first of this month.

"The department," says the Assistant Secretary, "construes the time of July 1, 1914, as applying only to the consulation of invoices, and not to the time of entry in the United States. For the present you will not refuse to accept invoices made out on the old forms. Because of the delays that may arise also and the short time given shippers to conform to the new regulations, it has been suggested to the Secretary of State that Consuls be instructed not to refuse certification of invoices presented on the old form for a reasonable length of time, but to inform shippers in such cases that the forms are obsolete and that future invoices should be prepared on the new forms."

Judge Sharretts, speaking for the association, said yesterday that this quick and fair action on the part of the department is of the greatest importance to merchants throughout the country, in that it shows the tendency of the present Administration to quickly remove unnecessary obstacles from the path of commerce. He added that the action was proof that the Administration has no desire to place any hardships on either foreign shippers or consignees in the United States.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Decisions as to Duties on Reeds, Fabrics, and Clothing.

The Rattan & Cane Company has been partly sustained in protests before the Board of United States General Appraisers in claims affecting the classification under the old law of reeds manufactured in Germany for use here in making chairs. The importations covered several kinds of reeds, but all were assessed for duty under Paragraph 212 at 10 per cent. as manufactured reeds, while the importers claimed free entry under Paragraph 713 as "reeds." The board holds that the greater part of the shipments were properly assessed, but sustains the claims as to slab rattan, and broom or split rattan. Government Counsel Lawrence said the issue will be carried to the Customs Court for final adjudication.

The Kaufmann & Strauss Company lost in a protest relating to signs and show cards, covered with surface-coated paper and printed by other than lithographic process. Duty was taken at the rate of 5 cents a pound and 30 per cent. ad valorem under the act of 1909, as articles composed wholly or in chief value of surface-coated paper. The articles were claimed properly dutiable as cardboard, or as paper stamped, at 25 per cent. The importers' evidence was not sufficient to warrant the board upsetting the Collector's tax.

The board took adverse action on claims by G. W. Sheldon & Co., Chicago, regarding the duty rate on baskets composed of silk, cotton, straw, and wood, silk being the component of chief value. They were returned by the Collector as manufactures of silk, duty being taken at 50 per cent. on their value under the old tariff. The importers claimed that the articles are properly dutiable as baskets of wood at the rate of 40 per cent. under the provisions of Paragraph 214. While court decisions appear to have varied somewhat on the question of the classification of articles of this kind, the board holds that the importations in controversy were properly assessed.

The W. S. Taylor Company, Cleveland, imported bronze wire cloth which was assessed at 45 per cent. ad valorem plus 1 cent per pound. The merchandise was claimed to be dutiable at 15 cents a pound and 60 per cent. ad valorem as articles composed of metal threads. Judge Fischer says in his decision there is nothing in the record to sustain the firm's contention.

Philadelphia importers were sustained in protests, claiming that silk or cotton blouses and gowns are dutiable at rates lower than assessed by the Collector. The goods were returned for duty as wearing apparel in part of lace made on the Lever or Gothrough machines. The importers claimed that the machine lace is not the component material of chief value. The board holds that the assessments should have been at the rate of 60 per cent. either as silk or cotton wearing apparel. The Collector's return at 70 per cent. is reversed. The importers included Strawbridge & Clothier, S. M. Brookes, A. M. Burke, A. C. Mealy, and Sallie E. Lippincott. The board overruled a claim by E. & Z. Van Raalte of this city. The firm protested that silk veils were wrongly assessed as being made on the Lever machine. The protest was overruled as the only witness called was held "incompetent" by the board.

BUSINESS NOTES.

In accordance with a resolution adopted at a recent meeting of the Throwsters' Division of the Silk Association of America, Jerome C. Reade, Chairman of the division, has appointed the following to a Special Committee on Qualities of Silk: Marcus Frieder, H. F. Hofer, W. B. Crane, S. R. Bliss, H. C. Seaton, and G. A. Post. This committee will consider the question of the poor winding qualities of raw silk, which has become an important factor in the cost of manufacturing silk fabrics. The work is expected to prove of great value to the entire trade.

The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce has just issued an interesting monograph entitled "Development of the Dominican Republic," which treats of the general features of the Republic, its agricultural possibilities, its import and export trade in detail, and the countries participating in it. The publication also contains shipping information and other data of interest to merchants doing business with the Republic.

EXPORT TRADE NEEDS SPUR.

Tremendous Domestic Commerce Exceeds It Ten Times in Value.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Although a world leader in the interchange of products among its own people, the United States foreign trade is far short of its immediate possibilities. This is the conclusion of officials of the Department of Commerce after a study of the statistical abstract of the United States for 1913, made public today.

American home trade at present is etimated at about $40,000,000,000, which is equal to the international exchanges of the world and approximately ten times the value of its own foreign trade, now valued at $4,000,000,000.

The abstract shows that the present American export trade of $2,500,000,000 represents about $25 per capita. A per capita basis equal to that of Argentina, it says, would raise American export trade to $5,000,000,000, and one equal to that of Belgium would make its exports $10,000,000,000 a year, while its aggregate foreign trade, when upon a per capita basis as large as Canada's would be considerably over $13,000,000,000.

The abstract shows that the United States with 258,000 miles of railway possesses one-third of the world's total. It leads in the mileage of its telegraph lines, performs more than one-third of the world's mail service on its own routes, while its public debt of $1,000,000,000 is less than that of Italy, Austria-Hungary, Spain, Germany, Australia, Japan, Great Britain, and is less than one-sixth that of France, and one-fourth that of Russia.

NOTABLE SILK PURCHASE.

Throwing Plants Bought for a Newly Organized Company.

The Jouvaud & Lavigns Company, 354 Fourth Avenue, has purchased four of a number of silk throwing plants owned and operated by F. Q. Hartman, Inc., whose general offices are situated in Danville, Penn. The mills taken over by the local company are the Montour, the Nemoloton, and the Seminole, all of which are located at Danville, and the Colonial mill, which is at Berwick, Penn. All of these mills will continue under the same management as at present. It is understood that the remaining mills will be taken over shortly by Pennsylvania capitalists.

It was said yesterday at the office of the Jouvaud & Lavigne Company that the principal idea of the purchase was to insure the disposition of the output of these mills, which bears a high reputation, to the newly incorporated Universal Industrial Corporation of New York. This concern was incorporated on Wednesday with a capital stock of $350,000, all of which was paid in. Virtually it is a combination of the Universal Silk Mill and the Industrial Thrown Silk Company. The officers of the corporation are L. Jouvaud, President; N. Konigberg and J. F. Lavigne, Vice Presidents; F. Ducoudray, Treasurer; F. Calogero, Secretary, and H. D. Harries, Assistant Secretary. The amount involved in the purchase of the Hartman mills by the Jouvaud & Lavigne Company, which was not given out, is understood to be very large.

DRY GOODS OUTLOOK.

Retailers Curtail Purchases—Scarcity of Most Merchandise Predicted.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"The trend of buying during the week and general comment in dry goods circles reflect the fundamentally sound condition of the trade as a result of the past month's curtailed buying and liquidation of obligations.

"Retailers are keeping as little capital invested in stock as possible, and are endeavoring to make every dollar earn more profits by purchasing in smaller quantities and turning stocks oftener.

"The cooler weather of the week has affected retailing unfavorably, but more buyers have been on the market than during the same week a year ago. Sections where the need of rain was beginning to be felt have been relieved, and crop prospects point encouragingly to excellent Fall business.

"A scarcity of merchandise is predicted in almost all lines, as manufacturers have not made up as many goods in anticipation of future business as usual."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices Better on Eve of Holiday —Bank Statement Reflects Heavy July Payments.

Prices were better on the Stock Exchange yesterday and the trading was more active. This was contrary to what had been expected, for it was thought that on the eve of the holiday dullness would be accentuated. The fact that it was not and that instead the dealings were considerably larger than on Thursday carried the impression that the financial markets have been growing restive during these recent weeks of dullness and are inclined to look for better conditions with the coming of a new half-year. We carry into this period a very high promise for the crops, easy money, and an atmosphere which is gradually clearing itself of the causes for doubts and misgivings which have found reflection in the business and financial situation of recent months.

A good deal of emphasis was laid yesterday on the visit of Mr. Morgan to the White House on Thursday. It was being cited with even more assurance than it had been the previous day as an indication that there were likely to be freer channels of communication in the future than there has been in the past between the Administration and the country's men of large affairs. The financial community accepted this as a development of much importance, and as likely to bear fruit in a lessening of misunderstanding and in a broadening of co-operation between Government and business in dealing with those situations in which the Government must take a part, but which directly and materially affect the business of the country.

The bank statement published at the close of the day showed unusually large changes owing to the July 1 demands and the heavy cash payments to the Sub-Treasury on account of the income tax. The Clearing House institutions reported the very large cash loss of $27,000,000, but deposits fell off by more than $21,000,000 and the decrease in surplus was kept down to $20,700,000. The banks still had left a surplus of $10,589,450, and yesterday's readjustments and those of the next few days are expected to increase the reserve considerably. The Treasury has already indicated that it will place additional cash with the banks if there appears to be any need for such a step, and if that is done the present heavy inflow of cash to the Government is not likely to have any material effect upon the money market. In considering the figures in yesterday's bank statement it is necessary to make proper allowances for the fact that it was made up as of the close of business on Thursday, when only one day had elapsed since the making of the unusually heavy payments of July 1.

The London market again yesterday was favorably influenced by the seasonal investment demand. The full effect of this demand will probably not make itself felt in Europe until the forthcoming French loan is issued, against which a very large amount of money is being reserved in Paris. Our own market looks forward to next week for an ending of its suspense over the rate decision, which, for a long time, was expected to be rendered yesterday, but which is now counted on almost to a certainty for next week.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Hornblower & Weeks are offering $250,000 worth of City of Buffalo 4½ per cent. registered water bonds, which are legal savings bank investment and free of personal tax in this State.

John F. Wallace, President of Westinghouse, Church, Kerr & Co.; L. E. Waring of Edward Sweet & Co., Sidney S. Schuyler of Schuyler, Chadwick & Burnham, and Thomas Nelson, as a committee, are calling for a deposit of the income mortgage 4 per cent. bonds of the Peoria & Eastern Illinois for the protection of the holders' interests.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Just Between Friends.

The President of a large steel company, who had been quoted in an interview as seeing little of a hopeful nature in the steel industry under prevailing conditions, was in an elevated train on his way home. The head of another steel concern, who has issued more reassuring statements, came in and sat beside him.

"Hello, Pessimist," said the newcomer.

"Hello, Liar," answered the other.

New Haven to Stand Suit.

A man prominent in the New Haven's affairs said yesterday that the passage by the Massachusetts Legislature of an act to enable the railroad to sell its Boston & Maine stock only under terms considered by the New Haven unfair, meant that negotiations for a peaceful settlement of the monopoly action had been terminated. It was his understanding that the Directors would take no further action in the matter, but would contest through the courts Attorney General McReynolds's effort to compel a sale of the B. & M. stock.

Mr. Morgan's White House Call.

From the accounts of the meeting from both sides, J. P. Morgan and President Wilson must have had a very pleasant talk about the weather, the yacht race prospects, and the ancient rivalry among the Eastern universities at their conference on Thursday. Evidently, neither was so lacking in tact as to bring up for discussion the state of business, pending legislation, or the plight of the New Haven. Mr. Morgan threw up his hands in well-feigned surprise when he ran into a number of reporters waiting at his office for him last evening. "The President and I made an agreement," he said in answer to a question as to the purpose of his Washington call. "It was that he should do any talking about our meeting."

An Oversupply of Money.

Call money became a drug on the market again yesterday, and the brokers representing the banks had large sums which they were unable to put out at 1¾ per cent. For a day or two preceding the turn of the month there was a great deal of shifting of loans, some of the banks whose reserves were down calling in loans. Yesterday the heavy bank balances resulting from deposits of income tax money and corporation payments to security holders made the supply of call money greatly in excess of the demand.

Mr. McAdoo's Gold Inquiry.

It could not be learned yesterday that any of the Secretary of the Treasury's detectives had reached the financial district to run down the source of information which made it possible for some of the foreign exchange brokers to sell exchange in anticipation of a drop with the receipt of gold at the Sub-Treasury from interior points. Nor could any bankers be found who admitted having any real advance news of the Secretary's plan. One of the largest dealers in foreign exchange, who profited by the decline in the rate, said that his first knowledge of the receipt of more gold came from the newspapers. "Any one who did not know that with $60,000,000 of gold sent out the rates at that time were too high, has no right to handle foreign exchange," he said. "The market was top-heavy, and I think the decline would have been just the same had the local supply of gold not been increased. There was no excuse for any one to be long of exchange under the circumstances."

Trade Better Here Than Abroad.

Col. Robert M. Thompson, Chairman of the International Nickel Company, who has just returned from an absence of nearly four months in Europe, was reported yesterday as saying that business was better in the United States than it was abroad. "Notwithstanding the many handicaps under which business and commerce are laboring here," he said, "the United States is as prosperous and as busy as any European country. Germany is the only country in Europe where business even approaches the normal. In England, internal affairs and fear of civil war, and in France political complications are paralyzing business and commerce. In Germany these objections do not apply, the people are fairly active, and business is reasonably good, but there is a widespread depression everywhere, and it is not by any means confined to the United States, nor accentuated here."

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

The understanding that Thursday's call by J. P. Morgan at the White House was the first of a series of conferences between President Wilson and representatives of the country's big business interests exerted a favorable influence and stimulated buying in the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Prices tended upwards from the opening at 9:30 o'clock, with many stocks recording substantial gains. Commission houses handled a good volume of business, with a large odd lot turnover on the floor. The belief continued to prevail that the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision upon rates would prove generally favorable to the railroads.

BOURSES OF EUROPE

London Market Buoyant with General Advance—Trading Quiet in Paris and Berlin.

LONDON, July 3.—Money and discount rates were easy today.

Cheap money and the hopeful Ulster outlook gave the stock market a good tone. The demand for gilt-edged securities expanded and practically all investment stocks advanced. Mexican and copper shares were good, and diamond shares closed strong on a report that an agreement had been made to restrict the sale of stones. Rubber and Brazilian stocks finished easy.

American securities opened irregularly. Most of the list received light support and prices advanced a fraction during the forenoon. Later Wall Street buying caused further improvement and made the closing steady.

PARIS, July 3.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Mexican securities closed higher.

Three per cent. rentes, 82f. 95c. for the account.

BERLIN, July 3.—Trading was extremely quiet and prices moved irregularly on the Boerse today.

LAKES TRAFFIC FALLS OFF.

Heavy Decrease in June Shipment at Sault Ste. Marie.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., July 3.—Another heavy decrease in Great Lakes traffic is shown by the statistical report of commerce through the American and Canadian canals at this point for the month of June.

The total freight movement of 8,588,081 tons is 3,525,532 tons below the total for June, 1913. In practically every article of freight, except flour, eastbound, and hard coal, westbound, shipments fall short of the totals for June of last year.

In the month 2,805 vessels passed through the canals with a registered net tonnage of 6,665,134, as compared with 3,413 vessels with 8,640,442 tonnage last year.

Among the chief items of commerce passing through the canals last month were:

Eastbound—Wheat, 10,973,258 bushels; coarse grains, 7,137,751 bushels; copper, 9,118 tons; iron ore, 5,247,583 tons; flour, 1,126,236 barrels; lumber, 72,147,000 feet.

Westbound—Hard coal, 414,401 tons; soft coal, 1,846,689 tons; general merchandise, 194,864 tons.

NORTHERN PACIFIC BONDS.

J. P. Morgan & Co. and First National Bank Take $20,000,000.

J. P. Morgan & Co. and the First National Bank have purchased $20,000,000 of the new Northern Pacific refunding and improvement bonds, the sale of which was authorized at a recent meeting of the Directors. The bonds bear interest at 4½ per cent. The offering price has not been decided upon.

This is the first issue of bonds to be made under the new blanket mortgage authorized at a special stockholders' meeting, and is the first comprehensive financing done by the company in many years. The proceeds of the sale will be used to retire $10,000,000 of notes maturing on July 9 and to cover current expenditures.

ASK SALE OF C. & E. I. ROAD.

Demand Made by Holders of Refunding Bonds.

CHICAGO, July 3.—A further step in the reorganization of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad Company was taken here today when the Bankers' Trust Company of New York, as trustee of the refunding 4s of the railroad company, filed a bill of complaint against the company.

It was explained that the move was not hostile, although it requested the sale of the road to satisfy holders of the refunding 4s, but was a necessary formality in connection with the reorganization of the property.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

Dun's Review today will have this to say of business conditions:

This is ordinarily a dull period of the year, the holiday and inventory-taking combining to restrict activity in commercial and industrial channels. The prevailing quietness of trade is somewhat accentuated by special causes, such as the recent dry goods suspensions, and the general situation is characterized by a waiting attitude on the part of leading interests. The Government cotton report this week was unexpectedly favorable, showing, as it did, some improvement in the condition of the crop over a month ago, although the acreage is smaller than last year. With the opening of the second half of the year a gradual expansion in the demand for iron and steel is anticipated, but any early improvement in values is considered doubtful. Developments last month in respect to railroad buying were appreciably better, several significant contracts having been placed.

Bradstreet's says:

Good to excellent crop reports, quieter distributive trade, and dull or depressed industry and manufacture are the salient features in this week's advices. Owing to the improvement shown by cotton during June, added to continued good weather for corn, oats, and Winter wheat, the general crop advices are the best of the year, or, indeed, for many years past, though hay, tobacco, and possibly Spring wheat may not meet earlier sanguine anticipations. Distributive trade tended to quiet as the mid-year holidays approached, but June was a good month in actual sales, both by wholesalers and retailers, especially in dry goods, wearing apparel, groceries, and millinery.

PADDED 'EXPENSES' MAKE ROBBERY EASY

Accounts of Lackawanna Officials Extended and Difference Kept by Clerk.

FINE PEN WORK BY FORGER

Owners Not Sure of Their Signatures—Losses May Be $5,000—Accident Reveals Scheme.

Robert J. Brown, Jr., a young married man, employed as a statistician in the freight department of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad, in the general offices, 90 West Street, was held in $5,000 bail yesterday by Magistrate Herbert charged with grand larceny.

John H. Crawford, Freight Traffic Manager of the Lackawanna, the complainant, said the young man had padded the expense accounts of high officials and employes of the company for two years, and probably longer, and that he had kept the "padding."

Brown was confidential stenographer, sometimes, to Vice President P. J. Flynn, in charge of the traffic department, and in that capacity he won the confidence of other officials. Most of them intrusted him with the collection of their expenses. By the unusually clever duplication of a half a dozen signatures, fictitious vouchers approving fictitious expense accounts were presented, approved, and the amounts collected.

Thefts aggregating more than $2,500 have been traced already by the railroad accountants, and they have not yet gone back to the time when the forgery began. Brown has been with the Lackawanna for nine years, and he has worked as statistician since 1909. The railroad's investigators, who say that the $2,500 of thefts discovered cover only two years, expect that the amount may reach $5,000 or more. It was Brown's custom to make out the vouchers for the expense accounts of about 100 employes, including officers, so it has been impossible to find out the extent of his peculations.

Brown, who gave his age as 29 years, lives at 281 Maple Street, Brooklyn. He was arrested in the offices of the company yesterday morning. He was supposed to be taking his vacation, but he returned to his desk every other day and made out vouchers for expense accounts as usual.

John H. Crawford, the Freight Traffic Manager, who got the warrant for Brown, explained that he had been on a Western trip, had returned on Wednesday night, and had put in an expense account for $56 for June.

On Thursday Brown was away. When the expense account and the voucher were presented to the auditor and to the cashier it was found that another account for $130, with a voucher bearing what appeared to be signatures of Manager Crawford, Vice President P. J. Flynn, the auditor, and the cashier had been presented and cashed.

His real expense account was returned to Manager Crawford with an inquiry as to whether he had not already turned in an account of $130 for June. Mr. Crawford was amazed to find that an expense account had been made out for him, with a signed voucher, even before he had made out his genuine account. Still the signatures were so apparently genuine that he was all the more confused.

It took the accountants only a little while to find out what happened. They went to Brown's desk, where Crawford said they found duplicates of the expense accounts turned in by officials and employes. There were no duplicates of the padded accounts. Each account was looked up, and in most of them padding was evident. The padding was done in this manner:

An official of the Lackawanna went to Washington and appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission. His expenses were light, because he paid no railroad fare. The account, itemized, was given to Brown, with instructions to make out a voucher, to be signed by the next highest official and finally by the Vice President. This was done. Then the actual expense account was copied, and if it showed a skip, for instance, from June 6 to June 15, when no expense had been incurred, it was the custom of the forger to insert, say, "June 8-11, Trip Buffalo, $25." Many such items were added.

When the account was thus increased, a voucher was attached with forged duplicates of the signatures on the original voucher, so perfectly done that the officials who signed the first voucher, admitted to a reporter, that they would be unwilling to swear that they could distinguish one from the other.

The padded account, with the forged voucher, next was presented to the auditor, who being assured of the signatures, affixed his own. The final step was to present the padded account and the voucher to the cashier.

Having collected the padded account, the actual expense money was taken out of it, and the signatures of the auditor and cashier were forged on the original voucher.

"So similar were the genuine and the forged signatures that there is no telling how long this practice would have continued," said an official of the Lackawanna, "had we not discovered the forgeries by accident. Here is my signature, affixed to my expense account, and here is a copy of my signature beneath a fictitious account. When I fold over the accounts, and simply look at the signatures, I cannot see any difference, and I could not swear which was genuine and which was not."

When Manager Crawford appeared against Brown he was ready to plead guilty, but the Magistrate said:

"I want you to have the benefit of counsel. You are a young man, and the victim of a dreadful mistake. You should lend every aid to the company in recovering what it has lost, and some time you may have an opportunity to better yourself."

According to Detectives Brown and Clare, Brown complained that the railroad paid him only $100 a month, though his predecessor had received $175. The young man has a wife and two children, and has been highly esteemed by people in his neighborhood.

FIVE MEN RULE UTILITIES.

Chicago Commissioner Fears a Menace in Centralized Control.

CHICAGO, July 3.—By means of interlocking Directorates, control of public utilities in Chicago and the surrounding States has become centralized in the hands of a small group of men, according to a report made public today by Montague Ferry, Chicago Commissioner of Public Service. Mr. Ferry says that the close relationship shown among public service corporations may constitute a grave menace to the public, and he urges a further investigation by the State Public Service Commission to determine whether the city has suffered by reason of the centralized control.

In the report Mr. Ferry asserts that Samuel Insull, John J. Mitchell, James A. Patten, Henry A. Blair, and Ira M. Cobe exercise control over the Commonwealth Edison Company, which supplies electric power and light; the People's Gas Light and Coke Company, the Chicago Elevated Railways, the Chicago Surface lines, and various utility companies in near-by towns.

A chart which accompanied the report was said by Mr. Ferry to show that "three men, Samuel Insull, John J. Mitchell, and James A. Patten, constitute a majority of the Executive Committee of five which directs the business of the Commonwealth Edison Company; that the same three constitute a majority of the Board of Directors of the gas company; that Mr. Insull and Mr. Blair, who is also a Director in the Commonwealth, are a majority of the Executive Committee of three which controls the elevated lines; that Mr. Blair, as Chairman of the board, is the controlling factor in the Chicago Railways Company, which operates most of the surface lines; that Samuel Insull, with men holding salaried places in the Commonwealth Edison Company, controls the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois and the Middle West Utilities Company."

Commenting on the report, Mr. Ferry said:

"No facts are in the possession of the Department of Public Service which would justify the statement that the prices paid for current by the several transportation companies is excessive. But the circumstances under which these contracts were made, with substantially the same men as buyers and sellers, suggest inquiry."

ROAD REGULATION TO FAIL, SAYS BORAH

Tells Senate Coming Rate Decision Will Be the Real Test of Federal Supervision.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP NEARER

Must Be Faced in Ten Years, He Says, as Conditions Approach No Board Can Meet.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 3. — Declaring that the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the 5 per cent. advance rate case would be "the real test of regulation" of railroads, Senator Borah of Idaho, Republican, in discussing the Trade Commission bill in the Senate today, said that "within ten years we will face the question of the public ownership of railroads because of the breakdown of regulation. It seems we are approaching a condition that no commission can meet."

"We are now nearer public ownership than ever before," he continued, "and we are nearer because capitalists say they do not propose to invest money in enterprises which some one else controls. That is one reason, the railroads say, why they cannot get capital at this time.

"The railroads say we must have a 5 per cent. advance in rates or we cannot do business; the people say they cannot afford the advance. If the Interstate Commerce Commission grants the increase it will be disparaged to some degree in the public mind; if it refuses the railroads will be in a difficulty. It will be a real test of regulation."

Senator Borah began by stating that after hearing arguments for several days in support of the use of the term "unfair competition" in the Trade Commission bill, he was not convinced that he was in error wnen he said that it would result in greater business uncertainty. Early court decisions affecting the Sherman Anti-Trust act declared that "every restraint of trade" meant all restraint, he said, but that later, in the Standard Oil and Tobacco Trust cases, the Supreme Court had said that the statute directed against "every restraint of trade" was aimed at "undue restraint."

"That decision met with almost universal criticism. It was said that the act had been emasculated and was unenforceable because of its uncertainty. The terms 'undue,' 'unfair,' and 'unreasonable' mean about the same thing in execution."

Senator Borah then quoted at length from a report made by the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce on Feb. 23, 1913, in which Senator Cummins and others now supporting the Trade Commission bill had said that the people would not permit courts to declare policies, and that it was inconceivable that a court should pass upon individual cases by economic standards which members of the court might approve at the time.

"But it is proposed to give this power to a commission," said Senator Borah. "This bill does not propose a government of law, but a government of men. No broader discretion could be given than to empower the commission to say what is 'unfair competition.' This will be government by a very few men and they are to be appointed by the President, not by the people, but by a power twice and thrice removed."

He then quoted from the Cummins report the statement that the delegation of such power would be a repudiation of the fundamental law of the country, and that cases should be subject to judicial review only when Congress was unable to define a rule of conduct.

"If there are to be two legislative bodies," said Senator Borah, "I prefer a body constructed as the Supreme Court rather than as the ordinary commission is appointed. The commission's power, as proposed by the bill, goes into 'every realm of fancy into which the mind may go.'"

Commenting upon the suggestion that the commission have power to fix prices, Senator Borah said that this plea came in part from those who were falling in the face of big corporations and that they wanted prices so fixed that they could live. In cases where a general lowering of prices had made small operations unprofitable, Senator Borah said that the interests of the small manufacturer must give way to the interests of the consuming public.

Senator Saulsbury, Democrat, of Delaware, lent support to Senator Borah's position in pointing out that in the hearings on the Stock and Bond bill before the Committee on Interstate Commerce, A. P. Thom of Washington, representing the Southern Railway, had said that regulation of rates should involve Governmental responsibility, the bill providing that the approval of security issues by the Interstate Commerce Commission should not involve a financial guarantee or obligation on the part of the Government.

"This bill has to do only with corporations engaged in interstate trade, which are not carriers or banks, and expressly so stated. With respect to the corporations with which it deals, it is a distinct and somewhat far-reaching step in advance along the road to commission government," said Senator Saulsbury.

"I do not know that I can follow as far as others along the road to commission government, but it is doubtless true that expense, annoyance, and delay have been encountered in the courts which improved methods of procedure might in a large measure avoid, and to a great extent this has caused men to turn in favor of commission government for relief. It first appeared to me that the provision against unfair competition sought to enact ethical standards into statute law."

Senator Saulsbury said that "unfair competition" was understood in every line of activity, and expressed the opinion that the courts would not strike down the measure because of indefiniteness in this phrase. Complete regulation of railroads and, in the event of its failure, government ownership of railroads' was advocated by Senator Thomas, Democrat, of Colorado, as a complete cure for the evils of monopoly.

"The monopolies in this country had their genesis in an illegitimate connection with transportation facilities," said Senator Thomas. "He who controls transportation controls the destiny of the country."

NEWMAN'S STORY TEARFUL.

Never Used Senate Stationery to Promote Gold Mine, He Testifies.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 3. — Walter George Newman, chief owner and promoter of the Gold Hill Consolidated Company, in the promotion of which Senate stationery was used, told a subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, which is investigating the uses of Senate paper for private purposes, that he was intent on developing the Gold Hill mining property in South Carolina because his brother had killed himself in disappointment over his failure to make the property a success.

Mr. Newman told his story in tears, sobs halting his testimony. He said that thirty-five or forty letters on Senate stationery were sent to stockholders in the company, but that he had never used the paper to promote the mine. He testified that he frequently called Senators from the Senate Chamber to discuss the mine with them, and that their conferences were carried on in the President's room, a chamber off the Senate corridor. He said that he talked with Senators Pomerene, Martin, Swanson, Chilton and Overman, and that "Gen." Jacob S. Coxey introduced him to Senator Pomerene.

George E. Roberts, Director of the Mint, testified that F. G. Dewey, an assayer in the Mint Bureau, had been sent to examine the Gold Hill property to determine whether the assay office at Charlotte, N. C., should be reopened. This action was taken after consulting with Newman and John Skelton Williams, then Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. Williams made the same explanation. He said that the Gold Hill mine had been discussed at a meeting in the Treasury Department, in which Mr. Newman, Hennen Jennings, a Washington mining engineer, and W. Berkley Williams, brother of John Skelton Williams, were present. Controller Williams said that he had taken little part in the conference.

Mr. Newman was recalled to the stand and said that Controller Williams had arranged a second conference at the home of Cleveland Perkins, partner of Hennen Jennings, who wished to acquire control of the property. Nothing came of the negotiations. Controller Williams said that he owned no stock in the mine and that no member of his family nor any one in the Treasury Department owned stock.

CHARGES $8,000,000 PUMP CO. SHORTAGE

Cockran Alleges That Directors of International Concern Have Sequestered Profits.

DEMANDS AN ACCOUNTING

Counsel for Pump Board Asks the Court to Force Applicant to Make Charges More Definite.

In a heaing befre Justice Weeks in the Supreme Court yesterday on an application made by Edgar M. Leventritt as counsel for the Directors of the International Steam Pump Company to have the demand of John A. Drew, who has asked an accounting on behalf of himself and other stockholders, made more definite, W. Bourke Cockran, representing Mr. Drew, said that $8,000,000 had disappeared from the company's treasury. This accusation, Mr. Cockran said, was directed against all of the present Directors, as well as all of the former Directors of the company.

"I include them all," said Mr. Cockran, "and make them all defendants, because I do not know at what stage of the affairs of the company the conspiracy was hatched to rob the stockholders. The theory of the plaintiff, Mr. Drew, is that there was a running conspiracy, handed down from one set of Directors to another, and that, although there were only fifteen Directors at any one time, there was a systematic plan by which the funds of the stockholders were dissipated."

Mr. Leventritt is a Vice President of the company and is familiar with its affairs. He said he would like to know just what each individual Director was accused of, and just what was the extent of the dereliction charged against him.

Mr. Cockran said that the stock of the company sold at one time for $300 a share, and that at present it wasn't worth $5 a bushel. Justice Weeks asked:

"Doesn't the existing law on corporations give you sufficient power to go in and inspect the books?"

"Why, your Honor," replied Mr. Cockran, "they would only laugh at one who really tried to get at the books. It would take until doomsday."

Mr. Cockran said that if the secrets in the books of the company were revealed they would make Wall Street "sit up and take notice." Justice Weeks said he would take the matter under consideration and give a decision later.

Some of the present Directors of the company are Edmund C. Converse, William and Solomon R. Guggenheim, James B. Haggin, Samuel Untermyer, William Barbour, Arthur W. Kenworthy, Charles L. Broadbent, and Harry B. Hollins.

On Dec. 9, 1913, Mr. Cockran, on the strength of 100 shares of stock of the concern which he held, appeared at a meeting of the stockholders of the International Company, and in a fiery speech said that the Directors were robbing the stockholders. He said that when the dividends had been suspended the Directors of the company held less than 400 shares of the preferred stock. He moved that an adjournment should be taken in order that a committee of five stockholders, holding at least 250 shares of the common stock, could consider the affairs of the company and decide what action ought to be taken to protect their interests. Mr. Cockran's motion was defeated.

The report of the company for the year ended March 31, 1905, showed a decrease in the earnings from the year before of $273,682. The dividends paid on the preferred stock in that year amounted to $709,800, and on the common stock to $306,597. The surplus of the company at that time, after all of the deductions were made for the deficit, amounted to $2,252,082. The report made by the company on May 11, 1909, showed a balance for dividends of $1,064,000. The amount added to the surplus was $204,200. President Guggenheim said at that time that the outlook for the company was extremely bright and that the business was 80 per cent. of normal.

On Dec. 31, 1912, when the thirteenth annual meeting was held, the net profits for the year ended Sept. 30 were reported to be $1,887,739, of which $595,705 was charged off for depreciation and for the deficit of the year before.

DAWES'S DUPES LOSE $160,000, IS CHARGE

Indicted Head of Bankrupt Household Products Firm Is Now in Canada.

USED MAILS TO DEFRAUD

Government Says He Took from $160 to $4,000 from Many Women on Promises of Large Returns.

Accused of having used the mails in connection with a scheme by which a number of women have been defrauded of their savings, Wilbur J. Dawes has been indicted by the Federal Grand Jury. He was connected with W. J. Dawes & Co. of 110 West Fortieth Street, which went into bankruptcy in April.

Assistant United States District Attorney Spence, who presented the case to the Grand Jury, said yesterday that the frauds amounted to about $160,000. Dawes has not yet been arrested. He has gone to Canada. As the offense against the postal laws is not extraditable, he can stay there without fear of arrest, and the authorities can only wait until he chooses to return.

Dawes posed as a London banker and broker with a good deal of experience in marketing securities. It is believed, however, by the Federal authorities that in reality he is a native of California, and that before he launched forth on the particular scheme, which has now got him into trouble, he was interested in the sale of a vacuum washing machine.

W. J. Dawes & Co. was the business name for a partnership formed between Dawes and Mrs. Martha Barry of 248 Audubon Avenue. It was incorporated last year under the laws of Delaware with a capital stock of $500,000, and it went into business as the seller of certain home products such as "Mother's Cleanser" and "Miller's Lasting Starch," concerning the merits of which no serious question has been raised. The indictment is based on the methods which Dawes employed to induce persons, especially women of small means, to contribute to his company and the brilliancy of the promises which he held out to all who would listen to them.

His plan turned upon the fact that jobbers for household goods receive commissions of from 15 to 20 per cent. from the maker on sale and have as a rule no particular reason for pushing the sale of one brand over any other. To introduce a new article of this nature an extensive advertising campaign is necessary, and, though the profits are large, if it is successful, a very considerable sum must be risked to establish a demand. So Dawes conceived the idea of employing a number of agents who would push the goods personally.

To this, according to the Government, he added the idea of making these agents invest with the company a sum of money on the promise of receiving very large returns. They could in this way pay the company from from $160 to $4,000, and would, according to the promises which the Government quotes, be thereby assured of drawing a comfortable permanent income during the life of their contracts. It worked out in this way:

For a payment of $160 the investor was to receive exclusive rights over the profits earned by Dawes's Home Products from the grocery stores in a specified district. The company, it was promised, would pay the expenses of canvassing the stores, and a commission would be paid the investor on every case of goods thereafter sold in his territory during the life of the contract, which was generally three years. It was at first promised, the Government says, that the original purchase money would be returned to the investor within thirty days, and that he would get $1 a month profit from each of the stores which had been reserved for him, but later the length of time within which the original investment was to be returned was extended to 60, to 90, and then to 120 days. Before there was an opportunity for any further extension the company went into bankruptcy.

In the case of those who were willing to put $4,000 into the business, the Government alleges, an undertaking was given that $1,000 should be returned as soon as the company had found another purchaser of a $4,000 contract. It is admitted that at first some of the $160 investors received their money back at the end of the thirty days mentioned in the contract.

The make the enterprise still more seductive, Post Office Inspector Swain said yesterday, Dawes, while his plan was still working, was in the habit of giving dinners to investors and those who had money which they might be induced to intrust to his company. They were impressed by the style in which things were done, and heard much about the ease with which a small sum could be made to provide a comfortable income without much work. Dawes at this period had office expenses of $1,000 a week to meet, and was living in an extravagant style, the money for which, it is alleged, was derived from his scheme. Many of the women who put money into the company have not lost faith in it and are talking of reorganizing it.

MILL DIVIDEND TO WORKERS.

600 Bourne Employes Get 3 Per Cent. on Pay, or $40,000.

Special to The New York Times.

FALL RIVER, Mass., July 3.—The Bourne Mills paid today to its employes the dividend on wages of 3 per cent. usually termed a profit-sharing dividend. The workers receiving it had been in steady employment from Dec. 1, 1913, to June 6, 1914, inclusive, and numbered about 600. Each received approximately three-quarters of one week's pay. The total amount paid was nearly $40,000.

It was the forty-ninth semi-annual dividend of its kind. The employes have received it every six months, just before the Fourth of July and just before Christmas, with only one omission—in 1904, when a strike intervened. The Directors have voted to continue the dividend another six months.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Two More High-Class Dwellings on Upper East Side Disposed Of—Builder Buys Dyckman Apartment House Site—Plan to Remodel Stern Brothers' Old Twenty-third Street Store — Bronx and Suburban Deals.

Two more private dwellings on the upper east side, where there has been marked activity in this class of realty during the past week, were disposed of to an investor yesterday.

The property sold consists of the two five-story American basement dwellings 136 and 138 East Seventy-first Street, occupying a plot 30 by 85.5, adjoining the southwest corner of Lexington Avenue. Title to the property, which is under lease for a year, is held by Frederick Winnap, the buyer being a client of Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company.

On Thursday Harris & Vaughn sold the two three-story dwellings 154 and 156 East Sixty-third Street to F. J. Sterner. The Henry C. Clark residence, at 38 East Sixty-eighth Street, was also sold on the same day.

Builder Buys Dyckman Site.

A builder has purchased from Walter S. Logan of Washington a plot, 50 by 100, on the west side of Sherman Avenue, 250 feet south of 207th Street.

The property, which adjoins the new Dyckman Theatre, will be improved at once with a five-story apartment house.

AERIAL RACE TODAY TO BE RECORD EVENT

Flying Boats to Compete with Landgoing Machines for First Time Here.

120 H. P. MOTOR TO BE USED

Eight Fliers Entered for Contest Over River and Bay—$2,000 in Prize Money.

Eight airmen are entered for a mixed aeroplane and flying boat race which will be held over an all-water course above the Hudson River and New York Bay this afternoon.

The race will be the first in this country in which engines have been powered above 100 horse power, and with flying boats competing with the lighter and, presumably swifter land-going machines. Airmen have been aroused to a keen interest in the race because some of the lighter monoplanes entered will carry only fifty horse power motors, while the Boland flying boat, to be piloted by Charles F. Niles, one of the contestants in THE TIMES Aerial Derby last October, will carry a motor of 120 horse power. The great range of power between these extremes marks a new advance in American aeroplane development so far as race meets are concerned.

The race will start from an imaginary line drawn between Governors Island and the Statue of Liberty. The aircraft will leave the starting line between 3 and 3:30 P. M., three being monoplanes, one a Curtiss hydro-aeroplane, and four flying boats.

The eight machines, according to the rules of the race, will proceed northward up the Hudson River, flying 500 feet out from the line of wharves at any height the aviators choose to take for considerations of safety and speed.

At Spuyten Duyvil, the northern turning point of the race, a pylon will be anchored aboard a river barge 500 feet out in the river. The aircraft will be required to turn to the left of this pylon, and then reverse their course down the Hudson River over the same route. The racers must continue on out over the bay, and through the Narrows to the yacht Sagamore, owned by Commodore J. Stewart Blackton, which will be anchored off the Atlantic Yacht Club's clubhouse at Sea Gate.

The finish line will be marked by a flag pole carrying the flag of the Aero Club of America, this pole to be placed in line with another on the pier of the Atlantic Yacht Club, carrying the yacht club's flag.

No Cutting of Corners.

The committee in charge of the race warned all contestants yesterday not to "cut corners," and to see that the rule was enforced announced that it would station an official observer at Fort Hamilton to take notes on all who might pass that way.

The contestants who have paid the entrance fee, and the machines they will fly are:

No.
1.—Albert S. Heinrich, 50 h. p. Heinrich monoplane.
2.—W. L. Bonney, 50 h. p. Caudron monoplane.
3.—Harold Kantner, 50 h. p. Schmidt monoplane.
4.—Haldeman von Figylmessy, 80 h. p. Curtiss hydro.
5.—J. B. R. Verplanck, 100 h. p. Curtiss flying boat.
6.—Frank Burnside, 90 h. p. Thomas flying boat.
7.—Charles F. Niles, 120 h. p. Boland flying boat.
8.—George von Utassy, 100 h. p. Curtiss flying boat.

If any aviator is dissatisfied with the ruling of the judges after the race he may make his protests either at the Atlantic Yacht Club or at Governors Island verbally, but the verbal protest must be followed by a written one mailed to the proper officials some time during the day.

In preparing for the prizes for the race there was some difficulty, as it was provided at first that if two land machines finshed before one flying boat or two flying boats finished before one land machine, the second one would be counted out. Thus it was planned to have the first and second prizes of $1,000 and $500 respectively go to the first machine to finish in each class. But so many protests to this plan were filed that the third prize of $350 was raised to $500 so that the second and third prizes would be on a par. To raise the third prize to the $500 mark $25 subscriptions were taken up among the entrants themselves and other airmen.

Flying Boats May Alight.

One feature of the race not permitted in any former contest will be that the flying boats will not be disqualified if they are forced to land on the water, provided they are able to rise again from the water. Such craft will be counted in at the finish, but they will be penalized sufficiently to allow any machines which finish the course without alighting to rank ahead of them.

In previous races the number of fliers actually starting has always been well below the number entered, and on account of the unusually small number of entrants in to-day's race a ruling was announced last night that the prizes would be awarded, no matter how many craft might start or finish. If any one of the entrants even passes the finish line, this man will receive the prize money.

The starting gun will be fired at 3 P. M. sharp, according to the present plan, and each flier will be expected to start promptly as his name is called. If any entrant fails to respond, the starter will call the next one, until all eight have been called. Then the tardy ones will get another chance to get away.

The public is asked to give an instant alarm provided any spectator sees a flier in trouble. The way to give the alarm will be to call up on the telephone 6,800 Broad, where a member of the Contest Committee will remain at the receiver to dispatch motor boats to any point where they may be needed. The Motor Boat Club of America has cooperated with the Aero Club, and is holding a number of motor boats in readiness to give first aid to crippled aircraft.

Pontoons on Aeroplanes.

There is no danger that any aviator will lose his life through drowning, as all of the aeroplanes have been equipped with pontoons to keep them afloat if they should alight or fall into the water. The advantage of the flying boats over the aeroplanes proper will be that if the flying boats touch the water they will be equipped to start again from the water while the propellers of the aeroplanes will be partially submerged and will be of no further use.

To prevent collisions aloft a ruling was made to the effect that any aircraft desiring to pass another must do so at a distance not less than 75 feet to one side or not less than 150 feet above the rival.

The officials in charge of the race include the following:

AT GOVERNORS ISLAND.

Responsible Steward—Alan R. Hawley, Chairman Contest Committee.
Official Starters—Roger D. Whitney, J. Parke Channing.
Timers—Capt. Charles A. Dieges, Capt. W. S. Conrow.

AT THE ATLANTIC YACHT CLUB.

Responsible Steward—J. Stuart Blackton.
Assistant Steward—William D. Cash.
Starter—W. I. Twombly.

AT THE STAKE BOAT AT SPUYTEN DUYVIL.

Responsible Steward—Frank T. Coffyn.
Assistant Steward—Dr. Jerome Kingsbury.

AT FORT HAMILTON.

Steward—Lieut. Leslie MacDull.

AT FORT WADSWORTH.

Steward—Lieut. Frank H. Phipps.

The race will be the chief aviation competition of the year, so far as the plans of the Aero Club of America are yet developed. Plans for a race to the Boston Light and back to the Statue of Liberty and for a race to Bermuda were discussed, but were abandoned when there was a prospect that all aviators would be called for service in Mexico.

CHANGES IN DAY'S PROGRAMME

No Concert in Colonial Park—Hope for a Fireless Fourth.

Minor changes in the programme for the Safe and Sane Fourth of July celebration throughout the city were announced last night. The celebration of the League of Foreign Born Citizens, which was to have been held at 8 P. M. at 46 East Third Street, will be held at 10 A. M. The change was made so that it would be possible for Mayor Mitchel to address the gathering. The celebration which was to have been held at Kessler's Theatre at 3 P. M. will be held at the same hour at the National Theatre, Second Avenue and East Houston Street.

Because of a hitch in the arrangements there will be no concert tonight in Colonial Park, 145th Street and Eighth Avenue. The concerts most convenient to the people of that neighborhood will be held in Mount Morris Park and Morningside Park.

Fire Commissioner Adamson hopes that for the first time it will be a fireless Fourth. In a statement issued yesterday he said:

"Tomorrow ought to be a fireless Fourth. We have had 'safe and sane Fourths 'for the past four years and we are now going to try and see if we cannot have a fireless Fourth. Not a single permit has been issued by this department for the display of fireworks on the Fourth and the only fireworks permit in existence in the entire city is an old one, first granted two or three years ago, for a display from a float anchored about 1,000 feet from land, opposite North Beach, L. I. I have received many requests for fireworks permits for the Fourth and many citizens have been to see me to get me to issue such permits, but I have felt that the policy which worked so well in past years in reducing fires, fatalities, and casualties should not be abandoned. We should rather take steps to make it more effective, which is being done.

"I have taken up the matter with Police Commissioner Woods and he is co-operating with this department fully. He informs me that the police will be instructed to enforce the ordinance against the discharge of fireworks tomorrow. Section 531 of the Revised Ordinances provides:

> No person shall fire, discharge, or set off in the City of New York any rocket, cracker, torpedo, squib, balloon, or other fireworks or anything containing any substance in a state of combustion, under the penalty of $5 for each offense.

"Police Commissioner Woods informs me that thois ordinance will be vigorously enforced.

"Every one knows that our hospital, fire, and morgue records reflect the good done by the sane Fourth. But the fire loss from fireworks has not been confined to the Fourth heretofore, but has been spread through the month of June. The steady reduction of fires in June is shown by these figures: June, 1912, 878 fires; June, 1913, 713; June, 1914, 688."

If the weather is inclement today the song rallies arranged by Henry T. Fleck of Hunter College, Chairman of the Music Committee of the Mayor's Committee on Celebration, will be given indoors. The changes will be from City Hall Park to the City Hall; Grant's Tomb to the Wadleigh High School, 114th and 115th Streets, west of Seventh Avenue; St. Mary's Park to Public School 37, 113 East Eighty-seventh Street; Crotona Park to Morris High School, 166th Street, Boston Road, and Jackson Avenue; St. James's Park to Public School 46, 196th Street, Bainbridge and Briggs Avenues; Flushing Library Square to Flushing High School, Sanford Avenue and Union Street, Flushing; Library Square, Richmond Hill, to Richmond Hill High School, Elm Street and Stewart Avenue.

BLAZE OF ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

Elaborate Illuminations for the Holiday Inspected.

New York is going to have 1,000,000 candle power electric celebration of the Fourth, 26,000 incandescent bulbs having been strung up by the New York Edison Co. through the trees of the parks, and on some of the notable public buildings and monuments. The contribution of the electric current for this display has been made for the last four years by the Edison Company, but this year the illuminations are on a scale surpassing those of all previous years.

In those places where folk-dancing and other programmes for entertainment have been scheduled there will be a special splurge of 2,000 to 5,000 candlepower bulbs—the largest ever manufactured. These will be used in Battery Park, Hudson Park, Abingdon Square, Washington Square Park, Morningside Park, playground at 101st Street, between Second and Third Avenues; John Jay Park, Ninety-seventh Street and Riverside Drive; Hamilton Fish Park, Columbus Park, Crotona Park, Claremont Park, and 163d Street and Highland Park, Boulevard.

The schedule for the colored illuminations is De Witt Clinton Park, Chelsea Park, Seward Park, Tompkins Park, Sailors and Soldiers' Monument, the Mall in Central Park, Washington Arch, Grant's Tomb, Amsterdam Avenue and 157th Street, St. Mary's, and St. James's Parks in the Bronx, the Bronx County Court House, Bronx Borough Hall, and City Hall, Manhattan.

The Edison Company has also contributed the wiring and lighting of the city buildings.

The Committee on Illuminations inspected all the points decorated with these electrical fire works last night. In the party were Arthur Williams, Chairman of the committee; J. W. Lieb, R. A. Carter, Alderman Henry H. Curran, Alderman James Hamilton, Alderman Cole, Alderman Kochendorfer, Alderman Nugent, Alderman Diemer, Alderman Delaney, Alderman Hennon, Albert E. Hull, Martin W. Littleton, Charles F. Lacombe, Joseph Honey, Dr. Edward W. Stitt and Mrs. Stitt, Dr. George F. Kunz and Mrs. Kunz, Prof. Henry T. Fleck, H. A. Sinclair, S. E. Kimball, Louis Annin Ames, Ralph Folks, E. B. Stott, Borough President Marks, James J. Munro, Albert Goldman, Walter Neumuller, Clarence Law, E. F. Tweedy, Cyril Nast, Harris Luscomb, Edward A. Norman, Arthur Miller, A. F. McKinnon, William Berri, and Borough President Lewis K. Pounds of Brooklyn.

BIG DAY AT TAMMANY HALL.

Fourth to be Celebrated with the Usual Patriotic Ceremonies.

Tammany Hall will celebrate as usual the Fourth at the old wigwam in Fourteenth Street. Tammany is the only organization in the country that has consistently, year after year, kept up the celebration of American independence. Notwithstanding the defeat Tammany suffered in the city election last Fall and the unfriendly atmosphere of the White House, the braves are cheered by the fact that five Democrats of national prominence have agreed to appear and address the meeting.

Charles F. Murphy has given orders that every district leader must not only attend, but must send a large delegation. Besides the usual feast of oratory, there will be a feast of more substantial things in the basement of the Hall throughout the day.

Grand Sachem John R. Voorhis will preside in a silk hat and full regalia. The Declaration of Independence will be read by Alphonse G. Koelble. Speeches will be made by James Hamilton Lewis, United States Senator for Illinois; Representative Henry D. Flood of Virginia, Samuel A. Witherspoon of Mississippi, Joe Henry Eagle of Texas, Henry Vollmer of Iowa, Michael F. Conray, Henry M. Goldforgle, John W. Keller, and Alexander I. Rorke. The Sixty-ninth Regiment Band will accompany the Tammany Glee Club for patriotic songs. Secretary Thomas F. Smith will read replies to invitations from Vice President Marshall, several Cabinet officers, Governors of States, Senators, and Congressmen.

MAY DELAY START OF OCEAN FLIER

New Attachments Not Working Well and Porte May Wait for August Full Moon.

NEW PLANING BOARDS TRIED

Not in Correct Position, and Workmen's Demand for a Holiday Delays a Change.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMMONDSPORT, July 3.—A score of workmen at the Curtiss factory, who have toiled over the America, Rodman Wanamaker's transatlantic flyer, sixteen or eighteen hours a day for several weeks past, struck yesterday for an Independence Day holiday tomorrow.

Mr. Curtiss was forced to grant it, although he has been attempting to hasten the completion of the America in order that it might be shipped from New York for Newfoundland on July 11. The loss of one day and the unsuccessful trial of new experimental hydroplane boards today caused Mr. Curtiss to say tonight that it was very doubtful whether the America could be made ready for shipment by July 11. It is probable now that the America will be shipped from New York on July 18.

In this case the America will not arrive at Newfoundland before July 24. Three days will be required to set it up and more time will be required in preliminary trials. It would be very nearly the end of July before the America could attempt its flight, and it is very likely that Lieut. Porte will wait for the full moon on Aug. 5 before starting.

Lieut. Porte wished in the first place to fly by moonlight in the early part of July. When this date had to be abandoned, he wished to make the flight in July, because during that month tropical storms are less frequent between the Azores and Spain than in August.

After his encouraging flight yesterday, when he rose from the water with a load of slightly more than 2,000 pounds with the help of hydroplaning surfaces constructed from the pontoons which were used in the recent launching of the old Langley machine, Mr. Curtiss today built hydroplane surfaces five feet wide on each side of the America.

George Hallett, who will be Lieut. Porte's assistant on the transatlantic flight, took the pilot's seat for the first time this evening and started off with a load of approximately a ton, which would be the equivalent of gasoline for a twenty-four-hour flight. As soon as the propellors of the America began to work, however, the hydroplaning surfaces, which were flat boards with no sloping covering to turn the water, became submerged, and the America plowed through the lake with water coming over its bows. The trial had to be abandoned, as it was nearly 8 o'clock before the hydroplane boards had been completed, and no time remained for changes.

The next attempt to fly the America will probably take place on Monday. The hydroplane boards, which were submerged today, will be moved forward and tried out in that position.

Lieut. John Cyril Porte made plans yesterday to leave this city today for Hammondsport after hearing of the successful flight of the America on Thursday, but he decided to postpone the trip until Sunday after receiving word that the trial yesterday had not been so successful. During the day Lieut. Porte purchased a kit of emergency surgical appliances for use in case of accident on the America.

Lieut. Porte's mail has been swelled recently by letters from manufacturers of food preparations who desire to supply the nourishment which the America will carry on its transatlantic flight. One man inclosed two letters which he asked Lieut. Porte kindly to carry across the ocean and deliver in London. One of the letters was addressed to the Royal Accident Board, and the writer informed Lieut. Porte that its delivery would be the fulfillment of a prophesy contained therein.

W. D. Walker, representing Rodman D. Wanamaker, sailed yesterday morning for St. John's, N. F., on the Red Cross steamer Stephano, and will remain there until the America starts on her flight. On his arrival, Mr. Walker said, he would be met by ex-Premier W. D. Reid of Newfoundland, who will assist him in locating a suitable inlet or bay along the Newfoundland coast for the America to start from.

EARLY CELEBRANTS HURT.

Five Go to Bellevue for Treatment for Wounds.

Of those persons who started to celebrate the Fourth of July a few hours ahead of time, five walked into Bellevue Hospital last night with injuries received in their hands through the explosion of blank cartridges. All were allowed to go home after treatment by Dr. Norris, who advised them to pay another visit to the hospital today for treatment.

The early celebrants were: Charles Smith, 25 years old, 310 East Twenty-fourth Street, puncture of right thumb; Mike Keller, 18, 243 West Twenty-sixth Street, powder burns of right hand; William Eisele, 14, 500 East Twelfth Thomas Shanley, 13, 313 East Twenty-sixth Street, burns of right hand, and Frank Bantzy, 16, 409 East Thirty-fourth Street, burns of left leg.

John Murray, 17 years old, of 410 West Fifty-sixth Street, was arrested last night for engaging in a preliminary celebration of the Fourth. Patrolman Foley of the West Forty-seventh Street Station charged that he had been discharging a revolver with blank cartridges at Tenth Avenue and Fifty-sixth Street. He said the boy had combined his celebration with a study of the effect of a revolver shot on passing dogs when discharged in close proximity to their person. Magistrate Ten Eyck held the prisoner guilty of disorderly conduct, and remanded him for sentence until July 6.

FIELDER NOT A SUFFRAGIST.

Tells Women's Political Union He Is Not in Sympathy with Movement.

In declining an invitation to speak at a suffrage meeting to be held on Sunday in Newark under the auspices of the Women's Political Union, Gov. Fielder wrote to Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle, President of the Political Union, that he was not interested in the suffrage movement. This is the Governor's letter:

> Mr. Dear Mrs. Van Winkle: Replying to your letter of yesterday, I beg to be permitted to decline your invitation to attend the meeting of the Women's Political Union on July 5. Sundays are really the only days I am not engaged in official and business duties, and I am endeavoring to keep them free for much-needed rest; but there is still a further reason, that I am not, as you know, in sympathy with your suffrage movement and could therefore not be interested in your meeting. Very truly yours. JAMES F. FIELDER.

Big Tree for Montclair Parade.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., July 3.—One of the novel features of the big parade in celebration of the Fourth of July here tomorrow will be a full-grown tree on a float. The tree will be taken from the forest and be prepared for transplanting. At the close of the parade the tree will be presented to the Montclair Shade Tree Commission, which will plant it in one of the streets of the town. The parade will be under the auspices of the Montclair Sons of the American Revolution.

IN NEW JERSEY.

NEWARK.—Pending an examination of his mental condition, Dominick Margula, who was arrested after he had forced his way into the home of Ernest Stremkel on Thursday, was held yesterday in $500 bail. The authorities think Margula is insane.

NEWARK.—Jacob Wald, 48 years old, proprietor of a cigar store in Harrison, committed suicide yesterday by taking carbolic acid in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles M. Schwartz, in this city.

PATERSON.—Isaac Niblo, a teamster, retiring Thursday night, flung his trousers over the gas jet, as was his custom. He did not see the trousers extinguish the flame, and this morning the boarding mistress broke open the door and found him dead.

MONTCLAIR.—Louis Singerbush, 30 years old, is in the Mountainside Hospital here, suffering from a fracture of the spine and is paralyzed below the waist. Singerbush was buried in a sand pit at Silver Lake yesterday.

RED BANK.—While heating water in her kitchen yesterday Mrs. John H. Whitmore, 84 years old, was so badly burned that Dr. William Sayre, who was called, did not think she would survive the night. Mr. Whitmore, who is 94 years old, was burned about the hands, and Miss Francis Chamberlain, a girl of 17, who helped put out the blazing clothing, was badly burned about the wrists and arms.

FRANKLIN.—Under Sheriff Albert T. Lyons went to Sandyston Township yesterday to arrest George Heye, who has been unearthing skeletons of Indians. The warrant charges the "desecration of graves, robbery, vandalism, and larceny." The law to protect cemeteries from ghouls has been invoked to prevent digging into the old Indian burying ground.

TRENTON.—To be held up on a railroad bridge over the Delaware River, beaten, robbed of his pay envelope containing $30, and then held at arms' length over the railing until he swore not to tell, was the experience of John Eluchi early yesterday. Eluchi told the police the name of the man he suspects.

CAMDEN.—Robert Caffey, 32 years old, died in Cooper's Hospital yesterday from three self-inflicted bullet wounds. Caffey said he shot himself because his wife wouldn't live with him.

"THE PERFECT BABY"

Twenty-eight months old, 35½ inches in height, and weighs 33 pounds 14 ounces.

JOHANNA WIGGERS is New York's "perfect baby." She was selected from one thousand little contestants during Baby Week by a committee of five physicians, selected as judges by the Babies' Welfare Committee, which organized the contest. The judges were Dr. Alfred Shipley of the Board of Health, Dr. Godfrey Pisek, and Dr. Roger Dennett of the Post-Graduate Hospital; Dr. Stafford McLane, assistant to Dr. Emmet Holt of the Babies' Hospital, and Dr. Miner C. Hill of the New York Milk Committee.

The selection of the "prize baby" was made according to the regulation "score card" of the American Medical Association, which allots sixty points on the child's physical examination, and forty to its history and mother's care. The Babies' Welfare Committee is the association of all the public and private agencies in the city that are at work to reduce infant mortality.

Johanna was declared 100 per cent. perfect and awarded the blue ribbon "Grand Prize of Greater New York" and a cash prize of $50.00.

To be eligible for this prize all of the babies had to win prizes during the past two years in Better Baby contests.

The prize baby is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Max Wiggers of 231 East Twenty-eighth Street. She was born while her mother was visiting in Berlin, and was brought to America when nine weeks old. Both her father and mother are of German descent.

Here are the measurements of the prize winner:

Weight, 33 pounds 14 ounces.
Height, 35½ inches.
Circumference of head, 19½ inches.
Circumference of chest, 20 inches.
Circumference of abdomen, 20 inches.
Depth of chest, 4½ inches.
Length of arm, 14½ inches.
Length of leg, 16½ inches.
Age, twenty-eight months.
She has gray eyes and yellow hair.

This picture, taken especially for The New York Times by Aime Dupont, shows "the perfect baby" in merry mood. The Times's new rotogravure process of printing, by which this reproduction of the photograph was made, has revolutionized printing of this kind. It is a combination of photogravure with etching.
